PRESIDENT PUTS GARMENT MILLS ON 36 HR. WEEK

NRA Enters on New Phase.

Green Re-elected

American Federation of Labor re-elects William Green as president; assails appointment of S. Clay Williams to new NRA board.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—The NRA held center stage in Washington today with these developments:

President Roosevelt, celebrating his 150th press conference since entering the White House, announced that workers in the cotton garment manufacturing industry would henceforth work a 36 hour week instead of a 40 hour week without any loss in total wages. Thus he adheres to his previous order, which had been attacked by leaders of the industry as ruinous.

S. Clay Williams, head of the new National Industrial Recovery board, held his first press conference and disclosed himself an easy-going, good natured southerner—he is a tobacco manufacturer from North Carolina. He indicated that the board will have little to do or say about policy making for the NRA.

Donald R. Richberg earlier had announced after a conference with the President that there will be no new "judicial" department of NRA; that enforcement of the codes will remain as now with NRA, the department of justice, and the federal trade commission. Mr. Williams acknowledged that he had no knowledge of this development and this seemed to establish Richberg definitly as the number one man and king policy maker at NRA.

Mr. Williams announced, in what was interpreted as a dig at the tactics of his predecessor, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, henceforth there will be no more of the spectacular, no more "glamor," in NRA administration. "It's just a plain workaday job, now," he opined.

Board Recommends Time Cut.

The President's order requiring the adoption of a 36 hour week in the cotton garment industry was made, he said, upon the recommendation of an "impartial" board he had appointed to study the problem after members of the authority protested that the drastic shortening of the work week would work havoc upon them. The order will take effect Dec. 1. A 10 per cent increase in the wage rate for piece work was also included in the order.

The committee also recommended, and the President approved, the appointment of a special committee to investigate competition in the industry from prison labor and "sheltered workshops."

The original committee, composed of William E. Hotchkiss, president of the Armour Institute of Technology; W. Jett Lauck, Washington labor lawyer, and Donald M. Nelson, official of Sears, Roebuck & Co., will also pursue an investigation into protests against the 36 hour week lodged by the makers of sheepskin-lined and lether garments.

Effect on Cost Belittled.

The White House announcement quoted as the opinion of the committee that "the increase in labor costs would not cause any great increase in the price of merchandise," and then naïvely added that the increase "would amount to no more than a 5 cent jump in the cost of a 49 cent work shirt." If the workman bought himself a $1 shirt he would be forced to pay 10 cents more for it.

The complaint of the garment manufacturers was that the shorter work week would raise prices so high as to cause a serious decrease in the consumption of cotton garments and thus bring about a decrease in employment rather than an increase.

The present order is believed to be a precursor to others in other industries. President Roosevelt refused today to discuss the demand for a 30 hour week registered at the convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Exciting Days Are Over.

2 CROATS ADMIT TERRORIST PLOT TO MURDER KING

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—A confession that he is one of five Jugo-Slavs who came to France from Hungary expressly to murder King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia was wrung this afternoon from Yaroslav Novak, alias Vronomir Pospisil. He was arrested yesterday with Vladislav Benes, alias Yvan Ratich, at Thonon les Bains, on the French side of Lake Geneva, as they were trying to leave France after the accomplishment of their job, though they were not obliged to take an active part in the assassinations at Marseilles Tuesday.

After 36 hours of almost unbroken questioning both men broke down before a detective who had sped from Belgrade to identify them and question them in their native tongue.

Tells Story of Plot.

From what Novak said the five Jugo-Slavs, who had been staying at a notorious refugee or terrorist camp in Hungary just over the border from Jugo-Slavia, intended to slay Alexander either at Marseilles or Paris.

Two of them went to Marseilles, where Petrus Kalemen assassinated Alexander and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France and wounded Gen. Georges, a member of the French superior war council. Kalemen's deed took a total of six lives. A policeman and two women died of wounds received in the wild shooting after the assassination, and Kalemen himself was then slain by police.

Two others went to Versailles to wait for instructions. The leader of the five, who is alleged to have received his orders directly from Dr. Ante Pavelich, head of the Croat nationalist movement, stayed in Paris.

Hunt Mystery Woman.

The whole story of the plot, which Novak said was laid in a Hungarian village, a fact that may cause Belgrade to protest to the league of nations, reads like a novel by an adventure writer with a flair for Balkan conspiracy.

There is even a beautiful mysterious woman in the case who is supposed to have smuggled in automatic pistols, which were really submachine guns, for the assassinations. Her name was given as Marie Vjudroch, 24, a Czech. Police are searching for her near Aix-en-Provence.

Benes, a typical intellectual fanatic with a broad brow, a weak chin and a twisted brain, broke down first. He admitted that his real name is Yvan Ratich, that he was born in Koledivetz, Jugo-Slavia, and that he is a Croat. He said he was in Brazil when the terrorist group asked him to join and that he went to Hungary to take lessons in terrorism in a camp at Yanta Pusta, which Hungary had promised the league of nations to clean up.

Second Suspect Talks.

Then Novak, who is a hulking bully brute of exceptional force—police are inclined to believe he was designed to be the actual murderer—saw the game was up and said:

"Well, I lost anyway, and I prefer to die in silence."

"That's better. That's the way I like to see you talk," said the Jugo-Slav detective. "You're really Vronomir Pospisil. You killed a newspaper man and then two policemen in Belgrade and escaped into Hungary. You might as well come clean."

Further questioning revealed that Pospisil, who is 30, is now under sentence of death. He was born in the Euokovana district of Jugo-Slavia and is also a Croat. He said that late last month a delegate came to Yanta Pusta to tell them that Alexander must be murdered. It is alleged that the delegate was acting for Pavelich, who is now believed to be in Italy. Four men were chosen, said Pospisil, including himself, Benes, and Petrus Kalemen. The fourth man is believed to have been Sylvester Chalny, who escaped into Fontainebleau forest yesterday while being questioned by the police.

Joined by Fifth Delegate.

They went to Switzerland, where another delegate joined them, and they received faked Czech passports from him in exchange for regular passports issued by Hungarian authorities. Then they entrained for Paris.

Pospisil said he knew Kalemen under the name of Rudolf Suk, who bore the passport of a Czech merchant. Whether the assassin's real name was Suk police are unable to decide, but they are sure it was not Kalemen, as his passport was forged and bore the

ENGLISH NOVELIST, BLIND 8 YEARS, GETS A NEW PAIR OF EYES

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—(AP)—One of surgery's most amazing triumphs over misfortune—restoration of sight to the blind—was demonstrated here when Dapne Muir, English novelist, completely blind for eight years, said she had been given "good, working eyesight."

Nine years ago Mrs. Muir lost her sight in an automobile accident. Since then she dictated five novels. While she was living in darkness, Tudor Thomas, Welsh eye specialist, carried on grafting operations with rabbits and dogs, restoring parts of damaged eyes. When he had shown success in restoring the sight of a blind dog, Thomas was ready to attempt a similar operation on a human being.

Parts of Mrs. Muir's eyes were removed last year and replaced by healthy tissue from other sources. The source of the eye tissue used by Thomas was not revealed. Montreal eye specialists explained, however, that parts of the eyes from animals are sometimes used, and sometimes the uninjured parts of blind eyes removed from human beings.

Mrs. Muir was accompanied here by Sir Harold Gillies, expert in reconstructive surgery, and Lady Gillies. Sir Harold will go later to Northwestern university, Chicago, to deliver the annual Mayo lecture.

SAN FRANCISCO DOCK WORKERS AWARDED RAISE

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's arbitration board tonight awarded the Pacific coast longshoremen, central group in last summer's bitterly fought strike, increased wages and shorter hours, but ruled they must share control of their hiring halls with their employers.

Unconditional control of the hiring halls or employment agencies through which the longshoremen are sent to jobs was the paramount demand of the union in the weeks of bloody struggle leading up to the spectacular mass walkout of labor in San Francisco last July.

The longshoremen had adamantly refused to arbitrate the hiring hall issue until after the end of the general strike.

Wages of 95 cents an hour, with $1.40 for overtime, and a 30 hour week were granted the longshoremen. They had asked $1 an hour and $1.50 for overtime, as well as the 30 hour week.

Hutchins May Leave U. of C. for NRA Job

Reports that Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, is to take a year's leave of absence from his duties and become a high official of the National Recovery administration are current in university circles.

Mr. Hutchins was requested last night, on his return to Chicago from Dubuque, Ia., where he attended a teachers' conference, to comment on the reports. He declined to confirm or deny them.

Has "No Appointment Now."

"If I am to be appointed to a position with the government," he said, "the announcement should come from Washington. I have no appointment now."

Donald Richberg, head of the NRA, could not be reached last night and other officials in Washington claimed to have no knowledge of a proposal that Mr. Hutchins join the administration as a full time executive. One guess hazarded was that he might be the new head of the national labor relations board, although it was a matter of doubt whether this job would be big enough to tempt the president of the University of Chicago. Lloyd Garrison, formerly in this post, has been called back to the University of Wisconsin, where he is dean of the law school.

Former NRA Labor Board Head.

Members of the board of trustees of the university followed Mr. Hutchins' lead in asserting that any information should come from Washington. It was indicated that the matter has not reached a stage of completed action.

Mr. Hutchins has been president of the university since 1929. He is 35 years old. A year ago he became connected with the NRA as chairman of the Chicago regional labor board.

On May 22, 1934, he announced his resignation from the regional board, pleading that he wished to spend the summer in Europe, and also that he needed time to prepare his report as head of the commission of inquiry on national policy in international economic relations.

Uses Auto to Save Farmer as Bull Tramples Him

An automobile saved Sterling Patterson, 46 years old, from an infuriated bull that attacked him yesterday on his farm in Wheatland township, southeast of Aurora. The animal, which Patterson was leading by a nose ring, knocked the farmer down and trampled him. Harry Panckie, a farmhand, climbed into Patterson's automobile and with it succeeded in driving the bull into an inclosure. Then he took Patterson to an Aurora hospital, where it was found several ribs had been fractured.

BOYS EXCAVATE FOR PREHISTORIC ANIMALS; LANDSLIDE KILLS ONE

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—A quest for boyhood adventure ended fatally for one of two scientific minded youngsters this afternoon. One of them, the 10 year old son of a Columbia university professor, met death under an avalanche of stones and top soil while they were excavating for "prehistoric animals" on a steep slope in Riverside park near 122d street.

Dexter Kitson, the only son of Dr. Harry Kitson, professor of education at Teachers' college, was buried by the landslide and pinned under the débris by a large bowlder.

His companion, Paul Culviner, was partly covered, but managed to extricate himself. He made a futile attempt to rescue his friend before rushing to the street for aid.

2 BROTHERS RISK LIVES TO RESCUE THIRD FROM FIRE

Two young brothers risked their lives yesterday to save a third brother from a fire which ended their holiday "Christopher Columbus" adventure in a near escape from death for the two and the probable death of the third brother.

The boys, Robert E. Trainor Jr., 10 years old, 243 West Garfield boulevard, and his brothers Raymond, 9 years old, and Richard, 7 years old, had started a bonfire on a vacant lot at 57th street and Stewart avenue. They added fuel until there was danger of the flames spreading and the boys set out in search of water. Robert found a can containing what he thought was water and poured the contents—naphtha—over the flames. An explosion followed and the boy, blinded, stumbled into the blaze. His younger brothers ran to his rescue and pulled him out, their own clothes being set afire.

Neighbors heard their cries and muffled the flames.

All three boys were taken to St. Bernard's hospital, where it was said that Robert probably will die of his burns. Richard and Raymond, although seriously burned, will recover, physicians said. A blood transfusion was ordered last night in hope of saving Robert's life.

Stoll Meets Last Demand in Kidnaping

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—The return of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, daughter of one of Kentucky's most prominent families, to her fashionable home from which she was kidnaped Wednesday afternoon, was expected hourly tonight after it was understood that her abductor's $50,000 ransom had been paid by her wealthy husband.

Meantime the fate of the well known society matron hung on the dubious worth of a kidnaper's promise of her safe return, supposedly made at the time the money was delivered to him or his representative.

All Requirements Met.

The announcement that all requirements in connection with the case had been met was made by the victim's distraught husband, Berry V. Stoll, oil executive, a few hours after he had taken a wild ride by automobile into central Kentucky.

Though his statement was devoid of details, it is presumed that Stoll's mad dash over cleared roads was for the purpose of meeting either the man who held his pretty 26 year old wife or an emissary of the kidnaper who slugged her and dragged her from her home while she was ill and alone with her maid.

Statement Issued.

A few hours after he returned to his home Stoll issued this statement:

"We have carefully followed instructions, met all ransom requirements, and are awaiting fulfilment of promises.

"BERRY V. STOLL."

The formal statement was the first intimation by its reference to "parties" that more than one person had been involved in the kidnaping of the former Bryn Mawr student and Junior leaguer, who is the daughter of William S. Speed, retired capitalist.

It was a lone man who entered the Stoll home on Lime Kiln lane in the exclusive Upper River road district on the pretense that he was a telephone repair man and took the slender sick woman away after binding her maid, Mrs. Ann Woolet.

Family Makes Pledge.

Throughout the brief but intensive search, which was featured by the assumption of control by the federal government and then the withdrawal of all officialdom so there would be no obstacle to contacts with the abductor, the wealthy and influential Speed and Stoll families repeatedly affirmed by radio and newspaper that they were eager to make terms and would comply with all demands.

The first manifestation to those outside the involved families that a contact had been made with the kidnaper came this morning when an automobile suddenly roared out of the driveway of the sixteen acre Stoll estate, which had been unguarded and deserted since the officers withdrew last night.

Berry Stoll, hatless and apparently under great nervous tension, and another man, supposedly a detective, were in the speedy roadster as it rushed south into Kentucky. Without slowing up for turns, hills, or close passings with other cars the Stoll car roared along a narrow, winding, irregular trail.

Speeds Through Towns.

At high speed the car swept through towns and villages almost at the machine's capacity speed. Warned of the frantic husband's errand, sheriffs cleared the way, barring side roads, halting trafic, and otherwise giving him an open path.

Observers were unable to keep track

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Two "victims" of the Insull crash took the witness stand in Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson's court yesterday afternoon, where Samuel Insull and sixteen others are on trial for defrauding the public through sale of stock of the Corporation Securities company in 1929.

A. R. HEBBELTHWAITE.

These witnesses, testifying for the government, disclosed the methods of Halsey, Stuart & Co. salesmen in disposing of the stock at the birth of this top investment trust of Insull companies.

F. Henry Kuhlman, wholesale cigar salesman from Cincinnati, said that he bought twenty units of Corporation Securities stock in October, 1929, for $1,500 from an agent of Halsey-Stuart in Cincinnati.

Listed as Favored Customer.

He was told, he said, "You are one of our favored customers and we are offering to a few select persons this stock at $74 a unit while the market price is $95." A unit was one share of preferred stock and one share of common.

After Kuhlman had signed up for ten units, he testified, the salesman talked him into taking 20 and added: "If you want 20, you'd better sign up for 100."

"What happened?" Kuhlman was asked.

"I got a telegram notifying me that my allotment was 100." he replied. He still has the 20, he said.

O. F. Fritz of Shawano, Wis., who is engaged in a men's furnishing store, said that he bought ten units in 1929 for $750. The salesman told him, he said, that the stock was worth four times that amount and that they were letting a few select customers in on the original issue.

Claim Assets of 80 Millions.

Assets of the Corporation Securities company were represented "in excess of 80 million dollars" by salesmen of Halsey-Stuart, according to other evidence presented by the government yesterday.

This was considered by the government prosecutors as an important point of their case, which is an effort to prove that this statement of assets was a misrepresentation, made up of inflated book values and cash that had not yet been received from the public.

It was the beginning of a line of evidence directed at oral salesmanship, consistent, it was stated, with the circulars put out by the selling agency for the Insull investment trust.

Former Manager Testifies.

The witness who gave this testimony was Arthur R. Hebbelthwaite, former Indianapolis manager of Halsey-Stuart and now in the private investment business. He quoted Daniel Upp, assistant manager of sales for Halsey-Stuart, as giving him this valuation of assets on Oct. 31, 1929.

The assets were enhanced even beyond this, according to Upp's statement at that time, as there was a temporarily rising market. This evidence was admitted only after arguments in objection had been made by the defense attorneys in the absence of the jury.

Conforms to Insull Ideas.

The $80,000,000 valuation is in line with the ideas that Samuel Insull himself had at that time, it was shown by another witness, Dr. Thomas W. Mitchell, economist for the federal trade commission, who was presented by the government earlier in the day.

Dr. Mitchell said he had supervision of the commission's investigation of Corporation Securities in 1933. He testified to a questionnaire which the trade commission had put to Halsey-Stuart and to which they had replied.

This was only after a special court ruling, for Dr. Mitchell explained that he was subject to a $5,000 fine and one year's imprisonment for giving out this confidential information except under a court ruling.

Stuart Statements Reported.

The questionnaire did not contain anything that has not already been adduced in this trial as to the organization of the Corporation Securities company, but a conversation with H. L. Stuart in October, 1933, brought out some interesting points. This conversation was in Mr. Stuart's office, Dr. Mitchell testified.

"I asked him," he said, "if the cumstances which led to the purchase of Middle West stock in June, 1928. Mr. Stuart said that Mr. Insull had come to him with the proposal to start a new investment company.

"Mr. Insull said there was a public demand for the securities and that Insull Utility Investments, Inc., wished to obtain a large block of Middle West stock as a nucleus for the new organization.

"Mr. Insull told Mr. Stuart that Middle West was worth $1,000 a share, though he did not wish to pay that. He commissioned Mr. Stuart to begin purchases for the purpose set forth and set $350 a share as the maximum price to be paid."

Dr. Mitchell related further details of this conversation, which referred to the methods of purchase. Mr. Stuart told him, he said, that he had begun purchases through Henry L. Doherty & Co. on the New York curb market. Asked why he had taken this course, Mr. Stuart replied that there was less likelihood of the plan leaking out.

Says Stuart Used Own Credit.

Mr. Stuart, according to this witness, used his own credit and his own money on these purchases, which aggregated 13 million dollars, but had an arrangement with Mr. Insull that if the proposed new company fell through Mr. Insull would pay his share of the cost of the purchase.

Dr. Mitchell said he asked Mr. Stuart at that time if he knew of the reconstruction of the security structure of Middle West Utilities and that Mr. Stuart had replied that he had no such knowledge.

Van Lamont, former assistant treasurer for Halsey-Stuart, who had been on the witness stand for the government since Tuesday afternoon, was permitted to go yesterday morning after cross examination defense by Attorneys Charles E. Lounsbury and Floyd E. Thompson.

In this effort it was developed through this witness that Halsey-Stuart had spent more than $7,000,000 in Corporation Securities organization in 1929, for which they were given 7,000 units of the new stock. This was interpreted as a new investment in the company instead of taking cash out of it. No salaries or commissions were paid Halsey-Stuart men for this work, it was stated.

Deny Falsifying Report.

Referring to the government point that the Corporation Securities management had to make eight versions of their first annual report before getting a satisfactory one, this witness was made to say that this was customary and that no false representations or figures were ever made by any of the defendants in this connection. It was also brought out that the Insulls took no cash, but made a reinvestment in Corporation Securities. The "write up" of millions of dollars on the books was explained as the difference between what the stock cost and its market value at the time of the stock sales. In connection with this a $34,000,000 "write-off" was recorded later in the year, when the market went down. The witness said there was a later appreciation of $9,000,000 in stock values but this was not entered at the time.

On redirect examination Leslie E. Salter, prosecutor, had Lamont admit that he had nothing to do with the policy of the Corporation Securities and had merely followed orders, that he did not qualify as an expert on investment trusts and had merely heard it discussed that such trusts never produced their portfolios of investment.

"A Theory of Bookkeeping."

He admitted that the first draft of the annual report showed a loss, and in the final draft this was charged to capital surplus, under a "theory of bookkeeping."

With this inkling of conflicting theories of bookkeeping, the jurors next were introduced into methods of salesmanship in the launching of a new investment trust. This was very dignified at first, it was shown, "invitations" being sent out to a selected list of subscribers permitted them to subscribe for a limited amount of the new stock before a certain date. The whole tone of the letters was that this was a good thing that they were being let in on.

Later methods were more direct, it developed, a "school of salesmanship" being organized.

P. E. Lahman, former sales manager of the Halsey-Stuart office at Cincinnati, testified to instructions given him by the Chicago office on selling of the units of the Corporation Securities company. He said he was advised to send a list of persons who would be prospective customers for the issue of stock.

Court was adjourned soon afterward until 9:30 a. m. today. In view of the mass of evidence to be presented by both sides an earlier decision to hold no Saturday sessions was changed. Court will adjourn for the week-end at noon.

Samuel Insull Jr. was absent from yesterday afternoon's session, having been given permission to remain at his home for treatment of a cold.

Panel Discharged After 18 Hour Argument.

After eighteen hours of deliberation a jury last evening in Judge Walter La Buy's Criminal court reported it was useless to debate further on the fate of Leonard Rollnick, alleged bucket shop operator, and six co-defendants. The jury was discharged and a mistrial declared. The men are charged with conspiracy to defraud investors of more than $1,000,000 by means of bucket shop operations.

State's Attorney Courtney declared the disagreement was a victory for the state in view of the fact that Judge La Buy had barred from the trial the evidence which the prosecution characterized as "the heart of the state's case." The case was transferred to Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court for reassignment, which means that the next trial will take place before another judge.

Courtney to Press Case.

"The prosecution in this case will be pressed with all the vigor of my office," said Mr. Courtney when told of the disagreement.

Judge La Buy over the vigorous protest of the state ruled that the books and records of Crowley-Doherty & Co., a brokerage concern, should not be introduced as evidence. It was this concern through which, it is charged, the defendants "rigged" the market. It was charged by the state that with a small handful of stock certificates the defendants manipulated the market as they desired, either to facilitate a selling campaign or to freeze out the victims who had purchased stock on margin. The judge based his ruling on testimony that the records of Crowley-Doherty & Co. were not "true and correct."

Deliberate for 18 Hours.

The defense put in no evidence when the state closed its case Thursday evening. Assistant State's Attorney Robert Wright, who was in charge of the prosecution, was home in bed threatened with pneumonia at this stage of the trial. His assistant, Vernon Thompson, was handling the prosecution. Mr. Wright, however, left his sick bed in disregard of his physician's orders, to make a closing argument.

The case was given to the jury at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

Before discharging the jurors last evening Judge La Buy told them he was "sorry they could not agree one way or another" in view of the fact the trial took three weeks. The jurors stood 9 to 3 for acquittal, it was reported.

The other defendants beside Rollnick are Ben Reuben, P. J. Greene, Barney Lavin, Ernest Wahl Simon, G. William Herbst, and Albert K. Sherman.

DIES OF INJURIES IN FALL.

Mrs. Regina Steuber, 78 years old, 2037 Berwyn avenue, died in the County hospital yesterday of injuries she received in a fall on Sept. 3.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S PRISONER SURELY DEMANDS SERVICE

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—A man who gave the name of Frank Kent, 26, Brooklyn, N. Y., and his occupation as tap dancer, today was arrested on a Green Bay bound train of the North Western road by Lieut. Gov. Thomas J. O'Malley, who follows his occupation of conductor in conjunction with his state position.

Turning his prisoner over to the police here, the lieutenant governor said Kent had created a disturbance on the train and broke four windows when an effort was made to quiet him. He was booked on a charge of drunk and disorderly. The lieutenant governor said he will return tomorrow from his run and appear in District court against Kent.

Lodged in a cell at the central police station, Kent immediately began to demand service, police said. He made vigorous protest when police refused to accept the $15 in cash he had in lieu of the usual $40 bail set for the offense charged against him.

The usual jail fare of sausage, bread and black coffee also proved objectionable to him. He demanded free newspapers, Jailer Maurice Bernier said, declaring "I want service, because they'll probably assess me plenty for it in the morning."

The jailer called a halt when Kent requested a radio in his cell so he could go through his daily tap dance practice.

SWINDLE SUSPECT CAPTURED AFTER FIVE YEAR SEARCH

A five year search for Herman Skolnik, alias John Bowman, 30 years old, 1502 South Albany avenue, wanted in at least three states on swindling charges, ended here yesterday. Skolnik was arrested by Detective John Murphy and his squad in the office of Sol Rosenthal and Joseph Kulp, 109 North Dearborn street. With him was his blind uncle, Moses Schoenberger, 51 years old, once arrested on a charge of swindling a Plymouth, Ind., farmer of $2,500.

"I don't know why I'm arrested," Skolnik said from his cell at the detective bureau. "Rosenthal and Kulp say I gave them some 'hot' bonds, but that's a surprise to me. I'm a first rate iron and steel salesman."

But Detective Murphy gave a different account. "Skolnik has been sought here and in New York and Indiana since 1929," he said, "for defrauding several people out of $50,000 by persuading them to surrender bonds on the false promise that he would return better ones at a later dates. He is wanted in New York for grand larceny and he is under indictment in Knox City, Ind., for larceny and receiving stolen property."

PLAN $500,000 CAFE, NIGHT CLUB ON MICHIGAN AVE.

Seek to Lease Kirk Site at Bridge.

BY AL CHASE.

Negotiations are under way for the erection of an elaborate restaurant and night club, involving an expenditure of well over half a million dollars, on the former site of the Kirk soap factory, at the north end of the Michigan avenue bridge. Plans for a two story structure covering the entire 47,000 square feet now used for a parking station have been drawn by Daniel H. Burnham, the architect, who is promoting the project.

Use of the river front, with open air terraces for dining during the summer months and docks for speedboats, is being considered.

Several Restaurants Planned.

A large stage is proposed, at the northeast corner of the structure, and there will be considerable space devoted to dancing. The plans call for several restaurants opening on Michigan avenue for daytime patrons. Although the equivalent of two stories in height, the restaurants will have high ceilings and there will be only one floor level.

Negotiations were started six months ago with Albert H. Wetten & Co., agents of the property, which is owned by members of the Kirk family. D. H. Burnham secured an option to lease it. Sixty days ago the option expired and has not been renewed, but it was learned last night that, despite this, the project is closer to a realization than it has been at any time.

Wetten & Co. were reticent about discussing the project. Efforts to reach Mr. Burnham last night were unavailing. It is known, however, that the Burnham syndicate has raised most of the cash necessary to finance the project.

Propose 25 Year Lease.

The syndicate plans to lease the property for 25 years or less, at a rental considerably below that asked by the Kirks for a 99 year lease, and at the end of the term turn the building over to the owners.

It also was learned yesterday that active negotiations are under way with the Kirks by another Chicago group to lease the 4,400 square feet comprising the triangle between Tribune Tower and the Kirk property and erect a two story building to be used primarily for advertising purposes. This small triangle, which has only 44 feet frontage on Michigan avenue, now is occupied by a replica of a ballroom with automaton dancing figures.

It is known that the Kirk interests do not care to close any deal for permanent use of this property until the larger parcel, formerly occupied by the soap factory, is utilized.

5 PERSONS HURT IN COLLISION; 2 NEAR DEATH

Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Five persons, one of them a woman prisoner being taken to the Wisconsin industrial home and prison for women at Taycheedah were seriously injured today in a collision of an automobile and a truck at a highway intersection in Rosendale, near here. Two likely will die.

Mrs. Elizabeth Backmeier, Eau Claire, under commitment to the women's prison has both hips broken and internal injuries.

The others who were hurt are A. L. Hutchinson, Eau Claire county undersheriff and driver of the car in which the woman prisoner was being taken to Taycheedah, lacerations and shock; Mrs. A. L. Hutchinson, internal injuries; Mrs. Elmer Iverson, Eau Claire, guest in the Hutchinson car, internal injuries.

All of the victims were brought to St. Agnes hospital here in a police ambulance and two private ambulances.

ROOSEVELT LEAVES FOR WEEK-END TRIP ON CHESAPEAKE BAY

It was cold and the bay was rough as the President and his party boarded the yacht from the Santee dock at the Naval academy.

Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the academy, welcomed the President, with whom were Secretary Morgenthau, Gov. George L. Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve bank, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, and Capt. Wilson Brown, naval aide.

Preceded by two motorcycle policemen, the automobiles bearing the presidential party entered the main gate of the Naval academy. There was a brief pause for greetings from Admiral Sellers and his aides, then the party proceeded to the dock and boarded the Sequoia.

BARNES ASSAILS HIGH LEGAL FEES IN BANKRUPTCIES

Asset Absorption Hit by U. S. Judge.

Sharp criticism of the absorption of assets of small bankrupt concerns through heavy legal fees was voiced yesterday by Federal Judge John P. Barnes in a memorandum opinion disapproving in part the report of Garfield Charles, referee in bankruptcy, in the case of the Bingo Novelty Manufacturing company of 2240 Ogden avenue.

The company, which made toys, was thrown into receivership in June, 1933, and was declared bankrupt by Judge Barnes two months later. Sam Howard was appointed receiver and later was named trustee in bankruptcy.

Fee Cut; "Still Excessive."

The petition for bankruptcy listed the concern's assets at $18,456 and liabilities at $19,265. After the property had been appraised it was sold for a net of $2,011.56. Claims for fees filed reached a total of $1,366.03. Referee Charles reduced these fees to $773.59 in his report, but Judge Barnes indicated he considered this still was excessive.

That part of the report which the judge disapproved related to the fees charged by Howard, as receiver and as trustee, by his attorney, Archie Schimberg; by Louis I. Kessler, counsel for the petitioning creditors, and by Hershenhorn & Hershenhorn, attorney for the bankrupt.

"Some Erroneous Impressions."

"There seem to be some erroneous impressions prevailing, among which are the following," Judge Barnes said in the opinion. "First, that the courts are required to pay the maximum of commissions provided by statute to the receiver and trustee; that every receiver and every trustee should have an attorney; that where all services are performed by the attorney, the receiver or trustee may have maximum fees provided by statute, and that the attorney may have in addition a fee several times the maximum fee provided for the receiver or trustee; where the estate is small, that the assets should be distributed among receiver, trustee, receiver's attorney, trustee's attorney, petitioning creditors' and bankrupt's attorneys.

New Rules of Court.

"The new rules of this court provide that where the referee shall recommend an allowance to counsel for a receiver or trustee which exceeds twice the receiver's or trustee's compensation, the referee shall state special reasons therefor in his report.

"The court fears that all the foregoing erroneous impressions have been given effect in this case, and the report of the referee is disapproved so far as it relates to fees for receiver, trustee, trustee's attorney, petitioning creditors' attorneys, and bankrupt's attorney. The referee is instructed to review the claims in the light of what is stated above and make a further report with all convenient speed."

CHURCH TO MARK CENTENARY WITH DRAMATIC RITES

St. James' Will Honor Memory of Founder.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

St. James' Episcopal church, Wabash avenue and Huron street, tomorrow morning will recall that just 100 years ago the Rev. Isaac Hallam preached Chicago's first Episcopalian sermon. Plans for the observance have been realistically drawn by the St. James' centennial committee which is led by Joseph T. Ryerson, senior warden of the parish, and Dr. Duncan H. Browne, the 11th and present successor of Dr. Hallam.

The Rev. Dr. Hallam, in the spirit of missionary adventure, resigned the already old and influential St. James' church in New London, Conn., to push his way westward toward the swampy wilderness of the early village, Chicago, to plant the Episcopal church there. He named Chicago's first Episcopal church, St. James, after the parish he had left in the east.

Link East to West.

Tomorrow the historical connection between the St. James of New London and the St. James of Chicago will be dramatized when a successor in Dr. Hallam's eastern parish will deliver the centennial sermon here.

He is the Rev. Philip M. Kerridge. His parish includes some of America's notable families.

Tomorrow's observance will contrast vividly both the Chicago and the St. James of today with those of a century ago when, on Oct. 19, 1834, Dr. Hallam entered the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church, Clark and Lake street, and preached to the dozen Episcopalians and their well wishers, a total congregation, it is said, of 40 or 50 persons. Dr. Kerridge's congregation tomorrow is expected to overflow the famous church on the near north side.

Credit Woman's Tenacity.

Mr. Ryerson, in a historical sketch of St. James which has been published in the current Diocese, local Episcopal journal, stated that the founding of both the parish of St. James and the Episcopal church in the Chicago area, resulted from "the tenacity and aggressiveness of a woman—Mrs. John H. Kinzie. Mrs. Kinzie bombarded church leaders in the east with letters about the need of an Episcopal church in Chicago until the Rev. Isaac Hallam was appointed missionary to the village."

Tomorrow will inaugurate a series of centennial musical programs at the vesper hour of 4:30 p. m. Dr. Clarence Dickinson, organist and musical director at Brick Presbyterian church, New York, will be the special guest tomorrow. Dr. Dickinson was organist at St. James from 1903 to 1909.

President Roosevelt sent the parish a letter of congratulation, made public yesterday by Mr. Ryerson.

10 INJURED IN RIOTING AGAINST MEXICAN REGIME

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Outbursts of anti-government rioting resulted in injuries to ten persons today. Police engaged in brushes with students and Catholic demonstrators on several downtown streets.

Women members of the Parents' associations started the demonstrations in protest against the government's plan to implant socialistic education in all state schools. They were joined in the Plaza de la Constitution, in front of the National palace and the cathedral, by students and some workers.

Police first tried pacific means to stop the demonstrations, for which no permits had been issued. The officers later fired their pistols into the air, tossed gas bombs and used streams of water to disperse the crowds. Three policemen were hit by stones. It was feared that one of them was blinded permanently.

Telephone company officials said yesterday that with legal obstacles out of the way 5,000 checks will go into the mail Monday as first payments of the $20,700,000 refund to phone subscribers, which was ordered by the United States Supreme court. The checks have not yet been printed and the names of the first 5,000 beneficiaries are not yet known, said John L. Spellman, public relations director of the company, but all is expected to be in readiness Monday.

So far the payments have been computed against telephone numbers on the coin box service that was in effect between Oct. 1, 1923, and June 4, 1934. The last work will be that of supplying names for the accounts, typing them on the checks and inclosing them in envelopes. The last known address will be used, and if the postal service is unable to find the person the envelope will be returned and held for later disposal.

Each Check to Carry Record.

According to Attorney Leslie N. Jones and Mr. Spellman, the check—they call it a draft—will contain the bookkeeping record. Each check will list the amount of overpayments, the accrued interest, and the deduction payable to Attorneys Benjamin F. Goldstein, George I. Haight, and Edmund D. Adcock, who won the long phone rate litigation for the city.

Simple interest at 5 per cent will be computed on each month's overpayment by the subscriber, so that the accruals will range downward from 54 per cent and will average 25 per cent. Of the total of each check 7½ per cent will go to Attorneys Goldstein, Haight, and Adcock, who acted as special counsel for the city, taking the rate case to the United States Supreme court twice at their own expense and on a contingent basis.

In all there are to be 1,175,000 checks, with 1,000,000 of them for less than $25, 160,000 from $25 to $100, and 15,000 over $100. Those who will get the refunds are persons who had two or four party coin box residence service on one or two party business coin box service during the period of the litigation (1923-1934). The amount of their refunds, minus interest, will be approximately 15 per cent of their payments during that period.

Culminates Eleven Year Litigation.

The checks will be readily cashable, officials said. They will be of special design, precautions being taken against counterfeits or forgeries. A statement by the company will accompany each check.

The payments will be the culmination of eleven years of litigation. The Illinois commerce commission ordered a rate reduction on the four classes of coin box service in 1923. The company gained a federal injunction against enforcement of the rate, setting aside, however, the difference collected between the enjoined rate and the rate in effect. Last May the United States Supreme court set aside the injunction, ordered the reduction into immediate effect, and the return to the subscribers of the excess collections.

The principal difference in the rates is that calls over the guaranteed number are to be charged for at a rate of 4 cents instead of 5 cents, and the monthly guarantee is less. It is mainly that extra 1 cent a call that now amounts to $20,700,000, and which the public is to get back, starting Monday. The company then expects to send out an additional 5,000 checks a day, five days a week.

Daiches Murder Inquest Closed; Slayers Unknown

Eli Daiches, advertising executive, who was shot to death by assassins March 3, was "murdered by persons unknown," a coroner's jury decided yesterday at the county morgue in the last session of a long postponed inquest. The jury, under the direction of Deputy Coroner James J. Whalen, recommended that the police continue their search for the slayers. Daiches was killed as he was riding in his automobile at 53d street and the outer drive.

DADDY BROWNING, SYMBOL OF MAD DECADE, IS DEAD

Actions Reflect Love of Publicity.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—With only a nurse standing at his bedside, Edward West [Daddy] Browning, the wealthy real estate operator about whose eccentricities millions displayed an unhealthy curiosity in the frantic decade of the 1920s, died in his private hospital at Scarsdale after a long illness. He would have been 60 years old on Sunday.

The cause of death was defined as heart disease complicated by uremia, following a severe cerebral hemorrhage with which Browning was stricken last June 23. Confined to his bed since, Browning slipped into a coma last night and died at 10 o'clock this morning. Not even the attending physician, Dr. J. B. Weighart, was present.

Of the many women who figured in his life only one, Dorothy [Sunshine] Browning Hood, an adopted daughter who still calls him "the best daddy in all the world," visited him during his last illness.

Passing of Mad Era.

His death marks the passing of a mad era in modern history. Browning was a creature of the hysterical tabloidism of that period. His insatiable lust for publicity, his grotesque adventures with Frances [Peaches] Heenan, who was first an adopted daughter and then his bride, the sensational court hearings which followed most of his romances, all combined to bring him to the fore as the buffoon of a nation.

The white-haired millionaire reveled in the glare of the limelight. He was proud of his nicknames, "Daddy" and "Bunny," which were attached to him.

At the height of his fame he received more than 3,000,000 letters from marriageable and adoptable girls and young women. He saved every one of the letters and built a room in his elaborate Broadway offices in which to store them.

Shrewd Realty Dealer.

Before this strange yearning for publicity came upon him as he neared the age of 50 Browning had proved himself a shrewd real estate dealer and had amassed a fortune estimated at several millions.

He was born Oct. 14, 1874, in New York City. He entered early into his father's real estate business and, enlarged the fortune which he inherited.

He was in his late forties when, seemingly over night, he was seized by an obsession for publicity. He had been married in 1915 to a pretty file clerk in his office but Mrs. Browning eloped in 1924 with a dentist to Paris. Browning divorced her.

Offers to Adopt Child.

A year later there appeared in a New York morning newspaper an advertisment reading: "Adoption—Pretty, refined girl, about 14 years old, wanted by aristocratic family of large wealth and the highest standing. Address Elite."

An avalanche of applicants swarmed to the Browning residence when the identity of "Elite" was disclosed.

As the weeks passed by the tabloids scented the sensational possibilities of this voluble, erratic man with protruding eyes and high pitched feminine voice. When he finally selected Mary Louise Spas, a plump young Czechoslovak, as his choice, Browning was already known as "The Cinderella Man."

Deceived as to Age.

Mary Louise duly became a Browning. She had given her age as 16, but a letter from a sweetheart, opened by Browning, revealed that her age was 21. She was made to sign a paper releasing Browning from all claims and fled back to her mother.

But Browning's interest had been aroused in 1926 by one Frances Heenan, who was to become immortalized as "Peaches" Browning. With cameramen and reporters trailing him wherever he went, Browning conducted his courtship of "Peaches" who was also young and plump. They were married amidst a mighty fanfare and the honeymoon began.

Almost immediately the new Mrs. Browning left her husband and told sensational stories about their married life to the newspapers.

Browning Wins Separation.

In a legal contest that lasted months, featured by stories of an "African honking gander" and ludicrous bedroom antics, Browning finally won a separation.

Perhaps the climax of Browning's career came in 1928, when, accumulating thousands of cheap trinkets in his real estate office, he invited all children to visit him there for Christmas presents. They came, 35,000 of them.

With the financial collapse in 1929, Browning's publicity bubble also burst. The fickle public tired of him. In August, 1933, he donated a silver cup for a bathing beauty contest at Coney Island and was jeered by an audience as he attempted to select the winners.

In a desperate last attempt to stir up interest in himself he notified newspapers that he would no longer pose for photographers. And nobody cared.

PROSECUTOR POINTS TO FOLLY OF CRIME IN ADDRESS TO BOYS

3 LITTLE BOYS ADMIT SLAYING OF A PLAYMATE

He Strangles in Game of "Cops and Robbers."

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 12.—(AP)—A game of "cops and robbers," favorite pastime of youngsters in city and country alike, ended in a real police station today with three boys—two of them 6 years old and the other only 4—admitting to authorities they were responsible for the death of their best pal.

The story of the game was told only a few hours after the body of 7 year old John Feeney Jr. of Bayonne, was found crammed into an old trunk in a squatter's shack near the bed of the abandoned Morris canal.

A rope was around the boy's neck. An autopsy showed death had been caused by strangulation.

Question His Playmates.

Expressing belief the lad might have been killed accidentally by his chums during a game, police rounded up John's known companions. Their opinion was borne out this afternoon when three youngsters, one of them John's 4 year old brother, James, tearfully told Chief Daniel Casey they had put the rope around John's neck and had closed down the lid of the trunk.

The police sent the boys home and said they would not be "prosecuted." "What's the use?" said one official. "They're only babies."

Asked why they hadn't told any one, one of the lads said he "was afraid I'd get licked."

Eating candy and drinking milk during the questioning by police, the boys said they were playing in the neighborhood of the old shack yesterday. John was the "cop" in their game and they all were "robbers." With little James were Andrew Orbin, 6, and John Brush, 6, both of Bayonne.

Tire of Game.

They finally took John captive and tied him securely with rope they found in the shack. It was great fun, they told Chief Casey, but the game eventually became boring and they decided to go home.

When they cut the rope around John's legs and arms, and told John to "come on home" they received no answer. They were scared and their fright grew when John toppled over, falling into the open trunk. One of the boys closed down the lid and the three went home, saying nothing about John.

John Feeney Sr., the boy's father, and others searched the dumps last night without success before he notified police the lad was missing. It was not until this morning that the body was found. Immediately afterward Chief Casey ordered 100 men into the investigation.

Show How It Was Done.

The three boys who admitted their part in the tragedy reenacted the affair in police headquarters, using the same rope which killed their chum and the trunk in which the body was found, police said.

Capt. Fred Drewen took the part of the dead boy and submitted to being tied up. Other officers went to his aid when one of the lads put the noose around his neck and yanked the rope so hard Drewen started to choke.

Jail Breaking Contagious in Indiana; Horses Try It

Michigan City, Ind., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—And now horses are trying to escape from Indiana penal institutions. Today a span of horses being worked on the Niermer prison honor farm six miles south of here ran away from the driver. Before the horses were recaptured a report reached the state prison that prisoners had escaped again. Investigation disclosed the horses, and not the prisoners, were trying to escape.

AUTO THEFTS HIT A NEW LOW; MORE POLICE AID ASKED

Laxity Charged in 11 Districts.

A new low score for automobile thefts in Chicago went into the record yesterday as State's Attorney Courtney announced that Thursday's total of 18 stolen cars was the smallest number of thefts here in one day since the automobile came into common use. At the same time Mr. Courtney demanded more coöperation from eleven police districts in the drive begun by his office early in the year.

Six months ago, Mr. Courtney said, an average of 36 cars were stolen daily in Chicago. For the decrease to Thursday's level he gave credit to the automobile bureau of state's attorney's police and city police of some districts.

Asks More Coöperation.

"If I had the full coöperation of all districts there would be still fewer thefts," Mr. Courtney said. "Eleven districts are lagging behind in the drive, and I am going to talk things over with their captains. Eighteen thefts is a low record, but it's not low enough."

Districts named by Courtney were Hyde Park, Englewood, Fillmore, Albany Park, Town Hall, Woodlawn, Austin, New City, Shakespeare, East Chicago, and Summerdale. Capt. Andrew Barry was partly excused by Mr. Courtney, he said, since he had just returned from vacation.

Captains Make Explanations.

Captains of these districts who could be reached yesterday all declared they were coöperating in the drive. Capts. Michael Tobin of Englewood and Albert Mikes of Fillmore police attributed their difficulties to the size of their districts, while O'Connell of Town Hall and Mikes also complained of cars left out at night.

Capts. Lynch of Woodlawn and Hogan of Hyde Park charged careless World's Fair visitors from other cities with tempting car thieves. Acting Captain McGinnis of New City police said his men were trying to better their record.

BOYS USED AS "DUPES"

State's Attorney Courtney alluded to the decrease in automobile thefts when he spoke last night before the Boys' Brotherhood Republic, self-governing boys' club, at 1530 South Hamlin avenue.

"Our investigations show that 90 per cent of the cars are stolen by boys in their teens or early 20's," he said. "But the big profit is made by the crooked fences who use the boys as dupes. Those who actually steal the cars get very little out of it. Sooner or later they come to the Criminal Courts building and it is our duty to send them to the penitentiary."

Mayor Kelly, addressing the boys, said he was gratified by the earnest attitude toward municipal government as displayed by members of the club and pointed out the similarity of the club's work and the administration of a city's affairs.

The two public officials spoke in a placard bedecked gymnasium, where the campaigns for offices in the club—ranging from mayor to city clerk—were wound up last night in a flurry of oratory. The election will be held tonight.

5 RAIL EMPLOYES POISONED BY CAKE EATEN AT LUNCH

Five persons employed in the Chicago and North Western railroad repair shops at Crawford avenue and Kinzie street were under treatment for food poisoning last night at the Garfield Park hospital. All, it was said, were on the way to recovery.

The five ate their lunch together in the office at noon yesterday. Physicians at the hospital learned that only one food item, a sponge cake, had been eaten by all, an it was assumed that this contained the poisonous substance.

Those who became ill are George E. Collins, 59 years old, 714 North 6th avenue, Maywood, shop superintendent; Samuel J. Shaw, 50 yeads old, 114 Berteau avenue, Elmhurst, foreman; Roy Edgren, 31 years old, 1043 North Mayfield avenue; Miss Grace Seeman, 45 years old, 418 North 1st avenue, Maywood, and Joy W. Shroll, 45 years old, 291 Clinton avenue, Elmhurst.

Court to Receive Portrait of Ex-Governor Dunne, 81

A portrait of former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, who is now United States commissioner at the World's Fair, will be presented to the Circuit court at a ceremony today in recognition of the veteran attorney's 81st birthday. Mr. Dunne served on the Circuit court bench for thirteen years, was elected mayor of Chicago in 1905 and was governor of Illinois from 1913 to 1917. The portrait, the work of Mrs. Paul Godehn, a Chicago artist, is the gift of 100 of Mr. Dunne's lawyer friends.

Too Old at 88, He Says; Shoots Himself to Death

Constante Simone, 88 years old, shot and fatally wounded himself yesterday at the home of his nephew, Edward Hass, 612 Rural street, Aurora. Immediately after the shooting Simone told the nephew he felt he had lived too long. He died in St. Charles hospital, Aurora.

NEWSPAPER COUNSEL WARNS PUBLISHERS OF PRESS CENSORSHIP

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Elisha Hanson, Washington attorney and counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers' association, in an address here tonight said the freedom of the press was in peril.

"There is today," Mr. Hanson said, "great danger that unless publishers are alert and vigilant your only news about Washington will be just that news which the administration wants you to have, supplied to you by official agencies charged with the responsibility of bottling up all sources and preventing the dissemination of any information other than that officially sponsored.

"Publishers are now cognizant of the efforts to control our news by indirection, instead of by the direction of the censors. And if they meet their responsibilities the citizens of the country in the future will get, as they have in the past, news and not propaganda.

"Wherever you find a despot or a dictator in power, there you will find a servile, suppliant, and controled press. There cannot be a democracy without a free press. And there cannot be human liberty where censorship and propaganda go hand in hand."

400 New Dealers Speed to New York to Register

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—More than 400 New York Democrats attached to the national administration came to the city tonight by special train from Washington to register for the November election. The party included twelve of the White House staf as well as scores of men and women from various other departments in the national capital.

NATURAL CAUSE IN BOY'S DEATH.

A verdict of death from natural causes was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday at the inquest into the death of Rudolph Brendel Jr., 9 years old, 2139 Churchill street, on Sept. 27, at first believed due to food poisoning. The family is on the relief rolls.

The business man who wishes to convince the world that prosperity is just around the corner and no fooling, will outfit himself this winter in a spick and span suit of cheerful color. So spoke Chicago tailors who modeled their own designed fashions yesterday for 200 visiting tailors attending the style show presented by the Chicago Cutters' club in the Palmer house.

No longer is the sedate dark pattern fashionable in the business suit, but blue-green, light cinnamon brown, grenadier blue and lively gray, worn with a contrasting bright but tasteful tie. Thus will the better dressed man by use of color help drive the depression blues away, according to W. J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the show.

Outside Pockets Appear.

Although the Chicago designers' fashions remain conservative in cut and material, several departures in tailoring details were pointed out by the tailors. Predominating is the full chested sack coat with waist that tapers to a close hip effect. A new note is the use of the outside pocket and side vents popular several years ago.

"The double breasted velvet collar overcoat is here to stay due partly to the heated automobile and partly to the correct use either of derby or soft hat," Mr. Fitzgerald continued. "The ulster is better for outdoor wear. The evening dress coat will be more popular this season than last, very smart with pleated trousers where the vest is cut short."

Among the styles displayed in the fashion show was a double breasted ulster modeled by its designer, A. G. Nast. Of large brown plaid, it made use of the bell shaped skirt, defined waist, and box pleat with crowfoot tack. The designer demonstrated its comfort for walking.

Visitors Inspect Styles.

Another style was the single breasted tan sack suit worn by Albert T. Blomquist. This was of large plaid cheviot with the outside pockets and side vents. With this he wore tan spats, brown shoes and hat, and a plain red necktie.

John D. Nadherny modeled a cutaway or morning suit, the coat closed with one button and having braided edges. The vest is cut more concave than heretofore. A double breasted sack suit with patch pockets of blue-green with a slightly darker green stripe was worn by Fred L. Nordstrom.

During the afternoon the visiting tailors inspected the new styles, and after dinner models again displayed them. B. F. Mikuta presided as president of the Chicago Cutters' club.

OPERA BY PRIEST CHEERED IN DEBUT IN BUENOS AIRES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Oct. 12.—Msgr. Recife's opera, "Cecilia," with the composer conducting, was staged tonight. It received thunderous applause from a distinguished audience, including President Augustin Justo.

The house offered a unique colorful spectacle with cardinals, archbishops, and bishops occupying boxes and stalls and plainly garbed friars in the galleries.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Laporte, Ind., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Harry Ketcham, 55, was killed tonight when he walked through street crossing gates and was struck by a New York Central passenger train.

G. O. P. MAY CALL ON BORAH TO WIN MICHIGAN VOTES

Democrats Seek Aid of Hiram Johnson.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, pillar of the Constitution, may be enlisted by Michigan Republicans to battle against Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep.-Prog.-Dem.] of California if the latter harkens to the call of the Michigan Democrats to hasten to their succor.

In preparing for an October drive to give Michigan the works, Democratic managers let it be known today they are calling on Senators Robert F. Wagner and Royal S. Copeland, Democrats of New York, to stump the state and that they have especial hopes of importing Hiram.

In 40 elections since 1851, Michigan has elected Reublicans as governors 35 times and Democrats or fusionists five times.

Republicans Near Comeback.

With present indications that rock-ribbed Republican Michigan is apparently headed back into the Reublican column Nov. 6, with prospects of electing a Republican governor, re-electing Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and regaining a majority of the congressional seats, the state Democrats look upon the California go-getting senator as still possessing an influence dating back to bull moose times. Whether he will accept the invitation is not yet known.

News of this led the Republicans today to declare that if Senator Johnson comes into Michigan to aid Frank A. Picard, "the man on the flying trapeze," Democratic nominee for senator, they will summon Senator Borah, who has promised to be ready if needed.

Borah Offers Aid.

In a letter written to Stanley Banyon of Bentor Harbor Senator Borah says:

"If I can be of any service to Senator Vandenberg in the matter of his reëlection, I am anxious to render that service. His loss would be incalculable particularly at this time. His great ability, linked with his tireless industry, and, above all his broad humanitarian grasp of public questions, makes him a senator worthy of Michigan.

"I feel it is in the public interest that he be returned. I think you know that mere party feeling does not prompt me to say this. I am speaking of the man for the place.

"I hope to be with you before the ides of November."

Next week the campaign goes into its intense stage. The New Dealers have picked Michigan as the seat for the greatest political battle west of Ohio, and the final weeks are set for a terrific battle. Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, will have his personal representative at the head of the Democratic strategy in the person of Emil Hurja, the Crystal Falls, Mich., crystal gazer.

Protest Easy Money Flood.

Loud protests are rising from the Republicans that the New Dealers are operating as they did in Maine. They charge that 4 million dollars of corn-hog-sugar beet checks is being poured into the state as election approaches; that dreams of a 30 million bridge across the Straits of Mackinac and of other PWA projects have been dusted off and regilded. In many sections payrollers in the federal dole service are already handing political arguments to recipients of groceries, they say.

At Grand Rapids Democrats say they will shortly have 2,500 party workers enlisted who will be drilled in what to say so that their arguments may not conflict.

Meanwhile, the congressional battles are now warming up. As affairs now stand, Republicans and many Democrats estimate the Republicans will regain at least four seats in congress and perhaps six—unless the tickets are swamped by the efforts of the Democratic national party. Incidentally, the Republicans appear hampered by a lack of adequate campaign funds.

In the Michigan fruit belt a shakedown of postmasters for a Democratic campaign slush fund is among the issues in the fourth district. Clare E. Hoffman of Allegan is Republican opponent of Congressman Foulkes, Democrat, of Hartford, who boasts he is a "one suit man."

Weeks ago charges that postoffices were being sold were brought by E. M. Cook, acting postmaster at Allegan, and chairman of the Democratic county committee. At least eight affidavits are said to have been placed with federal inspectors who came into the district to investigate.

The affidavits alleged that Dan Gerow, Sturgis hotel man and member of the Democratic state committee, has been soliciting 10 per cent of salaries of acting postmasters in some towns for a campaign fund for Congressman Foulkes. Some of the affidavits charged Gerow with stating that unless the 10 per cent was forked out confirmation of these acting postmasters could not be accepted.

Both Enter Denials.

Gerow replied that the charges are false, denied collections and said any solicitations that may have been made were for the general campaign fund.

Congressman Foulkes denied that he was in any way implicated in the alleged shakedown, by Gerow.

The affidavits which were given publicity were signed by acting or assistant or former postmasters at Breedsville, Saugatuck, Bravo, Middleville, Pullman, Douglas and Allegan.

Results of the investigation by the inspectors have not been announced. Congressman Foulkes' group sought to throw out Mr. Cook of Allegan as county chairman, but only partially succeeded. He is now co-chairman. Recently Foulkes has declared that the postal authorities at Washington have asked him to designate a successor to Cook.

Two years ago in the Roosevelt landslide Foulkes, a first termer, won by 4,000 votes in the Roosevelt landslide The Republicans figure Hoffman will carry Van Buren, Allegan, Barry, and Berrien counties for a victory.

Paupers and Tramps Flock to California as Jittery Capital Takes Leave of State

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—With Upton Sinclair's Utopian promises attracting hordes of paupers into the state and driving frightened capital out, California is a ferment of fanatical fervor, distrust, political childishness, harebrained economics, and panic.

Sinclair, lifelong Socialist, reformer, propagandist, and congenital visionary, hitherto regarded a harmless crank, a "nut," has outdealt the New Deal, gobbled up the Democratic party, put on Uncle Franklin's spectacles, and proceeded to fascinate all the Red Riding Hoods in the economic wilderness.

It is 1896 all over again. There are the same crowds of worshipers raptly listening to the Messianic promises of deliverance from misery that fall from the lips of Sinclair, Democratic candidate for governor, as he unfolds his project for a socialized state. There is the same terror of the capitalists and other propertied persons feverishly raising huge campaign funds and rallying to the support of Sinclair's principal conservative opponent, Gov. Frank F. Merriam.

The most spectacular aspect of this extraordinary political contest is the migration to California of the destitute, the jobless, the tramps, and the loafers by choice, attracted by Sinclair's promises of jobs for all able-bodied, and pensions for the sick and aged. They swarm out of the box cars and off the brake beams of the trains arriving from the east. The state border patrol reports the roads dusty with the flivvers of the forty-niners in their gold rush to Utopia.

According to dispatches in the San Francisco newspapers, second hand automobile dealers in the east report a suddenly developed demand for $100 cars, any kind of a rattler, provided it has tires good for 2,000 or 3,000 miles. Thus the army of the idle is advancing upon the state of the well advertised paradisiac climate with food and gas for the pilgrims of poverty furnished by the federal transient relief depots along the road.

Native Sons Wrathful.

The immediate impetus to the trek of the indigent appears to have been given by Sinclair himself when he said that half the unemployed in the country would soon be in California awaiting his election and the inauguration of his EPIC plan [End poverty in California]. His words produced an unexpected repercussion at home, for with the arrival of the vanguard of the pilgrims, adding to the 1,250,000 persons already on relief in the state, the native sons turned wrathfully upon Carpetbagger Sinclair. Whereat Sinclair said he had only been joking. A costly joke, opined the native sons, counting up the past, present, and prospective cost of the dole mainly for the carpetbaggers of prosperous times who had already turned out to be costly customers of the well advertised climate.

It may have been only a joke, but from a hundred EPIC platforms the spellbinders of Utopia have been telling how the President welcomed Sinclair like a brother, how Farley bade him "Call me Jim," how Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins promised Sinclair that there would be no lack of relief money for the jobless in California until EPIC was ready to go into operation.

"Why Not?" He Asks.

"And why shouldn't the unemployed come to California?" said R. B. Carpenter, manager of Sinclair's San Francisco headquarters. "It doesn't cost the government any more to support them in California than elsewhere—in fact, less in the items of clothing and fuel, thanks to our climate. And suppose the government relief expenditures do go up 50 or 100 million dollars in California, that puts that much more money in circulation in California and helps business, doesn't it?"

So serious has the situation become for local relief authorities that Florence M. McAuliffe from San Francisco's Citizens' Relief committee issued an appeal today to all political candidates to refrain from uttering promises of "large pensions, doles, or attractive relief projects."

"Conditions are so bad in some states that the slightest encouragement will lure indigent families to California to be added to our already overburdened relief rolls," Chairman McAuliffe declared.

More Indigent Pour In.

"During June the federal transient relief surveys noted the arrival of 662 families in California. In July the number of indigent families applying for help arriving from other states rose to 706, and in August to 827 families, each averaging 3½ persons to a family.

"The conditions of these persons en route to California are pitiful. On arriving here they must become charges on our already overburdened relief agencies. Their mental attitude and morale suffers from their disappointment at finding that the promises of generous pensions and free land schemes were merely election promises and this mental condition is not conducive to good citizenship within our state.

"It is obviously no kindness to lure people out of the east and middle west on a trip to California which exhausts their slender savings only to have them find that reports of a free California land and large pensions were untrue, and that there is no immediate likelihood of them ever being offered.

Appeal to Candidates.

"For this reason we appeal to all candidates of all political groups to keep within the realm of possibility and as far as possible to remain away from anything but the immediate practical provisions of relief in political speeches, especially those broadcast over the radio."

In the financial district there is much discussion of the flight of capital from California that set in after the nomination of Sinclair. Fears of investors that Sinclair is going to be elected and that his EPIC plan for a socialized state will bankrupt California are held responsible for a 50 million dollar shrinkage in California state, county, district, and city bonds since the primary.

The liquidation is in holdings which have an aggregate value of about 1,250 million dollars.

"State of California bonds," says a report from William Cavalier & Co., "have declined more than 6 per cent, while bonds of Missouri have declined only 1½ per cent and bonds of Illinois less than 1 per cent.

"In other words, capital is getting out of the bonds of the state, and cities of California, and investing elsewhere."

California Bonds Decline.

A statement from Blyth & Co. says: "The average 20 year bond of the classifications [state, county, district, and city bonds] was selling at the time of the primary for $1,050 and now is quoted around $1,013.

"Capital invested in California securities employing the workers of California and on which the prosperity of merchants and whole communities depends, will move out of California with all possible celerity and into places where the tax burden will not be confiscatory."

Reports show that the bonds of four principal gas and electric utilities in which a large portion of the savings of California citizens is invested, have declined more than 7 per cent since Mr. Sinclair's nomination on Aug. 28, while bonds of such utilities as American Telephone and Telegraph have gained and bonds of Philadelphia Electric have declined only one-half of 1 per cent.

MINNESOTA POLL HERALDED AS SIGN OF G. O. P. VICTORY

Straw Vote Called Proof of Anti-Radical Swing.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Republican western headquarters in Chicago yesterday issued an announcement of a straw vote in Minnesota which gave promise that the Gopher state will be recorded in the G. O. P column next month.

The announcement was made in a statement which declared that Minnesota, long a center of the Farmer-Labor movement, is swinging into line for sound theories of government and away from radical tendencies.

Poll Shows Olson Trailing.

The test poll was taken on the governorship, which is considered the focus of the present battle, and showed Gov. Floyd Olson, Farmer-Labor candidate for reëlection, falling far behind.

Martin A. Nelson, Republican	52,828
Floyd Olson, Farmer-Labor	35,642
John E. Regan, Democrat	31,792

"If newspaper polls are any criterion of public trends," read the Republican announcement, "the one just concluded in Minnesota by twenty-six newspapers certainly indicates that the people of Minnesota are swinging into line for sound theories of government and away from radicalism.

"Those newspapers, in an honest and impartial effort to ascertain the standing of the three candidates for governor, conducted the poll of 250,000 automobile owners. There were 120,262 votes cast.

"Nelson, the Republican, carried not only the cities but also a large majority of the counties. The vote was state-wide and included every county.

"There have been other polls taken during this campaign but none conducted as carefully as this one. A number of certified public accountants counted and tabulated the vote and certified the result.

See Senate Race Victory.

"That result encourages us to believe not only that Martin A. Nelson will be elected governor but that N. J. Holmberg, the Republican nominee, will be elected to the United States senate. Both the Republicans are making vigorous campaigns.

"The Farmer-Labor platform, which declared for state socialism of all industry, is causing Senator Shipstead, the only Farmer-Laborite in the senate, considerable embarrassment in his campaign for reëlection. He has so far declined to indorse the platform of his party.

"Mr. Holmberg, his Republican opponent, is well known in Minnesota, having served in both houses of the legislature and for twelve years as state commissioner of agriculture. He has the confidence of the farmers, understands their problems, and is making a hard fight for election."

Check New Registration Lists.

Cook county organizations, particularly the Republicans since the election machinery is in the hands of the Democrats, have their eyes glued on the revision of the registration lists which gets under way in every polling place under the election board's jurisdiction tonight.

On Wednesday and Thursday the precinct election clerks canvassed their precincts and yesterday sent out verification notices by postcard to thousands of persons whose names appear on the registers but who were not found by the canvassers at the addresses given.

The Republican organization, through Municipal Judge Samuel Heller, nominee for county judge, who is considered an election law authority, called attention to the danger in the situation to citizens who receive notices and fail to appear at their polling places tonight. If they do not appear their names will be stricken. In the past many voters have been disfranchised by this route, for there is no appeal if the voter thus challenged does not appear in person.

Urges Voter to Protect Self.

"There is no need to worry," said Judge Heller, "if the voters are alert. Many notices will be sent to legally registered voters not only in an attempt to deprive them of the franchise but to confuse the issues by the cry that honest voters are being disfranchised in order to conceal the existence of the fraudulent names on the list which have not been challenged.

"The independent voters must protect themselves. Tonight is their last opportunity to go to the polls, if their votes have been challenged, and thus preserve their right to vote."

CHICAGO HAS CLEANED HOUSE, SPEAKERS AT LUNCHEON DECLARE

Chicago has efficiently performed its "house cleaning" and emerged into its proper place in the sun.

That was the consensus of the speakers at a luncheon yesterday in the Hotel La Salle, sponsored by the Chicago Federated Advertising Clubs, in honor of the publicity section of the keep Chicago ahead committee. The World's Fair, the curbing of lawlessness, and the solution of the city's financial problems were cited as being among the chief factors for the re-establishment of Chicago's good reputation.

Mayor Kelly expressed his gratitude for the aid of civic leaders in his fight to redeem Chicago. He cited the recent Drama of Chicago as an example of coöperative enterprise that stimulated business and morale in every section of the city. He expressed the hope that the Drama of Chicago and the keep Chicago ahead drive would be repeated yearly.

Others who spoke were Rufus C. Dawes, president of A Century of Progress; D. F. Kelly, merchant, and Robert C. Ross, first vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

All testified to the city's recovery from its ills, attributing much of the credit to the efforts of Mayor Kelly.

FRANK L. WRIGHT SUED FOLLOWING AUTO COLLISION

Madison, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Frank Lloyd Wright, noted architect of Spring Green, Wis., today was named defendant in a $6,182 damage suit in Circuit court as a result of an automobile accident eleven months ago. Suit was begun by Fost Choles, Madison florist, and the Zurich General Accident and Liability Insurance company. Mrs. Wright, who was in the automobile with her husband, also was named defendant. Choles charges that Wright was speeding and attempted to pass the Choles truck at an intersection. He asks $5,000 for personal injuries, $1,000 for damage to the truck, which overturned after colliding with the Wright automobile, and the insurance company asks $182 for expenses in adjudication of Choles' claims. In a counter claim Mr. and Mrs. Wright each ask for $1,000 from Choles. They entered a general denial of Choles' charges.

RIVER AUTHORITY BILL PUT BEFORE TEXAS ASSEMBLY

Gov. Ferguson Again Tries for O. K.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—A bill renewing efforts to create the Colorado river authority, a governmental agency, to accept a $4,500,000 public works loan and grant for completion of the Buchanan hydro-electric dam in the Colorado river, 60 miles from Austin, was introduced in both houses of the legislature today, the first day of the new session.

It was one of five subjects for which Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson reconvened the legislature. It failed final action two weeks ago when house conferees refused to agree on a bill.

A second measure, involving approximately $50,000,000 of hydro-electric development on the Brazos river of Texas, also was introduced in the house and senate. It is for remission of taxes to secure loans. Allotment has already been made by public works for the Colorado river Buchanan dam project. If started, sponsors plan to reuse the same water for five additional power dams in the river below Hamilton or Buchanan dam, as government grants are secured.

Buchanan Works for Bill.

Representative J. P. Buchanan, chairman of the appropriations committee of congress, representative of this district in congress, has gone before the legislature and urged enactment of the law creating the governmental agency. The 50 per cent completed Buchanan, or Hamilton dam, to store one million acre-feet of water, is now owned by receivers of the Mississippi Valley Utilities for the bondholders and passage of the act would restore the water permits as well as the property to state control.

Hearing late today was set on the Colorado river authority for Monday night, when opponents who fought it bitterly at the previous session, will be heard. Opposition is credited to power companies contesting the government's setting up a public yard stick to measure power rates. Directors of the three regional chambers of commerce which together cover the entire state, last week adopted resolutions protesting against government competition with utilities, slapping both Colorado and Brazos projects. But the West Texas Chamber of Commerce directors, source of principal opposition to the Colorado project, this week adopted new resolutions favoring completion of the project if all its permits shall be subordinated to future irrigation permits for the upper portion of the river and its tributaries.

Congressman at Meetings.

Congressman Buchanan went before both meetings in support of the projects. The Colorado authority bill was redrafted by Chief Counsel Henry T. Hunt of the Public Works administration during the last few days, and the revisions telegraphed here with assurance the bill would be acceptable for making the $4,500,000 initial loan.

JACOBS CHARGES POLITICS GUIDES TAX REDUCTIONS

In reply to charges that he had made "another telephone book assessment" of personal property for 1933, County Assessor J. L. Jacobs yesterday issued a statement in which he asserted that the reductions granted by the board of tax appeals and made public Thursday "reflect the worst political 'fix' which Cook county has been confronted with in many years."

Jacobs' counter charges were directed at the board of appeals and especially at George F. Nixon, Republican member, because of a reduction of $145,532,885 in the assessor's original assessment of $930,565,521 for 1933 personal property in Cook county. Nixon on Thursday said the assessment was "silly" and "inaccurate." Jacobs asserted that the appeals board members were encouraging the return of the "fix" and "adjustments" in tax bills for personal and political reasons.

HAUPTMANN MAY HAVE TO PROVE ALIBI ON MONDAY

Official Cites Ruling of Supreme Court.

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—The burden of proof will be upon Bruno Richard Hauptmann at the extradition hearing in the Bronx Supreme court on Monday to show that he was not in New Jersey the night of the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., according to New Jersey officials.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey made this statement today after a conference with other state officials at Wilburtha, near Trenton. Plans were completed at the conference for the fight New Jersey will make at Monday's hearing to extradite Hauptmann from the Bronx, despite the writ of habeas corpus which prevented his removal on Friday.

If Hauptmann is depending upon an alibi as his defense against the murder indictment against him in Flemington, N. J., the New Jersey authorities asserted, he will have to disclose this alibi in his fight against extradition.

May Be Put on Stand.

The prisoner may even be compelled to take the witness stand and answer questions about his alibi, it was pointed out by Joseph Lanigan, assistant attorney general of New Jersey, who cited an opinion of the United States Supreme court handed down last year.

Written by Justice McReynolds in the case of South Carolina vs. Bailey, the opinion as quoted by Mr. Lanigan reads:

"A person who has been arrested in one state as a fugitive from justice and seeks discharge of habeas corpus proceedings upon the ground that he was not in the demanding state at the time of the alleged crime has the burden of proving the alibi beyond a reasonable doubt. If the evidence is conflicting he should not be released.

"The habeas corpus proceeding is in no sense a criminal trial, and if the evidence of alibi is suspicious the judge may well require the prisoner to submit to examination also, and to show what resort has been made to secure the presence of important witnesses."

To Call Wife.

James M. Fawcett, attorney for Hauptmann, has announced that he will call the prisoner's wife and several other Bronx residents to establish that Hauptmann was not somewhere else than the Bronx on the night of March 1, 1932, when the kidnaping occurred at the Lindberghs' summer home at Hopewell, N. J. Mrs. Hauptmann has declared that she was working in a Bronx bakery on that night, and that her husband called for her there.

A report was published today that the alibi will also include testimony of friends of Hauptmann that they played pinochle with him on the night of the kidnaping. When Bernhardt Meisel, associate of Mr. Fawcett, left the Bronx county jail today after interviewing Hauptmann he was asked about the pinochle game story. Mr. Meisel smiled and said nothing.

Reveal New Witness.

The New Jersey attorney general confirmed a report that the authorities have a new witness in the person of Frank Rossiter, a theatrical booking agent, who believes Hauptmann was a motorist he saw at or near the Princeton airport, a few miles from Hopewell, a day or so before the kidnaping.

Rossiter was reported in other quarters to have talked with this man for ten minutes while a flat tire was being repaired and to have been able to observe him closely.

It was learned at the offices of District Attorney Samuel J. Foley in the Bronx that Rossiter had been brought there by New Jersey state police officers some days ago, but it could not be learned whether he had been asked to identify Hauptmann.

CAPPER PLEADS FOR EARLY MOVE TO EVEN BUDGET

Colby, Kas., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Senator Arthur Capper [Rep., Kas.] said tonight the time was coming when it would be necessary to call a halt on huge governmental expenditures.

In an address for delivery here Capper said he admitted the truth of a statement from Donald Richberg, head of the NRA, that an immediate balancing of the national budget, in the face of continued relief demands, is impossible.

"I am glad to note that Mr. Richberg—for whom I have a very high regard—says the budget should be balanced at the earliest possible moment," Capper asserted. "With that statement I am in full agreement. Personally, and for the sake of the taxpayers, I hope it can be balanced at an earlier date than Mr. Richberg's talk indicates he believes possible."

Senator Capper said he would be the last to demand that relief expenditures should be suddenly lopped off, but that nothing "can evade the fact that these expenditures will have to be made good, will have to be taken care of by the taxpayers."

Pointing to a public debt which he said was now 27 billion dollars, and which he said would increase to 31 billion dollars next year, Senator Capper said young people of today would be the ones to face the payment of the bulk of the bill. He said he had a "hunch" it also would be Republicans who would be called upon to balance the budget.

Night Club Girl Pleads Not Guilty of Murder

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Lillian Morel was arraigned today on a charge of murdering William Owen, 36 year old bond salesman, who was fatally stabbed in her apartment early Saturday morning. A formal plea of not guilty was entered and Oct. 18 was set for preliminary hearings. Arraignment of the 25 year old cabaret entertainer, known also as Dolores Lopez, followed a finding of criminal responsibility by the coroner's jury.

VERDICT IN MARCOWITZ SLAYING.

The coroner's jury investigating the death of Harry Marcowitz, 35 years old, 3549 Dickens avenue, a grocer, fatally shot Oct. 1 when he resisted three men who robbed him of $300, yesterday returned a routine verdict of murder by persons unknown.

VISCOUNTESS ARRIVES TO AID MRS. VANDERBILT

ASSERTS TAILORS IN ALL COUNTRIES COPY FILM STYLES

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Jules Mendel, authority on men's fashions, who arrived today for a stay in the movies, had this to say of the so-called "best dressed men" of the flickers:

"Adolphe Menjou, almost invariably overdressed; Lew Stone, the best groomed motion picture actor, but what you would call a gentleman's type of dresser; Jack Holt, really knows how to wear clothes; Edward Everett Horton, an individualist in his styles, but one of outstanding taste; Clark Gable, well dressed at times."

Of Hollywood male fashions on the whole Mendel says: "English tailors, French tailors, and tailors everywhere else on the globe are copying the Hollywood dressers because they have to."

Back Yard Potatoes Weigh 2½ Lbs. Each

Superior, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Green mountain potatoes, grown in the back yard of the C. E. Jenness home, have attained the weight of 2½ pounds each. Ten bushels were obtained from the plot, measuring 25x30 feet, and only fifteen of the potatoes are required to fill a half bushel basket. The seed was planted in June.

SISTER ARRIVES AS WITNESS IN VANDERBILT SUIT

Assails Testimony; Calls Charges False.

New York, Oct. 12. — [Special.] — Lady Thelma Furness, twin of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, arrived in New York today to help defend her sister against their mother, Mrs. Laura K. Morgan, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, in the Supreme court battle over the custody of Mrs. Vanderbilt's 10 year old daughter, Gloria.

She was accompanied by her brother, Harry Hays Morgan, and the latter's wife. They arrived from Montreal, where they had gone by boat train after having reached Quebec from England last night.

Viscountess Breaks Silence.

At first Lady Thelma declined to discuss the efforts of Mrs. Whitney to prove Mrs. Vanderbilt unfit to bring up her child. The silence was broken, however, when Lady Thelma was asked what she thought of her mother, who already has testified against her own daughter.

"I am positively amazed," she said, "that my mother should side with Mrs. Whitney. My mother taught all of us Morgans to stick together and now she turns against her own daughter. She must be overawed by Mrs. Whitney."

"Do you think Mrs. Vanderbilt should have the custody of little Gloria?" the viscountess was asked.

Asked of Testimony.

"Anybody knows," she said impatiently, "that Baby Gloria should remain with her mother, as every child should. I'm a mother myself, you know. I just dare anybody to try to take my baby away from me!"

She was asked what she thought of the testimony in the two court sessions held publicly before Justice John F. Carew declared the implications were so scandalous that he would hear the rest of the case in private.

"It's all lies," she said.

"Will you testify to that?"

"I certainly will," she said. "The wretched stories told by dissatisfied and discharged servants will be proved falsehoods before this is over."

Prince Arrives Monday.

She was asked about Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe, who, with his wife, will arrive here Monday to deny that immorality occurred in Biarritz some time before his marriage, when a Vanderbilt nurse has testified she saw him in Mrs. Vanderbilt's room in his pajamas.

"He is a charming and gallant man. He will refute this shocking talk about my sister and him, never fear," said Lady Thelma.

As to the testimony of the French maid that Mrs. Vanderbilt was embraced too affectionately by the marchioness of Milford-Haven one afternoon in Cannes, Lady Thelma said: "Of course that testimony is as absurd as the rest of the lying gossip."

On the same boat train, also arriving in Quebec on the Empress of Britain, another supporter of Mrs. Vanderbilt's side of the Vanderbilt-Whitney case arrived in the person of Theobald Mathew, English lawyer, sent by the marquess of Milford Haven. He said his commission was to protect the marchioness from the scandalous suggestion of the maid's testimony.

TELLER'S WIFE GRABS FORGER; HOLDS HIM UNTIL POLICE COME

Sausalito, Cal., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Clutched around the neck by the wife of a bank teller, Lucius Albert Parmalee, 44, who police said is known as the "Santa Claus forger" of the United States and Canada, was captured here today.

The woman, Mrs. Charles W. Wilson, flung her arms around Parmalee's neck after her husband, a teller of the Canadian bank of Commerce of California in San Francisco, pointed him out.

Wilson, who lost a leg in the world war, said he recognized Parmalee as the man who recently had passed a $3,500 forged check at his bank.

Parmalee made no effort to break free and later told police: "I'm glad it's over." Police said he admitted he had cashed forged checks during the last 14 years for a total of $50,000.

Film, Stage Royalties Pay $500,000 Wallace Debts

PLYMOUTH, England, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Patricia Wallace, daughter of the late novelist, Edgar Wallace, arrived here today from a visit to the United States. She said royalties from films and plays based on her father's stories would be adequate to clear off all his debts. These amounted to $500,000.

FAIR WILL RETIRE $841,620 MORE IN BONDS NEXT WEEK

Expect Full Payment of Gold Note Issue.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Unless the figures of auditors are greatly awry, A Century of Progress exposition will pay off fully its $10,000,000 gold note issue, as well as all other obligations, thus creating a record unique for World's Fairs.

On Oct. 15 the Exposition is to retire $841,620 of the bonds as yet unpaid, and also will pay $110,000 in interest. With this disbursement the bonded indebtedness will be reduced to $1,445,820. It is expected that another payment of close to $800,000, including interest, will be made shortly after the gates of the Fair are closed Oct. 31.

Watch Salvage Costs.

This will leave only about $700,000 of the bonds, whose owners have agreed to subordinate their claims to those of other bondholders, unpaid. It is in regard to this last part of the bond issue that accountants have been figuring.

The owners' chance to be paid in full depends on the cost of the demolition of Fair buildings, and the salvage that can be obtained from them. The Fair management has set aside a million dollars in fulfillment of the promises to restore Grant park to its state before the Exposition building began.

Estimate Cost at $300,000.

Building wreckers estimate, however, that from $300,000 to $500,000 will cover the demolition costs. If this is correct, $500,000 will remain to be applied on the bonded indebtedness. What the salvage will be is highly problematical, although the Fair has set $100,000 as a guess.

The demolition program, under contract, must be completed within six months. At the end of that period it will be known definitly what the unpaid bondholders will get. Many times it has been pointed out that even the 93 per cent of obligations which will be discharged by the end of the Fair sets a record never even approached by expositions anywhere.

Asks Parks to Act.

Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, general manager of the Fair, yesterday issued a warning concerning the demolition program. He said that if the Chicago park board, the city or exhibitors wished to make arrangements to let certain buildings stand, these should be designated by Nov. 1. At that time the taking up of sewerage, water and electrical facilities will be started.

With the close of the Exposition only nineteen days away, officials of the Fair yesterday were making estimates of the final attendance figure. As of yesterday morning the total attendance was 13,705,051. At midnight the day's attendance was 110,303, making the total 13,815,354. The fourteenth million visitor should come into the grounds some time tomorrow.

Expect 15½ Million.

At the present rate, barring bad weather, a million and a half paid admissions should be registered in the final two weeks, pushing the final for the summer to fifteen and a half million visitors. The final figures may exceed that, for, with high optimism as to the 100 per cent payment of obligations, the management will spare no expense in the final two weeks' entertainment.

In the event that a profit remains after all obligations have been paid, this will be divided according to the law under which the Fair was organized. In certain definite proportions the money will be divided among public institutions on park land, organized for the entertainment of the public. These will include museums, institutions and other organizations, which contributed with exhibits and advice during the Fair.

Parents Offer $500 Reward for Return of Missing Girl

East St. Louis, Ill., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. O. E. THREE N. Y. REDS KNOCKED OUT IN ANTI-FASCIST RIOT

Storm Yankee Stadium Italian Fete.

New York, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Three members of a communist organization were knocked unconscious by detectives and hundreds of others dispersed in a mêlée today outside of the Yankee stadium, where Italian-American societies were staging a Columbus day program.

Police used fists and impromptu weapons made of rolled-up newspapers in the brief scuffle by the stadium gates.

Within the stadium there was no disorder as a throng of 10,000 cheered the bands and colors of 300 Italian societies as they paraded around the field before the athletes participating in the American-Italian international university games.

Cheer College Telegram.

The crowd cheered reading of a telegram from the faculty of the College of the City of New York criticizing the anti-Fascist demonstration by a group of students at the reception Tuesday of a delegation of Italian students visiting the college.

Some 150 police were massed to avert disorder when shortly after noon 500 anti-Fascists and members of communist groups arrived bearing placards with inscriptions directed against Premier Mussolini and Fascism. The demonstrators formed ranks at the subway station and started marching toward the stadium, but were promptly routed by 50 mounted police, who charged at a signal.

The dispersed demonstrators were rounded up at the starting point and thereafter were permitted to march several blocks removed from the stadium and to continue their speeches in a vacant lot under the watchful eyes of the police.

Police Lose Ground.

The fracas by the stadium gates came later, just before the Italian-Americans within the stadium prepared to leave and police feared a clash between the two groups. The detectives went into action when the patrolmen at the gates seemed to be losing ground to the radicals.

Early this morning three men were arrested for painting the bleacher fence of the stadium and the sidewalk with anti-Fascist slogans. One of them, according to police, was a City college student, while another of the trio was said by police to have five convictions against him. They were held by a magistrate on a charge of malicious mischief.

Gov. Lehman addressed an earlier Columbus day meeting sponsored by the Union of Spanish Speaking Societies and held before the statue to the discoverer in Columbus circle.

Eight City Police Rewarded for Work at World's Fair

Eight city police who have been detailed to duty at the grounds of A Century of Progress were presented last night with new .38 caliber police special revolvers, each with the name of the policeman engraved on the side. Under the name was engraved "In Appreciation, from A Century of Progress." The presentations were made in the office of Charles Thurman, chief of the Fair's department of public safety. The officers are Robert C. Schmidt, Thomas Shea, John Barry, Norman Crot, William J. Drury, Edward Griffin, James Curtin, Herman Stienberg.

All "Doing Nicely"

The two girls and a boy born Thursday in the Ingalls Memorial hospital in Harvey and their mother, Mrs Thomas Fish, 23 years old, 15240 Paulina street, Harvey were reported to be "doing nicely" yesterday as members of the family took up the perplexing problem of finding suitable names for them.

World's Fair Notes

Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, arrived yesterday aboard the Twentieth Century of the New York Central lines for a visit at the Fair.

An international congress of nations will be held at the Fair Oct. 17 under the sponsorship of William Hope, manager of the International Business Machine company exhibit at the Exposition. With the purpose of bettering international business relations twenty consuls of foreign countries have accepted invitations to participate.

A group of 100 students accompanied by teachers and by parents from Maple Park arrived yesterday over the Chicago and North Western railway to spend the day at the Fair.

Fifty members of the American society of Secretaries, Directors, and Commissioners of Agriculture will be guests of the Ford exhibit this evening. Included in the groups will be farm executives from 35 states.

Faik Konitza, Albanian minister to the United States, will arrive at 8:30 a. m. today over the Pennsylvania railroad. The diplomat will be the principal speaker at Albanian day ceremonies tomorrow.

Seven hundred employés of the Kelvinator company of Detroit will arrive today for a tour of the Fair.

Czechoslovakian day will be celebrated at the Fair tomorrow. Jaroslav Smetanka, consul in Chicago will deliver the main address. Miss Emily Krizek will be Queen of the day. She will ride in the official parade at 6:30 p. m.

Edward F. Dunne, United States commissioner to the Fair was 81 years old yesterday. As one of his birthday gifts the former governor of Illinois got a surprise kiss from Miss Century of Progress, Elinor Huestman, 1102 Loyola avenue.

PAGEANT MARKS COLUMBUS DAY AT WORLD'S FAIR

Honor Explorer's Memory Throughout City.

Marking the 442d anniversary of the historic event, a boat load of characters representing Spanish soldiers, sailors, monks, and adventurers landed at the Lagoon Theater. Twelve thousand Fair visitors, filling the amphitheater and lining the approaches, cheered mightily as Columbus took possession of the new land. Greeting the explorers was a band of natives, termed Indians by the explorer in the belief he had discovered the Indies.

Hope for Annual Fête.

Chairman of the day was Robert M. Sweitzer, county clerk, acting on behalf of the Columbus Day association of Chicago. In a brief speech he recalled the importance of Columbus' exploration, and said that yesterday's pageant was the first of what was hoped would be an annual commemoration of Columbus' landing.

Other speakers were R. I. Randolph, who welcomed the visitors in behalf of the Fair, and Antonio Ferme, acting Italian consul general in Chicago. At the conclusion of the ceremonies Mr. Randolph presented Mr. Sweitzer with a replica of Columbus' flagship, the Santa Maria, on behalf of the Christopher Columbus post of the American Legion. The ship model is nearly 250 years old.

Get 19 Gun Salute.

The pageant depicted the landing of the voyagers, their singing of the Te Deum in thanksgiving, and their meeting and peacemaking with the Indians. A flotila of gayly decorated yachts participated in the scene. Capt. Edward A. Evers, commander of the Fourth Naval reserve, assigned the cutter Rush to escort the explorers' ship. A naval salute of nineteen guns greeted them.

Throughout the city other Columbus day observances were held. A majority of public offices were closed as were a great many business concerns. Chicago schools were dismissed during the afternoon.

Mayor Kelly laid a wreath at the foot of Columbus statue in Grant park during the morning in the presence of a score of leading Chicagoans of Italian descent. Ceremonies also were held in other Chicago parks.

NEED COURAGE OF COLUMBUS, SAYS CLUVERIUS

Courage and determination like Columbus displayed in his world discovery is America's need in this modern period of economic upheaval, Admiral Wat T. Cluverius declared yesterday in a Columbus day message delivered before the Italy-America society meeting for tea at the Chicago Historical society.

The guests visited the Spanish exploration room in the Historical society where notable Columbus relics were on display. In answer to queries concerning the worm eaten walls L. Hubbard Shattuck, director of the Historical society, pointed out that they had been adapted from early Spanish missions in America. He also explained that the doors were from the Franciscan monastery of La Rabida near Palos, Spain, where Columbus stopped while seeking assistance in his plans.

Chimpanzee Flogs Gorilla with Whip to Save Warden

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—When Bobby, Berlin's pet gorilla, attacked and bit his warden, a chimpanzee grabbed a whip and flogged the much larger gorilla, saving the man's life. The director of the zoo said Bobby is just playful, but added that his 550 pounds makes him a dangerous animal.

TICKET HOLDERS DISCOVER ERROR AND NOT AMERICA

But All Will Be Well, Say Sponsors.

Christopher Columbus did not land at Soldiers' field last night, as many people expected him to.

More than three hundred persons, who purchased tickets under the impression that Columbus [or a proxy] would reënact the discovery of America, went to the great stadium to see them and were very disappointed.

It seemed there was a mistake somewhere.

Sergt. Sam McDowell and Lieut. Ernest Schondorf spent a number of hours explaining to the indignant ticket holders that America had been discovered earlier in the day, over at the Lagoon theater on the grounds of A Century of Progress.

Hard Words for Chris.

Naturally, this resulted in a considerable amount of pointed criticism, and nearly everybody wanted to know what it was all about.

Well, it all started sometime back when the Columbus Day Association of Chicago got itself incorporated, with County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer as the president. The idea was to hold an annual celebration, and the first was to be a three day affair in Soldiers' field.

Ted Bourke, who is a printer and has offices at 312 West Randolph street, was called in to handle the finances.

Tickets were printed, and salesmen went out to sell them. A request for a permit to use Soldiers' field was sent to George T. Donoghue, general superintendent of the consolidated parks system.

Let Columbus Drift Along.

Things drifted along, until Mr. Donoghue said he requested the Columbus day people to have their deposit in his office on Oct. 1. Mr. Bourke says he didn't see any such notice. Anyway, the deposit wasn't there, and the permit was canceled.

On Tuesday, Oct. 2, the deposit did appear in the shape of a certified check for $2,500, and it looked like the discovery would come off as advertised. More days passed and about last Friday the Columbus people talked things over and decided that the first permit cancelation and other things made a succes at Soldiers' field look pretty doubtful.

Change Landing Places.

So they decided to move to the World's Fair. But tickets already had been sold. Mr. Bourke says only $830 worth. They ranged in price from $1 to $5, purchasers said.

The World's Fair officials were asked if they would honor these tickets at the Fair gates. The officials thought it over and said no. They did, however, print 50,000 Columbus day admission tickets to the Fair grounds. Mr. Bourke took over 1,000 of these and told his salesmen to tell their customers they could exchange their tickets for these.

Some of them did, but many more didn't hear about Columbus' change in plans of where and when to land. These people composed the crowd which became so nettled at not finding Christopher at Soldiers' field last night when they went down there with the rest of the family.

Mr. Sweitzer said the landing of Christopher at the Fair grounds was a splendid sight, and people enjoyed it very much. He added that those who had bought tickets for the Soldiers' field landing and didn't learn of the change in plans could get their money back at the association office at 30 West Washington street.

Mr. Bourke pointed out that the change of location to the Fair grounds had lightened the association's coffers no little. In fact, he said, it looked like a loss of some $4,000.

PAL OF DILLINGER REPORTED WITH OUTLAW FLOYD

Press Intensive Search in Central Missouri.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 12.—(AP)—An intensive search went forward throughout central Missouri tonight for Charles [Pretty Boy] Floyd, Oklahoma's killer outlaw, and two companions.

Lights burned late in farmhouses. Rural telephones hummed as farmers checked reports with neighbors under instructions of the state highway patrol.

A report that Floyd's companion might be Alvin Karpis, a John Dillinger gangster and accused kidnaper, caused intensification of the search by state, county, and municipal officers, all armed heavily for a finish fight.

Stopped by Trio.

O. L. Blanchard, a former Kansas City detective, identified a picture of Floyd as one of three men he encountered near Mexico, Mo., today. He asserted one of the other two bore a striking resemblance to Karpis. The third man, officers theorized, might be Adam Richetti, Floyd's confederate since George Birdwell was killed in an Oklahoma bank holdup.

Blanchard said he stopped to assist three men whose motor car was stalled.

"As soon as I stopped I recognized Floyd and knew I had pulled a bonehead," Blanchard said. "Floyd treated me roughly and insisted that I give them my car. I told them I had just had it overhauled recently and that it would not go more than thirty miles an hour. I was quite scared and didn't know how I was going to get out of it until one of Floyd's companions said, 'Maybe you can help start us by pushing us with your car.' . . . I got them started and drove to Mexico, where I reported the incident to the sheriff."

County officers, highway patrolmen and police in the territory immediately started a search but they lost the trail 12 miles south of Mexico at an intersection of highways.

At noon, however, a new trail developed when officers received a report that three men had stopped at the farm home of Mrs. Ed Ginther, near Moberly, and asked for a towel and soap. The men explained that one of their companions had a wounded finger which he had "cut on a car door."

The farmwife said all three of the men appeared extremely nervous. Obtaining the towel and soap they hurriedly reëntered their automobile and sped north toward Cairo.

Jail Floyd's Companion.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 12.—(AP)—"Shine" Rush, a known one time companion of Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, was arrested by federal agents at a farmhouse near Norman tonight and brought to jail here. Rush did not resist arrest.

Dwight Brantley, agent in charge of the division of investigation, department of justice, who announced the arrest, said Rush was wanted for direct questioning with regard to the depredations of Floyd.

Brantley said the prisoner was wanted for questioning in a number of crimes.

Three Jailed in Iowa.

McIntire, Ia., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. L. Bostetter and daughter, Alice, tonight were in the Howard County jail at Cresco where they will be charged with harboring criminals, officers said today.

It was on the Bostetter farm one mile and a half south of here that Charles [Pretty Boy] Floyd, the southwest's hunted outlaw, was discovered yesterday.

SNOW BLANKETS MAINE; POTATO CROP PERILED

Portland, Me., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Snow missed its cue and strode upon the weather stage tonight routing the pageant of autumn in northeastern United States.

The red and brown leaves of a day ago were buried under snow of almost blizzard proportions in northern Maine.

From Caribou, Me., came reports of a 10 inch white blanket—with the snow still falling—and Presque reported 14 inches.

Around the St. Lawrence river territory roads were drifted high. Telephone and power lines were down in some sections, cutting off entire towns. Maine farmers on the Canadian border feared for their unharvested potato and wheat crops.

Two hundred telephone poles and 100 power line poles were cut down by the storm in the vicinity of Caribou. Many towns were without telephones, light, or power.

Scattered snow fell in upper New York state, and the northern Adirondacks felt temperatures of 20 to 25.

As far south as New York City, hurrying throngs snuggled into heavier coats with the temperature around 40.

Ex-Service Men to Attend Dinner in Honor of Brooks

Former service men of the Tenth congressional district will assemble at a testimonial dinner tonight for C. Wayland Brooks, widely known Chicago attorney and candidate for congressman at large in the November election. The dinner will be held in the Sovereign hotel, 6200 North Kenmore avenue. So many reservations already have been received, according to Joseph F. Novotny, chairman of the committee in charge, that it will be an overflow affair.

JURY OF EXPERTS TO HOLD INQUEST IN $50,000 BLAST

A coroner's jury of engineers and ammonia refrigeration experts will be impaneled today by Chief Deputy Coroner Schlagel to investigate the $50,000 explosion which wrecked the Central Cold Storage company, 350 North Dearborn street, early yesterday and caused the death of two men.

The dead were John Gunia, 49 years old, of 1418 West Superior street, a watchman employed at the plant, and John H. Kilgore, 53 years old, of Sioux City, Ia., a baggage man for the North Western railroad. Twenty other persons were seriously injured.

The force of the blast tore up sidewalks adjacent to the 14 story cold storage plant, damaged a building across the street, and broke windows within a radius of half a mile.

Gunia, who was on the loading platform, was killed when he was hurled into the street, and Kilgore was crushed by flying débris as he was passing on the sidewalk. Fire Chief Michael Cody of the Second battalion said the explosion was caused by the bursting of a flywheel on machinery in the basement. Parts of the huge wheel were hurled against the ammonia condenser, breaking it and liberating thousands of cubic feet of the gas, which expanded with explosive effect. No fire followed the explosion.

For a time last night police were puzzled by the mysterious disappearance of Joseph Fornaciari, 2418 West 25th street, an oiler in the plant. Later, however, he was found at his home and taken to the East Chicago avenue police station for questioning. He admitted he was in the boiler room at the time of the explosion. After questioning him police began a search for his brother-in-law, Thomas Thompson, 6320 South Komensky avenue, assistant chief engineer, who is wanted for questioning.

10 Groups Are Hosts

John Yannis, newly appointed Greek consul in Chicago, was the guest last night at a banquet in the International restaurant, 705 South Halsted street, sponsored by the board of directors of the ten Greek communities in Chicago. Seventy guests attended, including Bishop Callistos of the Greek orthodox church. Spyros Kotakia was chairman of the affair.

BERLIN'S HARVARD CLUB SUPPORTS AID OF HITLER

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—(AP)—In an outspoken resolution, Berlin's Harvard club today announced its support of Ernst Hanfstaengl, Nazi press chief, in his scholarship squabble with Harvard university.

(Harvard recently refused to permit Hanfstaengl, a Harvard graduate, to provide a fund to permit some students to study in Germany.)

The resolution of the club questioned Harvard's refusal as being perhaps "a mere expression of one sided information." The club approved Hanfstaengl's attitude of assuming that Harvard's refusal to accept his offer is not necessarily final.

"As the outpost of Harvard in Germany," the resolution stated, "the club feels that it is its duty to advise President Conant and the fellows [of Harvard] regarding conditions under which German universities are working today." To that end a committee of three was appointed to make an investigation of and to report findings on the present day activities of German universities.

POLITICAL-GANG PLOT REPORTED IN KANSAS CITY

Union Station Massacre Evidence Uncovered.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The Washington Evening Star said today that federal agents investigating the Kansas City Union station massacre had uncovered evidence of a political and gangster combine so startling in its implications that a federal grand jury investigation would be instituted almost immediately.

Rex Collier said in the Star story that two men who had figured prominently in the government's evidence already had been slain by gangsters and the grand jury inquiry was being hastened for fear that other important figures in the massacre of June 17, 1933, might be killed.

Listed as Gang Victims.

The story added:

"The two who were slain by gangster enemies while federal officers were investigating them were John Lazia, 'boss' of Kansas City's north side, and Verne Miller, former Dakota sheriff and outlaw, identified as one of the 'trigger men' in the station slayings.

"James La Capra, gangster rival of Lazia; Richard T. Galatas, ex-politician and swindler; Mrs. Elizabeth Galatas, wife of the latter, and a number of other witnesses are being closely guarded by government officers. La Capra and Galatas have requested that they be kept in jail for 'self protection.'

"William Stanley, assistant to Attorney General Cummings, in announcing the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Galatas at New Orleans on Sept. 22, declared this week that the Kansas City slayings have been 'solved.'

New Information Withheld.

"Some of the information gleaned by agents of the division of investigation of the department was disclosed at that time, but a mass of sensational data is being withheld until the grand jury meets in Kansas City Oct. 21.

"Ramifications of the conspiracy resulted in the machine gun murder of Federal Agent Raymond Caffrey, three police officers, and their prisoner, Frank Nash, are said to extend high into former official and political circles of the Missouri city."

Questioned in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Government efforts to link John Lazia, slain political leader of Kansas City's north side, with the slayings of four officers and their prisoner in front of the Union station here June 17, 1933, resulted in the questioning today of six associates and a political rival of Lazia.

The swiftly moving developments also included the arraignment of Mrs. Vivian Miller, identified by authorities as the widow of Verne Miller, one of the machine gunners, on a charge of conspiracy to release a federal prisoner. The prisoner, Frank Nash, was killed accidentally in the burst of gunfire directed at the officers by Nash's would-be rescuers.

6 YOUTHS SEIZED IN WAR AGAINST SCHOOL OF CRIME

Confess Killing and 100 Robberies.

The notorious "42" gang, an underworld training school for young criminals, was believed to have been crushed yesterday with the capture by police of six young leaders of the organization.

Seized by a squad led by Thomas Torpy, who was assigned by Capt. John Norton of the Maxwell street station to break up the gang which has been in existence for nine years, the six confessed to one murder and more than 100 robberies.

Admits Part in Killing.

The confessed murderer, the detectives said, is Frank Zucchero, alias Joe Venezia, 18 years old, 1443 Taylor street, who told of having participated in the killing of Earl L. Wilk, a beer truck driver, during a holdup on June 1, 1933. Two other youths have already been sentenced for their part in this slaying.

The others arrested are Zucchero's brother, Joe, 22 years old; Joseph Amore, 19 years old, 1430 Edgemont avenue; Anthony Fosca, 18 years old, and his brother Eddie, 17 years old, both of whom gave the Edgemont avenue address, and Anthony D'Agastino, 17 years old, 1016 South Winchester avenue, who, the police say, escaped from the St. Charles school for boys a year ago.

While the capture of the six was important because it cleared up more than 100 minor crimes in addition to the slaying of the beer truck driver, Detective Torpy said it was significant as a heavy blow in the campaign carried on against the "42" gang for nearly two years.

Experts in Many Crimes.

During the last years of prohibition, the police said, the gang was active in all sorts of crime. The members were expert in automobile theft, and were known to have furnished cars for the machine gun murders of their seniors in the alcohol and bootleg gangs.

From 1926 until 1933 the youths, while concentrating on automobile larceny, tried nearly every other form of crime, from coin box looting and window breaking to pay roll robbery, mail robbery, bank robbery, and murder. Promising members of the "42" gang, as a result of proficency in their art, were from time to time "graduated" into the Moran, Capone, and other senior gangs, according to the police.

For a long period police would recover from five to thirty "stripped" cars in the Maxwell district a week, but recently, the officers said, the gang's activities in this line had been checked. Lately the gang has been active in hi-jacking meat and clothing trucks.

139 Sent to Prison.

Detectives Torpy, John Tuohy, and Joseph Lenert were assigned to break up the gang, and since the first of the year they have sent 139 boys and young men, all from the neighborhood, to prison. They have made more than 1,000 arrests. The six held yesterday are the last of the known criminals in the district.

Wilk, a driver for the Pabst Distributing company, was killed at Roosevelt road and Winchester avenue, when he and his helper, John Hayden, were slow in raising their hands during a holdup. George Pucci, 18 years old, and Frank Rago, 17 years old, have already been sentenced for their share in the shooting.

11 PRESBYTERIAN MINISTERS FACE HERESY TRIALS

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The Rev. H. McAllister Griffiths of this city today gave out a statement that he "and others" have presented charges of heresy to the stated clerk of the presbytery of Philadelphia against eleven local signers of the "Auburn affirmation."

The statement said the filing of the charges is the "formal step to initiate the first heresy trial in the Presbyterian church in the United States held in thirty years."

The statement adds that 1,300 of the 10,000 ministers of the Presbyterian church in the United States signed the "affirmation," and that the steps taken today are "regarded as in the nature of a final test to determine whether modernists or old line Presbyterians shall control the church."

The names of the eleven ministers given in the statement are:

George Emerson Barnes, Alford H. Boggs, Francis De Simone, Alvin B. Gurley, Edward Yates Hill, John A. MacCallum, Alexander MacColl, J. H. C. Mackie, William R. Rearick, Edward B. Shaw, and Robert B. Whyte.

The eleven ministers, according to the statement given out, are charged "with teaching that the doctrin of the inerrancy of the Holy Scriptures is not to be received as taught in the scriptures or in the subordinate standards of the church."

STATE SENATOR'S HOME ROBBED.

Confesses Stealing Ring to Get Cash for Wedding

F. Raymond Smith, 26 years old, 1207 Leland avenue, confessed to police yesterday that he had stolen a diamond ring and $5 from Mrs. Helen Anderson, 4533 North Francisco avenue, at whose home he had been staying and whose daughter, Beatrice, he was planning to marry. He explained he committed the theft to get money for his marriage, and had sold the ring for $90.

SERBIA GRIPPED BY FEAR; BOY KING ARRIVES AT HOME

Troops Called to Guard Against Assassination.

BULLETIN.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 13. [Saturday.]—(AP)—King Peter II of Jugo-Slavia arived here at 9 a. m. today to take the throne of his assassinated father, Alexander.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 12.—Serbia's capital lived through a day of uneasiness and rumors on the eve of the arrival of its boy king, Peter II., from Paris.

Peter, who crossed the Jugo-Slavian frontier from Austria tonight, will arrive here at 9 a. m. tomorrow. He will be met by the three regents who will help him rule, headed by Prince Paul, cousin of the slain King Alexander. The cabinet and thousands of school boys will also greet him. After having been offered bread and salt by the mayor of Belgrade, in accordance with a picturesque Serbian tradition, he will be whisked away down a street lined with bayonets to his heavily guarded palace at Cedinje, on a hill outside Belgrade.

Prepare to Receive Body.

As the young king arrives here tomorrow delegations will leave for Split, on the Adriatic coast, to meet the destroyer Dubrovnik, which is on its way from Marseilles with the remains of Alexander.

The ship will reach Split Sunday morning, but that is not for the moment the concern of this stricken nation, divided by intrigue and terror because of its conflicting elements. Every one is asking now how the strong dictatorship which Alexander represented and which apparently was required to keep together the various staves of the Jugo-Slav barrel, can be replaced with success by a multicephalous regency.

On all sides of Belgrade tonight there were rumors. The city was a welter of unconfirmed suspicion and fear, and the very fact that outwardly everything is calm seems to many a bad omen.

Call Troops to Guard King.

One thing seems certain, and that is that no stone will be left unturned tomorrow to see that the tragedy of Marseilles is not repeated here. All the might of Belgrade's military garrisons will be mobilized to reinforce the police in protecting the life of the 11 year old curly headed Peter, who until a week ago was a happy schoolboy in Surrey, England.

It is this arrival of the boy king that seems to stir all the elements of the population to a sense of uneasiness. This sense seems centered around two things. One is the admission of the press bureau that there have been demonstrations against Italy at Ljubljana, Zagreb, and Sarajevo. These demonstrations do not appear to have been serious. It is the usual custom here to demonstrate against Italy when foreign affairs become complicated.

The question, arises, however, as to what is the purpose of these demonstrations. Are they planned or are they intended to divert attention deliberately?

Fear Plots and Intrigue.

The second disturbing element is the apparent misgivings of many here as to the ability of this regency or any regency in a Balkan country to long endure. Constant efforts and intrigue by power seekers to undermine the government are feared.

Belgrade today insists the murderer of Alexander was a Croatian. That may be the Serbian version, but it differs from that of Zagreb, capital of Croatia. The chief of the foreign office today maintained that the murderer, who as yet has not definitly been identified, was a member of a band of Croatian terrorists abroad. These terrorists, however, are not representative of Croatians living at home, he said.

Amidst all this fever Belgrade is trembling expectantly for Alexander's funeral next week and the events to follow.

Peter Reaches Serbian Soil.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

JESENICE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 12.—Young King Peter reached Jugo-Slav soil here tonight, remembering with tears in his eyes that here just twenty-four days ago his father said goodby to him as he left for school in England. His father's last good-by, as Peter recalled it, appeared to indicate a premonition of his approaching death. King Alexander said to the boy, then crown prince:

"Son, now we must part. I have work to do here. You must go to school in England. Be industrious, good, and wise. Remember the great task that awaits you in the future."

The king then kissed Peter affectionately and turned aside to wipe away his tears. It was the last time he saw his son.

2 CROATS ADMIT TERRORIST PLOT TO MURDER KING

It was shoe boxes that helped the police prove Pospisil. Ratich and Benes stopped at Lausanne, for they bought shoes there, and the numbers of their shoes were the same as those sold at the Lausanne store.

Novak, incidentally, is the name of the special bodyguard of President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, while Benes is the name of the Czech foreign minister.

Jugo-Slavia May Protest to League.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Oct. 12.—On the heels of the confessions tending to implicate a terrorist organization in Hungary in the Marseilles assassinations, there suddenly arose here tonight the possibility of Jugo-Slavia bringing the whole matter before the league of nations council in urgent session.

Konstantine Fotitch, permanent Jugo-Slav delegate to the league, who has been present at much of the questioning of the suspects just across the French border from here, sent to Belgrade tonight the information they gave and there is good reason to believe he recommended that Jugo-Slavia move swiftly to put the international problem raised before a special council meeting.

See "Grave Situation."

They consider that they have evidence now that Alexander's assassination was organized on the territory of Jugo-Slavia's neighbor, Hungary, by a band of terrorists whom they denounced before the council here in June and whom, wrongly or rightly, they feel morally certain remained there with the connivance of the Hungarian government. They say they are anxious to put into the hands of the council as soon as possible the responsibility for deciding in full publicity just what is the rôle of Hungary in this question.

Cleveland Consulates Involved.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 12—(AP)—Dr. B. Kalda, Czechoslovakian consul here, tonight said the genuine passport bearing the same number as the forged document carried by Vronomir Pospisil, alias Yaroslav Novak, who is held in France in connection with the Marseilles assassinations, had been issued here on Oct. 24, 1929, to Joseph Turcan, Detroit, Mich.

The passport was issued for one year only, Dr. Kalda said, but it might have been renewed. There was no record as to whether Turcan, a laborer, had returned to this country.

Turcan previously had a passport issued in Zlatemoravce, Czechoslovakia, on Oct. 11, 1922, Dr. Kada said. Turcan was born June 31, 1882, in Hostie, Czechoslovakia.

NAZI FREIGHTER LEAVES CITY WITH CARGO OF PITCH

Flying the Nazi swastika on its bow, the German freighter Breitenburg of Hamburg was towed through the river yesterday bound for Europe. The vessel loaded a cargo of pitch at the Edward Hines Lumber company docks on the south branch of the river. Her passage through the loop bridges drew crowds who stared at the Hitler emblem, blue on a red and white field, which fluttered in the afternoon sunlight. To a newspaper photographer taking a picture of the small freighter the crew grinningly gave the Nazi salute.

Mussolini Will Send Envoy to Murdered King's Funeral

Assertions that Belgrade newspapers have been printing erroneous reports of King Alexander's assassination which cast suspicion on foreign countries caused particular uneasiness here.

Nevertheless Premier Mussolini sent the cruiser Giosanno and destroyers to pay tribute to the assassinated king as his funeral ship passed off Italy's shores. The premier also made plans to be represented at the king's funeral.

Fear Serbs May Accuse Others.

Some influential circles expressed the fear that Jugo-Slav suspicion might deliberately be trained on outside countries in order to steer the people's attention away from internal differences.

At the same time the Giornale d'Italia in an extra edition tonight said the Belgrade government's foreign policy for the moment apparently had not been changed.

La Sera of Milan also called attention to this fact, but asked, "What will happen tomorrow?" The Milan newspaper said King Alexander had intended to listen to French counsel for a rapprochement with Italy. It also said Premier Mussolini would not have offered the olive branch to Jugo-Slavia in a speech at Milan last Saturday had he not known Belgrade was favorably disposed.

Report War on Croats.

Authoritative circles in Rome pointed to the attitude of the Italian press as well as Mussolini's act in sending a squadron of warships to escort the vessel bearing Alexander's body home as proof that Italy's feeling was unchanged.

Up to now no serious anti-foreign demonstrations have been reported from Jugo-Slavia, but the Giornale d'Italia tonight published a dispatch from a border town telling of violent provocations by the Serbs against Croatian elements of the population.

These disorders, the article said, occurred in Ljubljana, Zagreb, and Sarajevo, where Catholic churches and stores owned by Croats who are Catholics were attacked. A bomb explosion in the Sarajevo postoffice was believed to be the reply of the Croats.

Several Injured by Bomb.

The bomb, the dispatch said, injured several persons and did considerable damage. Previously a mob had sacked stores, broken into the archbishop's palace and shattered church windows.

The Italian squadron sent by Mussolini steamed slowly by the Jugo-Slavia destroyer Dubrovnik, carrying Alexander back home, and fired a final salute of honor just at sundown.

Then the Italian vessels escorted the funeral ship as far as Santa Aurua de Eluca, at the end of Italian territory. The French cruiser Colbert accompanied the Dubrovnik on toward Split, Jugo-Slavia.

[Dispatches from Messina, Italy, said the fort there fired 21 guns in salute when the Dubrovnik passed at 3:15 p. m. Italian and Jugo-Slavia flags hung at half-staf and thousands with bared heads lined the waterfront.]

The Italian mission to the dead monarch's funeral probably will be headed by the duke of Spoleto, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel. A wreath will be sent by the king to the funeral of Louis Barthou, French foreign minister.

BURGLARS SLAY GRANDMOTHER IN HUNT FOR HOARD

Mrs. Anna Soldat, 67 years old, was strangled to death last night in her flat in the rear of her little candy store at 2120 West 18th place by burglars who ransacked the place but failed to find $1,400 in cash concealed in a dresser drawer. The money belonged to her daughter. The body was found in the dining room, a towel wrapped around the head and a rope bound tightly around the neck. Her hands and feet were also bound with rope.

Mrs. Soldat, who is a widow and the mother of Police Lieutenant Robert Soldat of Berwyn, was last seen alive by her daughter Anna, 35 years old, when the latter left for the World's Fair in the morning.

Mrs. Josephine Soldat, daughter-in-law of the dead woman, who lives on the third floor of the same building, said her two children, Margaret, 13 years old, and Edward, 10, reported that "grandma's door is locked and she doesn't answer."

Suspicious, Mrs. Josephine called Marquette police. Anna, who returned shortly after the body was found, told police that the $1,400 was wrapped in cloth and in a dresser drawer. This drawer had been turned out and the money, still wrapped in the cloth, was on the floor. The burglars apparently had tossed it aside, not thinking the bundle of value.

DIES ON WAY TO HOSPITAL.

Wilbert B. Tegerdine, 13 years old, 618 Williams street, River Forest, died yesterday while being taken to the Oak Park hospital to undergo an emergency operation for appendicitis.

O. H. WRIGHT, NOMINEE FOR CONGRESS, HURT WHEN CARS COLLIDE

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Orestes H. Wright of Freeport, Democratic nominee for congress from the 13th district, was injured late today in an automobile crash at an intersection near Davis Junction, Ill.

Wright, campaigning for votes in Ogle county, south of here, collided with a machine driven by Edna Mae Otto of Rockford as he drove west on route 72 across route 70. State motorcycle patrolmen said they were told by witnesses that Wright failed to stop for the intersecting highway.

Wright was badly cut and bruised and sustained a possible skull fracture. The Rockford woman was severely cut.

SPANISH FLYERS BOMB FORT OF RADICAL REBELS

Two Officers Get Death in Catalonia.

MADRID, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Gen. Eduardo Lopez Ochoa, at the head of the regulars and foreign legionnaires, pressed hard against the last rebel outpost in the Oviedo region, the government announced today.

Aviation units bombed an arms manufacturing plant at Trubia, used as a fort by the rebels, and a surrounding army was expected to take the town shortly. The Oviedo cathedral, tomb of the former kings of Asturias and Leon, was damaged in a bombardment. The air squadrons also bombarded Las Veredas and Los Caminos, where the rebels reorganized their forces after fleeing from Oviedo.

17 Sentenced to Death.

At Barcelona two Catalonian army officers were sentenced to death for their part in the revolt. Two other army officers and seventeen civilians were sentenced to life imprisonment. Death sentences have been asked asked against three high military officials at Montjuich.

Several judges were appointed to assist in dispatching the accumulated work of the eight magistrates trying cases of those involved in the violence.

"The only task remaining is to stamp out the last smouldering fires of the rebellion," he said. "The movement as a whole has been completely crushed.

At San Sebastian police searched the office of La Prensa and confiscated arms and arrested the editor.

Madrid, Saragossa, Andalusia, Bilbao, and Barcelona were reported tranquil. At Bilbao factory workers returned to the shops. One company of soldiers sent to the manufacturing section returned with a hundred prisoners and a truckload of arms.

Report Rebel Atrocities.

LEON, Spain, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Officers of the Spanish army returning from engagements in the vicinity of Camponanes, on the fringe of the northern mining district, reported that rebels had committed a number of atrocities on civil guards and soldiers.

The civil guards barracks at Camponanes, which the revolutionists overwhelmed in the first outbreak, was destroyed.

Returning officers said they found one civil guard lieutenant whose eyes had been gouged out and said there was evidence the revolutionists had destroyed some bodies with dynamite. The officers added they had difficulty restraining the troops from committing violence against prisoners who were being transported to Leon from the battle zone. The soldiers, they said, were much aroused by the reports of atrocities to which their comrades allegedly were victims.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—While thousands of citizens of high and low degree filed slowly past the bier of Foreign Minister Louis Barthou in the clock room of the Quai d'Orsay today, many distinguished visitors from foreign countries began arriving for the national funeral tomorrow. Barthou was assassinated Tuesday with King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia.

An impressive ceremony is planned, comprising a great military display, a funeral oration by Premier Doumergue, religious services at the Invalides and finally interment in the Pere Lachaise cemetery in the Barthou family plot.

The bier of the dead statesman is literally buried under immense quantities of flowers sent by crowned heads and humble admirers, whose tributes continued to pour in from all over the world.

CHARGES PERKINS POLICY NULLIFIES ANTI-RED EFFORT

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins "pulled the teeth" of the only defense of the United States against communism by abolishing the board appointed to ferret out and deport those pledged to forceful overthrow of democracy, Attorney Lloyd D. Heth charged yesterday in a talk before the Executives' club in the Hotel Sherman.

Communism, Mr. Heth said, has penetrated to prominent administrative heads in Washington, giving rise to a new school of thought tending toward autocracy. He charged that not even the investigation into communist activities in 1931 has failed to check communism, and criticized what he called the lethargic attitude whereby communistic enemies of the government are permitted to run for the country's highest offices.

BAVARIAN BISHOP PRISONER; MOB TAUNTS HITLER

Meisser's Ouster Enrages Protestants.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUNICH, Germany, Oct. 13.—Bishop Hans Meisser, who was ousted as primate of the Protestant church in Bavaria today, is a prisoner in his palace. The bishop was formally removed by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller on charges of opposition to the state.

Demonstrators protesting against the removal of the dissenting bishop openly derided Hitlerism this evening. The demonstrators gathered in the court of the episcopal palace, shouted "Heil, Meisser," and sang hymns. Secret police mingled in the crowd and also sang lustily. They revealed their presence by giving the Nazi salute when the demonstrators shouted "Heil, Meisser!"

Bishop Recalled to Palace.

After repeated shouts for Meisser to appear, the deposed bishop stepped to a balcony. He began to address the throng, but had uttered only a few words of gratitude for their support when he was recalled to the palace. His wife then appeared and cried:

"Please go home!"

The crowd dispersed. One section of the crowd, angered because Meisser was being held a prisoner, marched to the Brown House—the Nazi headquarters in Berlin.

There they spat on the ground and shouted taunts at the Nazi church administration, the Nazi government, and at Chancellor Hitler, who is in Munich. The outbreak of hostility was the most pronounced since Hitler ascended to power.

"The removal of Bishop Meisser," it was predicted by followers of the deposed primate, "will weaken Nazidom either through its highhanded autocracy if it wins or, if the church fight continues to grow as it has in the last few days, through its retrogression."

Hold Protest Services.

Services of protest against the bishop's removal and against a "violation of liberties within the Protestant church" were held in all Protestant churches of Bavaria.

Dean Sammetreich, close friend of Meisser, spoke at St. Matthews, the deposed bishop's cathedral. The speaker was brought to the church in a state limousine with Hitler Guards acting as an escort. Secret police sat among the 1,500 worshipers.

Sammetreich told the congregation their bishop was a prisoner in his own palace and vigorously attacked Dr. Mueller, the Nazi church dictator, for dragging politics into the church.

"This type of church leadership, which is hiding behind the fuehrer's [Hitler's] leadership, is nothing but a papacy similar to the one against which Martin Luther fought," he cried. "Force is being used in the most brutal manner against the highest officers of the Bavarian church. I want you to know that members of the supreme church council waited for hours to see Bishop Meisser today, but were unable to get into contact with him. He is a prisoner. None is allowed to talk to him."

Board to File Protest.

A formal resolution was read directing the board of directors of St. Matthews to protest against "the illegal invasion of the Evangelical state church." The resolution also protested the bishop's removal. The resolution will be sent to the highest authorities in the state.

It was believed in church circles that the Nazi church dictatorship will order the arrest of opposition pastors who protested the bishop's ouster in tonight's church services.

Meisser's dismissal was brought about by Prussian secret police who were imported into Bavaria by Church Commissioner August Jaeger, following upon a popular demonstration by the Bavarian bishop's followers last night when police had to draw their sabers to disperse them.

In the absence of Meisser and other members of the Bavarian supreme church council, Jaeger, with his Prussian police, invaded the administration building of the state's Lutheran church, seized the funds and declared Bishop Meisser and his associates deposed.

The announcement said the bishop had been removed from office for his "consistent refusal to execute the constitutional laws of the German Evangelical Lutheran church."

STATE HIGH COURT DENIES WRIT PLEA FOR STOLTZMANN

The state Supreme court at Springfield yesterday refused to hear a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for Ralph Stoltzmann, president of local 1022 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employés of America, which has been conducting a strike against the Chicago Motor Coach company, and Lewis Patton, a bus striker. The court refused to take jurisdiction, holding that the writs should be sought in Chicago courts.

Stoltzmann, who has been indicted with William Taber and Joseph J. Kehoe, officials of the street car men's union, and seven others on charges of murder in connection with two deaths attributed to the bus strike, had not appealed to the Criminal court here for his release. State's Attorney Courtney said Stoltzmann has made a confession implicating himself in the campaign of violence directed against the bus company.

Attorney Maclay Hoyne, representing the union, filed the petition at Springfield. He said after its dismissal that he was awaiting the return to the city of Taber and Kehoe. The two union leaders are said to be attending the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco, but inquiries in the California city yesterday revealed that they have not registered at the convention.

State's Attorney Courtney said the indicted officials may have an immediate trial if they wish. Charges are to be placed against a half dozen prisoners held in connection with strike violence or they will be released today, the prosecutor said.

DIES AS RESULT OF FALL.

PRESSURE OF PROTESTS FORCES NAZIS TO RUSH RED'S TREASON TRIAL

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—(AP)—The forthcoming trial of Ernst Thaelmann on charges of treason in connection with the Reichstag fire, will be hastened, it was generally believed today, by the pressure of protests.

A responsible government official announced yesterday the former German communist leader will be tried shortly before the newly created Peoples' court. The date was not set, but the official said it would be after Oct. 15.

Thaelmann was among the first arrested after the fire, and has since been in jail. During this period the Nazi government has listened to a flood of world protests which compare the Thaelmann case with the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The official declined to say what penalty would be demanded. During the last month dozens of communist trials have been conducted in the border cities with average sentences about five years.

TAXICAB OWNERS HEAR WARNING OF GROWING TAXES

Convention Opens; NRA Called Problem.

Business is facing a burden of taxation heretofore not experienced in the United States, Frank E. Packard, chairman of the central division of the American Petroleum Industries committee, warned yesterday in a talk before the National Association of Taxicab Owners, which opened its convention at the Hotel Sherman.

"The United States today is testing the burdens of taxation with which Europe has become familiar," he declared. "Last year the cost of government in this country was approximately seventeen billions of dollars, while the gross income of the people was approximately forty billions. Therefore, of every item purchased, seventeen-fortieths of the cost was due to taxation."

Holds No Hope of Relief.

Declaring "there is no relief in sight," Mr. Packard added that the oil industry is the most heavily burdened by taxation of all the business groups.

With twelve billion dollars invested, Mr. Packard said, the oil industry last year paid a tax of $1,180,000,000, or nearly ten per cent.

While in proportion to the amount of property owned by taxicab companies a fair burden of taxation on that industry would be $2,000,000, he continued, the industry paid $8,000,000 in motor fuel taxes and $4,000,000 in various other levies.

Tells of NRA Problems.

"If you had the money you paid in taxes," he said, "and the government had your net earnings, you would be infinitly better off."

A. L. Belleisle, chairman of the legislative committee of the taxicab owners' association, declared at the morning session that the taxicab industry is having a difficult time in adjusting itself to the NRA. The convention is studying a proposed code.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST BUYING LIQUOR RECEIPTS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Investors were warned today against buying warehouse receipts for new whisky with a view to selling them at a huge profit when the liquor has reached bottled-in-bond age.

Dr. James M. Doran, supervisor of the distiller's code authority, issued the caution in a letter to Director Louis Rothschild of the better business bureau of Washington. The bureau said other bureaus throughout the country had reported former stock and oil salesmen had turned to whisky warehouse receipts "promising large returns to the investing public."

In the first place, he explained, the code prevents a distiller from disposing of whisky in bulk to others than distillers, rectifiers, or state dispensaries. Then, he added, it is reasonable to expect they would prefer to buy the receipts direct from the distiller and not through a third or fourth party who might be holding warehouse receipts as investments."

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—An 80 year old Shelbyville woman, charged with possession of liquor and a still today won a reversal of conviction from the Indiana Supreme court. The woman, Mrs. Sarah B. Wood, was sentenced to one to five years in woman's prison in 1931, when liquor and a still were found beneath a garage. She disclaimed knowledge of its presence there and the Supreme court ruled her conviction was on too circumstantial evidence.

PRESIDENT PUTS GARMENT MILLS ON 36 HOUR WEEK

"This is probably the last time I'll see so many of you," Williams said.

"This isn't a spectacular nor a glamorous phase of NRA," he went on. "That order had a very definite asset value, but it is the view of the board that our task now is different. Ours is rather more the workaday job. We will consider the codes, made hurriedly and on an experimental basis, in a deliberative spirit. We will lay them on the table, put them under glass, and see whether changes might be indicated."

GREEN IS RE-ELECTED

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor re-elected President William Green late today after enlarging its executive committee from 11 to 18 members and adopting a resolution describing as "biased, unfair, and inconsiderate" the membership of S. Clay Williams, tobacco official, upon the new NRA board.

The federation's 54th annual convention, after shouting down attempts by alleged communists to introduce a set of proposals, adopted unanimously the resolution condemning Williams' attitude toward labor and asking President Roosevelt to investigate his record.

Green's Election Unanimous.

The election of Green also was unanimous. He was nominated by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. Green first was elected president in December, 1924. He was born in Coshocton, O., March 3, 1873, and was sub-district president of the United Mine Workers of America from 1900 to 1906.

The executive council, administrative and policy making group of the organization between conventions, was increased in size to provide "a greater representation for more of the A. F. of L. crafts." Lewis sponsored the proposal, which provides for election of seven additional vice presidents to the five already provided.

Call Selection 'Improper.'

The committee recommending the Williams resolution told the convention it was "improper to appoint an individual to the NRA whose public record shows him opposed to trade unions and to collective bargaining as set forth in sections 7-A and 7-B of the NRA."

"It is difficult," said the report, "if not impossible, for trade unions to cooperate with an individual who denies their right to organize."

As adopted, the resolution called the President's attention to "the biased, unfair, and inconsiderate" position of Williams.

The NRA board member was accused of having said 40 cents an hour was an "excessive minimum wage" to be made effective for skilled workers; that he opposed a code for his own industry [tobacco]; and that when a code finalyl was "forced" for that business he presented a provision which would have permitted wages as low as 12 cents an hour.

Refuse to Censure Kohler.

By a narrow margin the convention just before adjournment tonight declined to adopt a resolution protesting against the use of the company union of the Kohler Manufacturing company of Kohler, Wis., as an agency for collective bargaining.

Henry Ohl Jr., Milwaukee, representing the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, asked the convention to do something to give the Kohler employés relief from what he called "the deliberate interference of the company with the employés' free choice of a union."

Ohl attacked the company for what he described as its attempt to form a company union, into which, he said, it brought all its workers and also workers outside the company, including city employés, thereby establishing a majority.

John Frey, secretary of the resolutions committee, said the Kohler employés had voted to accept the company's union as their bargaining agency.

"We cannot participate in elections and then challenge the result unless we can show that the election was unfair," Frey declared.

EDITORS RENAME KUHN CHAIRMAN OF A. P. GROUP

Oliver Owen Kuhn of the Washington Star was reëlected chairman of the executive committee of the Associated Press Managing Editors' association yesterday at the final session of the organization's annual convention, held at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Following the final meeting, which was preceded by sessions devoted to discussions of problems confronting the Associated Press and the newspapers which have its service, the editors attended a banquet last evening at the hotel.

of the hurtling automobile, though its passage was noted in several communities. But somewhere in the rolling hills of central Kentucky the husband apparently met a go-between or the actual kidnapers of his wife. There he supposedly handed over $50,000 in small currency in exchange for a promise that his wife would be returned to him.

By 1:15 p. m., four hours after he drove away, Stoll was back in his home, which is eight miles from Louisville proper. A few hours later he made his announcement concerning the latest developments of the sensational case.

Report Woman in Car.

According to some reports another automobile containing a woman with a bandaged head preceded the Stoll car in its dash into the hilly country. Whether the woman was Mrs. Stoll, whose head had been split by the kidnaper who wielded an iron pipe on her in her home, there was no clew, for the car was not stopped.

Berry Stoll had nothing to say further than his formal announcement concerning his automobile trip or whether he was pursuing a car believed to contain his wife.

An arrest was made in the case this afternoon in Charleston, W. Va., but while a man was held incommunicado for questioning by federal investigators police expressed the belief that he had no connection with the kidnaping.

Brunette Hair in Auto.

The man arrested is Walter Childers, 29, an unemployed telephone lineman. He was seized after police found strands of brunette hair in an automobile he brought here from Louisville.

The man asserted he did not know the Stoll family. He disclaimed knowledge of the kidnaping, and explained that he obtained the car in a trade with a Louisville man, Lawrence Holmes.

Six department of justice agents went to Smith's Grove, Ky., near the Tennessee border and questioned William Crump, who reported last night that he had seen an automobile containing two men and a woman who resembled pictures of Mrs. Stoll.

Crump told of seeing the two men duck down as they passed him. He got the license number, and police learned that the plates had been issued for a machine of smaller size than the one Crump described.

Stoll Maid Absolved.

Authorities working on the case announced today that their investigations had entirely absolved Mrs. Woolet, the Stoll maid, of any possible complicity in the crime.

Mrs. Woolet was the only other person in the Stoll home when a pasty faced man, whom she described as later acting like a "fiend," appeared at the door and said he was a telephone repairman. She admitted him because the instrument was out of order, the wires having been cut, probably for the double purpose of supporting his ruse and to retard pursuit.

After tampering with the telephone a few minutes the man suddenly tore it away from its fastenings. Mrs. Stoll, who had been in bed ill from a severe cold and under the care of a physician, came downstairs in her negligee to ascertain the cause of the undue noise.

The kidnaper confronted her with a revolver and, under dire threats against the lives of the two defenseless women, forced the maid to tie her mistress' hands. Then he bound the maid.

An incongruous note was the fact that a 146 pound Great Dane dog played about the room while his mistress was being roughly handled and kidnaped.

After nearly an hour and a half in the house, during which time he beat Mrs. Stoll on the head with an iron pipe when she offered him a check to let her go, the kidnaper forced his victim to accompany him.

CHICAGO RELATIVES OFFER AID.

Three Chicago women, all relatives of Mrs. Alice Stoll of Louisville, who is now in the hands of kidnapers, arrived at the Stoll home in Louisville yesterday to offer what help and solace they might.

They are Mrs. Ernest High Noyes, 1242 Lake Shore drive, a second cousin of Mrs. Stoll; Mrs. Noyes' daughter, Mrs. George T. Senseney, of 1350 North State street, and Mrs. Henry C. Murphy of the Lake Shore Drive hotel, wife of a vice president of the Upper Avenue bank, 919 North Michigan avenue.

A fourth woman, also socially prominent and also a second cousin of Mrs. Stoll, is Mrs. Joshua Roberts of Geneva. Mrs. Senseney was threatened with kidnaping on the eve of her wedding two years ago, when her father was ordered to pay $3,000 on pain of having his daughter abducted.

Woman Wounds Self While Handling Revolver in Home

Mrs. Wilma Alcorn, 42 years old, of 1640 East 50th streetfi wife of William R. Alcorn, president of the Tousey Varnish company, was taken to the Illinois Central hospital last night with a bullet wound in the chest. The wound was slight. Mrs. Alcorn told hospital attendants she had accidentally shot herself while handling a revolver in her home.

Baby Elephant Takes a Plane Ride

Pachyderm Calm

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Apparently unconcerned with his journey, Toto Tembo, 268 pound baby elephant, today was brought by airplane to St. Louis by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson and turned over to the St. Louis municipal zoo.

The Johnsons, noted big game hunters, flew the animal here in their own plane from New York. Mrs. Johnson explained the baby was captured when abandoned by a stampeding elephant herd in Africa and since had thrived on a milk diet.

JOHNSONS FLY TO FAIR.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson arrived at the Paulwaukee airport on the World's Fair grounds last evening in their twin motored Sikorsky amphibian plane, Osa's Ark. They were piloted by Boris Sergievsky, chief test pilot for the Sikorsky factory, who spent many months with the Johnsons in Africa last year flying the same ship. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson said they had come to Chicago to see the Fair. They will take off for New York City tonight.

OVER 16 MILLION ON RELIEF ROLLS AS TOTAL GROWS

Hopkins Makes Report for August.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The relief administration figured today that 4,000,000 families—within 700,000 of the all-time peak recorded at the end of the CWA last April—were dependent on relief payments during August.

Officials estimated that the 4,000,000 families included 16,000,000 individuals. The number of single persons dependent on relief in August has not yet been calculated, but it was reported at 500,000 in July.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, told newsmen that the number of relief supported families had jumped 200,000 from July to August. He intimated the load was still going up slowly.

The totals for September were not yet available.

Meanwhile other relief officials pointed the way for more of these families to earn their relief allowances by doing work similar to that which they followed before the depression.

The works division of the FERA prepared to send out, within a few days, a model record system by which local relief agencies can keep constant tab on the trades and professions of people on relief and shape work relief projects to fit their normal occupations.

"We hope it will help the local relief agencies to provide work relief projects better adapted to the skills of the needy unemployed," explained Jacob Baker, chief of the works division.

Under the plan, former occupations and the amount of working experience of all persons on relief rolls will be recorded and filed so that the number available in any craft or profession can be determined quickly when any work project is proposed.

Hopkins said at his press conference that preliminary reports from 110 principal cities indicated their relief rolls have increased very slightly from August to September, but that relief expenditures in these communities had declined from $49,308,000 in August to $46,276,000 in September.

Oct. 12, 1934.

IF there ever was a week on the farm when the pleasure of being outdoors in perfect weather more than balanced the long hours and heavy work to be done, this last week was the one. Mild Indian summer days . . . a mellow October sun . . . the woods aflame with color . . . saffron sunsets that made the yellow and orange maples even more vivid in color . . . cool nights . . . this has been the enjoyable background for work here on the farm since the first part of the week. As Louis Thurow said yesterday when I was walking through a cornfield with him:

"This has been just about the finest week of Indian summer weather that we could have asked for. Although the fall jobs are so numerous that all of us keep going from daylight to dusk, what with the big soy bean crop to be handled, the cutting and shocking of corn, the barn to be finished, and other jobs, it has been great this week because of the wonderful weather."

The binder was clattering in the fields yesterday when I was hiking through a cornfield along the road on the south side of the river. One of the boys was cutting and shocking the black eyed cowpeas next to the corn. As soon as the small test plot of this crop had been cut there was more work to be done in a 40 acre field of standing corn which has to be put in the shock. So far only a small part of this field has felt the sharp blades of the machine. When the boys are through here the wigwam shaped shocks will stand surrounded by a vivid strip of green, because the field has a six foot band of hemp around it. This planting is now six feet high and shows no effect of the early frosts. Clarence Thurow, farm manager, is leaving the hemp for the birds to feed on this winter.

I was on hand when Queen, the six month old filly, was weighed this afternoon. The boys had quite a time getting her on the scales. To do the trick Herman went to the barn for Lady, the mamma of Queen, and led the two of them down to the scales because the filly didn't want to be separated from her parent for a single minute. After considerable coaxing and fussing around, Guenther and Johnson finally got Queen on the scales. Her weight was a surprise to most of the boys, because nobody except Louis Thurow got very close in guessing her weight. Herman guessed 500 pounds and I risked a guess of 710 pounds. Louis said she ought to weigh 800 pounds. The scales said the filly weighed exactly 790 pounds, so Louis was the winner in the weight guessing contest.

Despondent because of a quarrel with her parents over her youthful romance with a school mate Elizabeth Wagner, 15 years old, a student at the Lindblom High school, attempted suicide last night by inhaling gas in her home at 6224 South Ashland avenue.

According to the information given to police the girl's parent forbade her to keep company any more with her "boy friend," whose name was not revealed. Last night the parents went visiting.

While they were gone Elizabeth went to the kitchen, closed the doors and windows, and opened two gas jets. She was found unconscious by her sister Lillian, 12 years old, who called neighbors. The neighbors, in turn, summoned a fire department inhaltor squad. Elizabeth was revived.

Night Club Girl Accused in Stabbing of Salesman

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Lillian Morel, alias Dolores Lopez, a night club dancer, was found criminally responsible by a coroner's jury today for the death of William Owen, bond salesman, who died in her apartment last Saturday after being wounded by a kitchen knife.

WOULDN'T PLAY..WORRIED PARENTS

I remember how I used to sit evenings and worry my head off about Jack. He had always been such a busy happy lad . . . but we began to notice a change in him. He lost interest in everything. Half the time he wouldn't even play and when he did he tired so quickly.

My husband tried to laugh it off—said it was because the boy was growing—but I could see that he was worried, too. And Jack wasn't growing. At least he wasn't putting on any weight. About that time we happened to spend an evening with our friends across the street.

NEIGHBORS' CHILDREN ALWAYS FULL OF PEP

Their children play like happy puppies. But that hadn't always been true, I found. They had been through our very trouble and found the answer . . . energy food. A child, I discovered, can stuff himself and still starve unless he gets plenty of energy food.

MOTHER LEARNS ENERGY SECRET

Our friends had tried many kinds of bread and decided that Wonder Bread was by far the best. It's slo-baked, you know. This means that its flavor and texture are far better . . . and that the freshness is sealed in. It means that Wonder Bread is easy to digest, that its energy is quickly available. We're all Wonder fans now . . . and you should see what it has done for our boy! He likes it so much that we never have to urge him to eat.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

Take the advice of the thousands of mothers who have learned the value of energy food! Serve plenty of slo-baked Wonder Bread at every meal. Give it to the youngsters between meals. It's natural energy food, made delicious and tender by slo-baking. Remember the name Wonder. Look for the famous red, yellow and blue balloon wrapper . . . at your grocer's.

SAME OLD LINES FLY MAIL AFTER FARLEY 'SHAKEUP'

Juggling of Identities Is Called Silly.

One of the most ludicrous aspects of the air mail fiasco brought on by Postmaster General Farley and other New Dealers in the senate and the postoffice department, concerns the reletting of the temporary contracts under which the commercial air transport operators now are carrying the mail, it was pointed out here by observers yesterday.

Last February after President Roosevelt and the postmaster general announced all postoffice contracts for transport of air mail were abrogated, the New Dealers defended their action by charging that the commercial air operators and certain Republican officials formerly of the postoffice department were "crooks and thieves." It also was stated that all the old contracts were "collusive."

Charges Challenged Quickly.

These charges were allowed to stand unproved in the courts, although they were immediately challenged, while untrained and improperly equipped army pilots were called from military fields to the transcontinental air routes. These men flew the mail over unfamiliar terrain through a period of the worst weather recorded in the history of the federal meteorological bureaus.

The army did not complain when twelve of its young pilots sacrificed their lives, but the public pressure became so great that it was necessary to hand the job back to the aviation industry.

Orders Executives Be Fired.

The postmaster general then issued a call for bids on the temporary contracts. He demanded that all officers in the commercial companies who attended certain allegedly collusive meetings in Washington be fired. He demanded also that operating companies cut themselves free from the manufacturing and banking groups with which they had been affiliated.

After this was over the only result apparent to the public was a change in names, to wit: United Air Lines, Inc., became United Airlines; American Air Lines became American Airlines, and Transcontinental and Western Air was changed to Transcontinental Western Air.

Same Concerns on Job.

Then the bids of these old renamed companies were opened and contracts were let so that these concerns still carry the mails over at least the major portion of the route mileage they had covered prior to cancelation.

How completely this is true is shown by the postoffice reports on the 26 air mail routes in operation during last June, the last month on which the department has issued full records. In December, 1933, the three big companies, United, American, and Transcontinental and eWstern Air, operated 88 per cent of all the 24,419 route miles. In June they operated 71.5 per cent.

Pound Mileage Almost Same.

Furthermore, last December they had performed 93 per cent of all the pound mileage of service. In June they performed 92.2 per cent of all the pound miles. This in spite of the fact that the postmaster general has boasted that under the temporary contracts he has "spread" the contracts and broken what he termed a "dangerous collusive monopoly."

What actually occurred, observers said, is that the postoffice department forced the big operators to protect their "pioneer rights" along certain air routes and take the temporary contracts at ruinously low rates of pay. All the major lines have lost money under the new contracts at the rate of $100,000 a month, and the recent statements of their officials to the effect that it may be necessary to liquidate all assets and get out of business is literally true.

How One Line Fares.

Here is an example of how the major lines fare under the New Deal postal contracts. United Airlines, flying the midcontinent route over three mountain ranges and a route which their pilots have followed for seven years, was in a key position when the postoffice department asked for the temporary bids because no other operator in the country had the type of multi-motored equipment demanded for this type of flying.

Accordingly the company was able to make the highest individual bids for the contracts, getting 38.5 cents per plane mile for carrying the mail. But the postal reports show that even with this high rate the company actually made money for the government during June, flying 220,502,869 pound miles at a pay of nine-tenths of one mill per pound mile. The postoffice department receives from 1.5 to 2 mills per pound mile for air mail, its own records show.

Victim Asserts He Is Not Surprised.

T. J. Cullen, owner of the United States Law Printing company at 2817 North Halsted street, which was bombed Aug. 23, said he was not surprised yesterday when he received a letter from an NRA official in Washington denying there was any basis for his charge that hoodlum tactics had been used in an attempt to enforce price-fixing provisions of the code for his business.

The letter was signed by Payson Irwin, deputy NRA administrator, who wrote:

"I have given thorough consideration to the charges contained in your telegram of Aug. 23 to the President regarding the unfortunate bombing of your plant on the morning of that day.

Says Charges Not Proved.

"The investigation conducted by Chief of Detectives J. L. Sullivan and Assistant State's Attorney Frank Donohue of Chicago, the detailed report of the Illinois NRA state compliance director, information submitted by the local code authority, your written report dated Aug. 23, and our own investigation of the entire case failed to establish your charges that terroristic methods and hoodlum tactics were used to force you into agreement with the price schedule set up by the Chicago division of the Graphic Arts Code authority.

"The administration has no choice but to enforce the code. Accordingly the complaints against you will be routed through our regular channels of procedure."

Just What He Expected.

Mr. Cullen had predicted that NRA authorities would not see the bombing in the same light that he did. After reading the letter he said:

"It's just what I expected. But what else can be expected of the NRA authorities who are entirely on the defensive in this case. I have succeeded, however, in stating the facts so that the public may judge what happened, despite attempts to prevent information from reaching the press."

The printer's last reference was to the warning published in "Galley Proof," a trade publication, by S. F. Beatty, the graphic arts code director. It informed all printers that if they communicated information regarding the code to the newspapers they were likely to become involved in difficulty with the government's law enforcing agencies.

250 Villagers Marooned by British Columbia Flood

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The village of Hagensborg was isolated by a flood today as the Bella Coola river raged over its banks and tore away highways, bridges, and communication wires. A constable who surveyed the hamlet by canoe reported through the wireless of the steamship Cardena that many of the 250 inhabitants were marooned and in danger of privation.

Prepare for Steel

Activity on the construction of THE TRIBUNE'S new radio studio building—the future home of W-G-N—that is to rise just north of Tribune Tower, centered yesterday in preparing for the steel, the cement, and the brick that will go into the structure.

Yesterday was pay day for the craftsmen employed on the job by the R. C. Wieboldt company, the contractor. Evidence that the way to help business is to keep busy was pictured in the anticipatory smiles of the workmen as they lined up to receive their checks and in their activity throughout the day.

E. Simonson, construction superintendent, explained that the men are "milling" supporting columns to get them perfectly level preliminary to erecting steel. He said this was the first time in his forty years of experience that he had seen this work done on the job. A special device is being used, he said.

The men also are starting to erect the concrete plant that will turn out the concrete for the job and preparing a hoist to haul up brick. They are removing a huge fan that was housed in a small brick structure on what will be the studio's first floor. Surveyors have been examining all steel work that is already in, so there will be no hitch when the steel for the new building arrives.

ACTION TO SPEED CALUMET HARBOR FINANCING URGED

A plea that all governmental subdivisions involved in the projected Calumet harbor improvement hasten their efforts to fulfill government requirements was made yesterday by Mayor Kelly. It followed news from Washington that the war department had modified its conditions in connection with the proposed $2,814,000 federal public works loan for the project.

The mayor received formal notification from Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, acting chief of army engineers, that the three bridges on the Calumet-Sag channel waterway route would have to be adjusted with operating machinery, but that 17 spans on the Chicago drainage canal would not need to be fixed at this time. The original requirement was that all should be adjusted.

Mayor Kelly asked Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt to take up the matter of the three bridges with Thomas J. Bowler, president of the sanitary district, and state officials. The state has agreed to adjust one of the bridges, situated at Lemont, the sanitary district has decided to handle the railroad bridge near Lemont, but procedure on the third bridge at Romeo has not been decided on.

Doctor Dies on Railway Train Nearing Chicago

EARLY TERMED COUNTERPART OF NAZI GOEBBELS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Chief of the New Deal's $750,000 propaganda corps is Stephen Early, assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, who has direct charge of press relations. Louis McHenry Howe, the President's secretary, and Marvin H. McIntyre, another assistant secretary, are also ex-newspaper men, but it is Early who deals with the White House correspondents and coördinates all the so-called press relations of the administration.

It was stated in a previous dispatch that the New Deal has no minister of propaganda, such as Herr Goebbels in the Hitler régime. The man whose position most nearly approximates that of an American Goebbels is Early.

Applicants for jobs in the government press agent battery often go to him for approval. After they get their jobs they receive their instructions in the "news policy" of the New Deal from Early. If one of them gets out of line or makes a blunder, Early frequently does the reproving.

Attend Press Parleys.

As a further precaution against lack of harmony in the New Deal's propaganda activities, the chief press agents from each department and emergency organization attend President Roosevelt's press conferences, held at 10:30 a. m. on Wednesdays and 4 p. m. on Fridays.

Early's newspaper experience dates back to the days when he covered the state-war-navy beat for a press association and Franklin D. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy.

He went overseas with a machine gun outfit and later worked on the Stars and Stripes, official organ of the A. E. F. Since the war he has served as press agent for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, advance agent for Roosevelt in the 1920 Vice Presidential campaign, correspondent for a press association, Washington representative of a movie news service, and a member of the White House secretariat. His salary is $9,500 a year, the same as McIntyre's, $500 less than Howe's.

Early has instructed his subordinates throughout the far flung ranks of the New Deal to handle their jobs "just as if you were working on a newspaper," and cautioned them against attempting to put over any propaganda.

Like College Cheer Leaders.

As a result of these instructions every one of the government press agents is as impartial as a college cheer leader. Perhaps it is natural and fitting that they should be cheer leaders, for President Roosevelt often speaks of his New Deal as a football team, plowing through all interference in its unswerving march to the goal of recovery.

Republicans point out that half a dozen press agents employed by the Democratic national committee during the Roosevelt campaign are now holding government publicity jobs, having been transferred from the party to the public pay rolls.

One of those who is still carried on the party pay roll, but who helped to get the New Deal propaganda corps functioning smoothly, is Charles Michaelson, $20,00 0a year man, who laid the groundwork for the Roosevelt campaign. Michaelson's first "trouble shooting" job for the New Deal was the treasury department, where he taught the late William H. Woodin how to handle the press.

Pupils on One Day Strike at Orland Park School

A strike called yesterday by the pupils of the Orland Park school, at 143d street and Union avenue, was a one-day affair, according to teachers and strikers. Of the 120 pupils on the roster only 12 remained at their tasks during the day. It was explained that the strikers considered they should have had a Columbus day holiday, just as city school pupils do, and took it. Promises were made that the whole striking force would return on Monday to the usual tasks.

HEADACHES are more than merely dull pains in the head. They upset the whole nervous system.

No mere pain-killer can relieve this condition as a whole. But Bromo-Seltzer is a balanced preparation of 5 medicinal ingredients. Each has a special purpose.

Dull head pain disappears. Gas on the stomach is relieved, too. You are gently relaxed. The citric salts are promptly absorbed as alkali and counteract harmful acid accumulations. The relief is more lasting.

Have Bromo-Seltzer handy at all times. Dependable . . . contains no narcotics . . . and doesn't upset the stomach. Sold in all drug-stores in bottles for the home or office medicine cabinet and in doses at the soda-fountain.

MUNDELEIN HOME FROM TRIUMPHAL VATICAN JOURNEY

Cardinal Greeted at Train —Bears Papal Gifts.

Cardinal George Mundelein brought to an end his triumphal silver anniversary journey to Rome as he stepped from the 20th Century limited at the La Salle street station yesterday morning. He was welcomed by Mayor Kelly, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, and other civic and ecclesiastical dignitaries as well as by a great throng of citizens.

During the last two months Cardinal Mundelein has been in Vatican City, where he conferred with Pope Pius, and at Rome, where he celebrated his 25th anniversary as a bishop before the altar of St. Peter's cathedral. The cardinal received many gifts for himself and for notable Catholic leaders, clerical and lay, of his archdiocese.

Will Reveal Names Later.

Before his departure from Rome, the cardinal said that he would announce the names of those to receive papal honors when he returned to this country. He would not disclose the names yesterday, saying that he would have to confer with the recipients first.

Cardinal Mundelein responded to the brief greeting of his senior auxiliary, Bishop Sheil, by saying he was glad to be at home. In an interview with reporters the cardinal spoke of the impression created abroad by the Legion of Decency. This impression, he added, is especially evident in Italy.

As to the status of the Catholic church in Europe, Cardinal Mundelein declared: "Recent years have shown a great return to the church in many European countries. There is no question but that there is a marked religious trend throughout all Europe."

Festivities Close Nov. 25.

The return of the cardinal marks a climax in the year of spiritual celebration throughout the diocese. At the cardinal's request, made in anticipation of his silver jubilee, the churches of the archdiocese have conducted missions with a view to spiritualizing the anniversary with prayers and special devotions. The festivities surrounding the anniversary will come to a formal close on Nov. 25, when the hierarchy and clergy of the country will unite in an impressive service at Holy Name cathedral.

The cardinal's first public appearance following his return will be today, when he will attend the annual luncheon of the Council of Catholic Women to be held in the Palmer house.

500,000 ATTEND EUCHARIST RITE UNDER HOT SUN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 12.—A half million Eucharistic pilgrims gathered in the open air cathedral here today at the pontifical high mass. Bishop Orihuelay of Alicante, Spain, officiated. Due partly to the Columbus day holiday, it was the greatest crowd to assemble so far at the 32d international congress.

The heat was terrific. Five hundred women and children collapsed under the broiling sun. Laymen and priests alike were permitted to cover their heads against the sun.

Cardinal Pacelli Opens Church.

While the Spanish primate was intoning the mass, Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, the papal legate, officially opened the recently completed church of Santa Rosa de Lima in a brilliant ceremony.

A choir of 500 sang as the vast crowd gathered in Palermo park. Upon the arrival of Cardinals Verdier and Hlond the mass began. In the diplomatic box sat United States Ambassador and Mrs. Alexander W. Weddell.

Bishop Irastorza Yloinaz said the prayers. The Spanish bishop read the introit, and then intoned the Gloria and sang the Pax Vobis [Peace Be to You], and the prayers up to the gospel, after which the gospel was sung.

150,000 Men Receive Communion.

Earlier in the day more than 150,000 men received communion. The ceremony began in the Plaza de Mayo at midnight. Cardinal Pacelli, with five other cardinals, participated.

President Augustin Justo and his cabinet marched in the procession, which began at the Plaza del Congresso. The Plaza de Mayo was decorated with the blue and white colors of the Argentine republic and the yellow and white papal banners.

LATVIAN ARCHBISHOP'S SLAYING LAID TO FOES IN CHURCH DISPUTE

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 12.—Latvian authorities today sought both political and church enemies of the slain Archbishop Johaan Pommer, Greek Orthodox primate of Latvia, in an effort to solve the mystery of his murder early today in a cottage, where he lived on the outskirts of Riga.

Dr. Pommer was known as an ardent foe of bolshevism. At one time he was held a prisoner in a soviet prison under a sentence of death, but later escaped. The primate also had earned the hatred of the Latvian Socialist party through speeches on the floor of the Latvian parliament, of which he was a member.

Recently the archbishop became involved in a church dispute and police are investigating the theory that his death may have resulted in connection with this. Dr. Pommer discovered financial irregularities concerning cathedral funds implicating several priests and deacons. He was to have testified today in a suit against those charged with the embezzlement of church funds.

There was another theory, that the primate may have been killed by burglars. His assassins set fire to his home in an effort to conceal the crime, but a wound was clearly visible in his forehead.

When police and firemen reached the cottage they found most of the furniture had been smashed.

The body was found on an improvised pyre consisting of a carpenter's bench covered with straw and three wooden doors.

Many objects of value were found to be missing, including important documents.

The archbishop was regarded as one of the most popular Orthodox leaders in northeastern Europe. The Greek Orthodox church in Latvia extends to about 10 per cent of the population, mostly Russians.

CHURCH HEADS SEEK UNCURBED MISSION WORK

Episcopal Group Offers Answer to Unrest.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 12.—(AP)—With the cry "Christ or chaos," the church's answer to the spiritual unrest of a troubled world, Episcopal leaders pleaded today for unrestricted continuance of foreign and domestic missions.

A joint session of the house of deputies and house of bishops at the fifty-first triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America heard Dr. Lewis B. Franklin of Washington, D. C., vice president and treasurer of the national council report a deficit of over $750,000 which only the united support of the American laity, he said, can efface.

Asks for True "Return."

Unemployment insurance and a "more equitable distribution of wealth" were questions which an earlier session today was asked to consider. In church affairs establishment of an archbishopric and elimination of the word "Protestant" from the church's name also were discussed.

Dr. Franklin's report followed an appeal by Presiding Bishop James De Wolf Perry of Rhode Island for a return "to the true spirit of the church, as it has been manifested during the last fifteen hours." Bishop Perry referred to an emotional plea by the Rev. Cornelius Trowbridge of Salem, Mass., which last night brought a crowd of 10,000 surging down the aisles of the convention hall to shower the altar with banknotes.

Collect Nearly $8,000.

Nearly $8,000, Bishop Franklin revealed today, was swept into the mission fund by this dramatic turn of events.

To the social service committee of the house of deputies went a memorial presented by the Rev. Robert Rogers of Brooklyn on behalf of the Long Island diocese, which asked the convention to support old age and unemployment insurance, the NRA, and by inference, public ownership of public utilities.

SENDS SELF MAIL AND GETS SELF CAUGHT BY U. S.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Fifty thousand dollars intended for the pockets of an alleged swindler reposed intact in a Hamilton bank today. Postal Inspector Joseph P. Nolan will bring Edward F. Louring, 36, a former soldier, here for arraignment on a charge of misusing the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Louring, who lives near Okeana, O., was arrested late yesterday as he appeared at the First National Bank and Trust company of Hamilton to present a personal plea for a $50,000 loan.

Louring's plot, said Nolan, was initiated at Indianapolis when he wrote a letter to himself at Okeana purporting to be from an army officer and saying Louring had more than $100,000 on deposit in a nonexistant federal reserve bank in Washington. Louring, continued Nolan, then sent himself a telegram to Okeana over the signature of the officer confirming the statements in the letter.

Told by the bank he must get confirmation from the Washington bank, Louring, said the inspector, went there to forward a telegram to himself over the fictitious signature of the bank cashier, saying any check of his up to and in excess of $100,000 would be honored.

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Injured in a movie fight scene, Wallace Beery was confined to his home today nursing a torn ligament in his ankle and injuries to the foot.

Beery declined an opportunity to have a double do the scene for him, and he was thrown heavily to the floor. The accident occurred yesterday afternoon in production of a picture in which Beery plays the part of P. T. Barnum, the noted showman.

Dr. Harry W. Martin said it may be several weeks before Beery fully recovers.

BOOKS

Author Tells of a Visit to Gertrude Stein

Also Reviews 'Operas and Plays' of Writer.

The Chicago premiere in November of Gertrude Stein's sensational opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," and its publication in America by Random House make this review of "Operas and Plays" a preview. Ellen du Poy, author of "One Crystal and a Mother" and other novels, is a former Chicagoan living abroad.

BY ELLEN ALIX DU POY.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of the first things I did after I returned to Paris last week from Athens (and everybody in Athens was reading "The Autobiography of Alice Toklas") was to dine with Gertrude Stein.

After dinner we went into the atelier where the Picassos are and talked about everything from pilaf under the Parthenon (she is very fond of food) to street rioting in Paris (she doesn't mind revolutions either), and then we talked about her work.

Yes, she was very pleased with the success of the "Autobiography of Alice Toklas"; they were all pleased. But the real piece of excitement was her operas, "Four Saints in Three Acts."

Now this opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," is the initial piece in the volume "Operas and Plays," published in the plain edition in Paris.

As we sat there on that divan after dinner, she told me how she came to be interested in two of the saints described in the opera.

Interest in St. Ignatius.

She became interested in St. Ignatius when she was a mere child. She spent long hours in the Church of St. Ignatius in San Francisco. The gold and the glitter of it appealed to her and the idea of St. Ignatius appealed to her.

Later in Paris she felt her interest in him revive one day when she glimpsed a porcelain group in the vitrine of an antiquaire in the Rue de Rennes. It was a large group depicting a beggar and a soldier, and a woman and the soldier were giving the beggar some money. There, thought Gertrude Stein, is St. Ignatius.

Later, in Avila in Spain, St. Therese came into it. It was while she and Alice Toklas were there in that dark, colorful, medieval little town on its windswept plateau that she began thinking about St. Therese, for Avila is St. Therese's town. She is everywhere in it. "She even got into the magpies," said Gertrude Stein.

It seemed that there were a great many magpies over Avila. They had a trick of spreading their wings and breasting the wind vertically, giving the illusion of being balanced like that, motionless in the sky.

Spirit of Convent Life.

She spent long mornings and afternoons gazing at them. They made her think of St. Therese, because they looked exactly like the Holy Ghost descending in the form of a dove upon the heads of saints in illustrated Bibles. And so she stood there among all the convents and churches of St. Therese and looked at the magpies being apocalyptically vertical in the sky and thought of St. Therese and the busy rhythmical life she led from the time she left off being a woman of the world until she died and was sainted.

And in her opera, Gertrude Stein has caught the movement and spirit of convent life—that strange, incessant movement of the Sisters as they float about in their robes. It is, said Gertrude Stein, like a dance. She has caught something of this in this line in the opera: "There can be no peace on earth, with calm, with calm . . ."

The whole piece has rhythm and sings itself even without music.

So much for "Four Saints in Three Acts." The other pieces in the volume are no less interesting.

"Capital Capitals" Applauded.

There is "Capital Capitals," which Virgil Thomson also set to music several years ago and which has been given not only in Paris but in America. It excited a great deal of comment and was applauded even by the most conservative.

In a piece which she calls "Civilization" she describes the countryside near Bilignin, where she and Alice Toklas go every summer. She has taken the peasants, the land waiting for seed in the sun, the oxen plowing the fields, the vines covering the hills, the sheep grazing in the pastures, the bees dipping into clover and given them to us in vivid flashing sentences, with a staccato intensity that quickens something besides the ear.

In "The Five Georges" she has done what she did in her volume of poems, "Before the Flowers of Friendship Faded Friendship Faded." She has used rime to intensify the series of images she wishes to evoke. The result is music but not music merely.

Other Pieces in Volume.

This volume contains a number of other pieces, which are not only arresting in content but in title—such pieces as "Am I to Go or I'll Say So," "Reread Another," "They Must Be Wedded to Their Wife," "Lynn and the College de France," "Say it with Flowers," "Louis XI, and Mme. Giraud," "Madame Recamier," and "A Movie." This latter is a very amusing skit of an American painter in Paris who becomes a taxicab driver and later becomes involved in the world war.

I cannot close without quoting from "Madame Recamier," one of the most successful and arresting pieces in the whole volume. Take the lines beginning:

"She is reclining

They will prove the length of home" and add to them this perfect description of a perfect hostess:

Never to be restless
Never to be afraid
Never to ask will they come
Never to have made
Never to like having had Little that is left then
She made it do
One and two
Thank her for everything.

And you have a Mme. Recamier who gives forth something that isn't mere charm. In other words, Gertrude Stein has painted beyond that little sofa on which David painted Mme. Recamier and the result is a portrait which has depth, light, movement, and intensity.

Then, too, throughout the opera, there are those fruity, peeled sentences that Gertrude Stein is so fond of fashioning.

"Dead Lumber in Sentences."

There is, she believes, a lot of dead lumber in most sentences and the thing to do is to pare them down, rejecting words which exist merely to fuss up the meaning or are there merely to make things pretty.

"To know what a sentence is," she says, "one must know what it is not," and this is why it is her delight to throw out as many words as possible from a sentence without destroying its meaning and nine times out of ten this wholesale expulsion results in greater emotional intensity and a satisfying exactitude. Not only that, it is the secret underlying these stark, unadorned cadences of hers, which not only haunt the ear with their music but charge the air with new and hitherto unsuspected meanings.

Gertrude likes words too well to be tactful with them. She picks up a word and examines it facet by facet as if it were some precious stone she contemplates purchasing. She examines it, weighs it, tries it in the setting she has chosen for it and if it won't do, it can hunt another purchaser. She has no use for it.

Word Hunting Is Adventure.

This search for the right word is to her pure adventure, and that is what she is—an adventuress at large among words and an indefatigable one. Nor is she as complex as some of her critics try to make out. Her mission is to make the complex simple—to strip verbosity of its useless and cloudifying frills.

She is a primer and should be approached as such. To read complexity into her simplicity is a mistake which far too many of her readers make. Her ambition is to be read and enjoyed by farmers in Wisconsin as well as by the Carl Van Vechtens of New York.

"They persist," she somewhat sadly says, "in making an enigma of me, but," she adds smiling, "my sentences do get under their skin."

Good Cook Book Can Stir Mind as Well as Appetite

There are people in the world—and your literary editor is one of them—who can get a real gustatory pleasure out of reading a well written cook book. For us "The Vicomte in the Kitchen" [Covici-Friede] is the work of an artist, mingling, as the author does, observation, imagination, and fact in a nice concoction.

The Browns, Cora, Rose, and Bob, authors of "The Wine Cook Book" [Little-Brown], also know how to titivate the mind as well as the palate.

And there's "Two Hundred Years of Charleston Cooking" [Smith-Haas], a revised edition of a classic that has little writing but a lot of "taste" in it.

For Ida Bailey Allen's "Cooking with Wines and Spirits" [Simon & Schuster], coming Sept. 12, two thousand separate and individual experiments were performed before the book was pronounced complete. Over $500 worth of wines were eaten, not drunk, during the testing. And finally "The Anatomy of Dessert," by Edward A. Bunyard [Dutton], is a full flavored urging to fruits and wine as classic dessert.

ROLLING STONE
By LOWELL THOMAS

"Lowell Thomas has traveled so widely that he is an ideal biographer of other men who have gotten off the beaten path, and in Major Dugmore he has found an ideal subject."—New York Evening Post.

MAJOR ARTHUR DUGMORE'S adventuring carried him from his Irish castle on the edge of the great bog to the Mediterranean, the Aegean, Africa, and wherever the winds of chance blew him. His father, a hot-tempered Irish officer, became involved in a peasant uprising, so he resigned his commission, gathered his family, and put to sea where there would be no rent, no taxes.

On the coast of Greece the disabled ship was driven toward the rocks infested with bandits waiting with gleaming knives. In Africa he faced his first lioness with a light shotgun.

To the interior of Russia he went by rail and a springless cart to hunt bustards. This was a prelude to many scientific expeditions to the world's far corners which established Dugmore as a painter and etcher of moment and the first great animal photographer of our time.

At forty-three Dugmore was beginning to think of settling down when the war came. He trained some of the best scouts on the Western Front and his own exploits in scouting during the great Somme offensive will raise the blood pressure of the most hardened reader of war stories.

Rolling Stone contains 311 pages, is handsomely bound, and beautifully illustrated with pictures of wild animals made from photographs and paintings by Major Dugmore.

The New York Sun calls this: "A great book of stirring times. A glance at the table of contents is all that is necessary to assure the reader that Lowell Thomas has once more done what he is famous for doing: he has put the high lights of a man's life story into a fast-moving story, crowded with incident enriched with descriptions of ports and towns and jungles that bear good witness to the impressive powers of Major Dugmore in catching, as he sails or rides or runs in and out of tight places, the beauties of the earth."

DERN LAUNCHES DRIVE TO RATIFY SEAWAY PROJECT

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Secretary of War Dern opened today the administration's new campaign to have the St. Lawrence seaway and power project ratified by congress.

Dern, in a speech prepared for delivery today, set the total cost of the seaway at $543,429,000 and said:

"If the present generation is to reap the benefits from this great undertaking it should be speedily started. Its prosecution should go hand in hand with the development of the interior waterway system of the Mississippi river, with which it is so closely associated.

"The opposition to ratifying the treaty," he said, "is due to a variety of reasons. Certain of our seaboard communities, having prospered by reason of heavy expenditures of public funds for harbor development, now object to similar expenditures to benefit other sections of the country.

"There is an understandable, but I believe, a short sighted opposition on the part of the railroads, which fear a diversion of traffic. Some objection has been raised by the people of Chicago who fear, but I am satisfied without adequate reason, that the project will further reduce the amount of water to be drawn from Lake Michigan for sewage disposal purposes, a question that has been adjudicated by the Supreme court."

HEARING WEEK PROGRAM UNDER WAY TOMORROW

National hearing week will be observed, starting tomorrow, by the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing and its constituent leagues, according to announcement yesterday. Special emphasis will be laid on early detection of signs of deafness in children. Deafness often can be prevented if discovered in time, the announcement said.

In connection with the week's activities the Chicago Woman's club will sponsor an all-day exhibit of handwork of young boys and girls in the Victory workshop of the Haven school, 1472 Wabash avenue, on Monday. In the evening there will be a dinner at which Dr. John A. Lapp, member of the labor board of petroleum industries, will speak on "Rehabilitation and Employment for the Hard of Hearing."

G. F. M'CLELLAND, RADIO PIONEER, SHOT TO DEATH

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—George F. McClelland, 39, former vice president of the National Broadcasting company and a pioneer in commercial radio broadcasting, was found shot to death, apparently a suicide, tonight in the offices of the Broadcasting Stations corporation, which he formed a year ago.

A cleaning woman found the body. Mr. McClelland was slumped over his desk with a revolver clutched in his hand on the desk. The bullet had passed through his head and had struck the wall of the office.

The police said that a note had been found on the desk beneath the body, but they did not make it public.

Mr. McClelland entered radio work shortly after the world war. He leaves his widow and two children.

HORSE THROWS KICKS COWBOY AT NEW YORK RODEO

New York, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Tex Doyle, Amarillo, Tex., cowboy, suffered serious injuries today in the rodeo at Madison Square Garden when he was kicked by his horse after being thrown to the turf in the bareback broncho riding contest.

The Texas rider was thrown clear, but the horse turned and jumped on the cowboy, kicking him in the head and back. Doyle was taken to a hospital suffering from a badly lacerated back and possible skull fracture.

SHIP BREWERY TO MAKE BEER FOR ALASKANS

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 12.—(AP)—A floating brewery is being built here today to carry schooners of suds to the sourdoughs of Alaska.

Beer will be bottled and barreled aboard the old schooner Alumnus as she sails along the southern coast of Alaska, from the Yukon to the Aleutian Islands.

Alaska has been lacking supplies of beer ever since repeal, for the malt beverage is too bulky to be transported easily in any considerable quantities, and long distances between cities make for high freight charges.

Business men of Seattle and Ketchikan who interested themselves in the venture chose the four masted schooner Alumnus for refitting with all the equipment of a brewery. She is to be towed about while beer is made, smaller craft ferrying it ashore.

She is to leave Seattle toward the end of October with 600 barrels of beer aboard for a good start, continuing production as she goes.

'British Agent' Tells of Years Following War

Lockhart Proves Writer in "Retreat from Glory."

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Retreat from Glory," by R. H. Bruce Lockhart. [Putnam.]

THE long awaited sequel to "British Agent" has come, to prove that its author is, in very fact, a man of letters and not merely a man of adventure. "British Agent" was so thrilling a record, both historically and emotionally, that the material which it contained overshadowed the author's use of his material.

In it the author appeared a phenominally and delightfully frank person who had experiences truly unique and who told of them with an understanding of human nature rare in autobiography. It is easy enough for a biographer to see the virtues and the foibles of his hero. It is something quite else again for an autobiographer to look upon his with detachment.

Mr. Lockhart disarms his critics before they read the continuance of his autobiography by calling it "Retreat from Glory." To him the years which followed his Russian experiences were almost a rout from the glory of his adventures there. He, like the rest of the immediate post-war world, was uprooted spiritually and emotionally and he spares himself no less in the recounting of those days than he did in the record of his Russian adventure. The resulting book on first glance lacks the fire and the zest and the historical vitality of "British Agent." But it proves how skilled a writer Mr. Lockhart is, how deeply he has sunk his plumb line into human relationships. For he dares to set down the record of his retreat from his former glory in the mood in which it was lived and not in the mood of its vastly popular predecessor.

Fate took him to central Europe first in the diplomatic service, then in the service of the Bank of England. It took him away from Moura and the great romance of his life. The "important" people with whom he came in contact were less startling than those who were his daily combat companions in "British Agent."

The tempo of the whole world, while still abnormal was not the frenzied one of the war period. It had taken on a vivacious quality which, while still swift and dramatic, had lost its implications of imminent tragedy. Mr. Lockhart's adventures in central Europe after the war would be for many the apex of excitement. For him, after Russia, they were—in the perspective of the years—more the expression of a phase of world psychology than personal excitement. And it is as a record of such a phase that "Retreat from Glory" is important.

Mr. Lockhart proves his undoubted skill as a writer by setting down the record of the post-war years in the mood in which they were lived . . . and he is a much better writer than most of us suspected from "British Agent."

There are three sides to the story which Mr. Lockhart tells—the political, the socially gay, and the scenic, two of them he not only knew but he helped create, and the third he makes vivid as few have done. He makes as clear as they could ever be made to the outside, the intricacies of central European politics and intrigue. In the destinies of Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Austria he played no small part.

The hectic excitements of the post-war night life of central Europe have never been set down by a more honest or observant pen. They are only memories now. Prague was Mr. Lockhart's oyster, and he reminisces about it with glee and with an amused nostalgia.

But when politics and gayety palled there was fishing and hunting and the born traveler's joy in nature to keep Mr. Lockhart's sense of humor and judgment of humankind a-balance. Some of the most attractive chapters in the book are concerned with his joy in nature.

There is a dry humor throughout the book that is a delight. This sharp paragraph for instance: "In my notebooks I found a description of the Athenians in the period of their decline: 'In the fifth century before Christ Athens was at the height of her glory. Five hundred years later all the Athenians and foreign visitors to Athens occupied themselves with nothing else than repeating or listening to the latest novelty.' It seemed to me a true picture of English society in 1927."

Young Lineman Presents Novel About His Trade

"Slim," by William Wister Haines [Little-Brown], is, believe it or not, the first serious fictional depiction of the work and life of the men who build and put into operation those huge steel towers carrying cables of high voltage wires that bring the comforts of power to wild [and civilized] spots. The author, himself a young lineman, tells the story of a young southerner who, fascinated by line work, leaves his mule plow and plunges into vivid, passionate, dangerous life, with "hot wire" and potential death goading him and his companions into quick life.

AN IOWA FAMILY

Lewis Gannett Takes Tour of America and Finds It 'Sweet Land'

"Sweet Land" [Doubleday Doran] is the supremely apt title of the story of a month's jaunt through America taken by a New York book reviewer, Lewis Gannet, his wife and his son. In the intimate contact with the soil which one always feels as one drives over land, America came to mean something to Mr. Gannett which plate glass windows and obsequious porters had kept from him in his travels. What those feelings were he sets down, simply and delightfully, without any sentimentality but with a real affection.

The little book impresses this book reviewer that we're all like the London busman on his holiday. Mr. Gannett couldn't resist [and we're glad he didn't] gathering data about what to read during the evenings about the places he was driving through. He didn't manage much reading, but he wanted to be prepared. And that attitude amuses our mother greatly . . . for a Saturday afternoon to Sunday evening week-end we pack the minimum of wardrobe so as to leave plenty of room for books which we may never open but which are somehow as vital equipment as toothbrushes.

Publishers Receive New Manuscript from Dunsany

Lord Dunsany was recently presented with the Harmsworth Literary Award for "the best work of imaginative prose published during 1933 by an Irish author." "The Curse of the Wise Woman" was chosen for that honor by John Masefield, poet laureate of England. The prize of one hundred pounds is given by the Irish Academy of Letters on his decision. Lord Dunsany has delivered to his publishers the manuscript of his new book, "Jorpens Remembers Africa." It will appear this fall.

Smith, will be discussed this week.

Describes Events with His Sharp Tongue.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—We shall have no excuse for being ignorant of what has really happened in the last fifty years of English political life, for in addition to books which I have previously reported as being imminent two new ones, published respectively by Nicholson & Watson and Cassell, are of interest and importance.

The first of these, Lord Snowden's "Autobiography," is the life story of a poor Yorkshire boy who became British chancellor of the exchequer. Lord Snowden, who was plain Philip Snowden until his age made it impossible for him to endure the incessant strain of the house of commons, and who then [as is sometimes done] accepted a peerage in order that he might still lend a hand in governing the country, even though he could not do so from the lower house, has the sharpest tongue of any man in public life.

His tongue is so sharp that it cuts right through friendships and the wound heals immediately. He is a well-loved figure. And he has told his story with the same sharpness of pen. But nobody except Mr. Lloyd George and Ramsey Macdonald will mind what he says of them.

The second book is J. A. Spender's "Short History of Our Times," which follows an even shorter history by the same author which was recently published, and which will be followed in due course by a longer and more elaborate work of the greatest importance. This short history, written by one of the fairest-minded Englishmen alive, tells all about what happened in English political life from the late eighteen seventies to the present time.

Some time ago John Gloag wrote a book about the discovery of a new perfume which transformed the world; now Edward Charles has written a novel about a new drink which has the effect of making all who take it behave very strangely indeed [no new drink is needed to do that], and this book, which is called "Muscara," presumably after the name of the drink, will be published by Methuen.

The author is already known to amateurs of fiction; for he has written several short and original tales which have been talked about among the few. The last, and best known, of them was "Portrait of the Artist's Children."

By accident, Hilaire Belloc's "Oliver Cromwell" [Cassell] and John Buchan's "Oliver Cromwell" [Hodder & Stoughton] were published simultaneously in London; and both are being well received here. They made a good contrast, for Mr. Buchan is much more sympathetic to the Puritans than Mr. Belloc, but both have great admiration for Cromwell himself.

As the authors are contemporaries and friends, the rivalry between them is a pleasant one.

Marcel Proust's Noted Novel Is Available in Four Volumes

"Remembrance of Things Past," Marcel Proust's monumental novel, which has had as much influence on modern fiction as any novel of its generation has been, until now, available in English translation only in assorted bindings under the imprints of different publishers, and incompletely so, since parts of it were published privately.

Every one has heard of Marcel Proust and his stupendous novel, many have talked about it with pretended arrogance, but few have actually read it in its entirety. Random House has just done the American reading public an inestimable service by bringing out a handsome four-volume set of the greatest French novel of our day.

C. K. Scott Moncrieff did the translations of "Swann's Way," "Within a Budding Grove," "The Guermantes Way," "Cities of the Plain," "The Captive" and "The Sweet Cheat Gone." No greater translations have ever been made by an Englishman. They are in themselves works of art. He died before he had finished his stupendous task and "The Past Recaptured" was translated by Frederick A. Blossom.

"Remembrance of Things Past" is a set of books which no sophisticated library shelf dares be without.

FICTION.

Never Any More, by Nancy Hale [Scribner's], shows that it is impossible for the younger generation to capture their mother's youthful friendship.

The Long Day Closes, by Beatrice Tunstall [Doubleday-Doran], is an exciting story of England in the days of Dick Turpin.

A Woman at Thirty, by Ernest Pascal [Harcourt-Brace], tells of a woman who has everything she needs but little that she desires.

NONFICTION.

Rameses to Rockefeller, by Charles Harris Whitaker [Random House], is the complete story of architecture.

Wasn't the Depression Terrible? by O. Soglow [Covici Friede], is a collection of drawings making the depression funny.

POETRY.

Basket for a Fair, by Laura Benet [Doubleday-Doran], contains a number of lyrical poems by the sister of two poets, Stephen Vincent Benet and William Rose Benet.

The Collected Poems of John Galsworthy [Scribner's] is a selection of poems which the author made just before his death.

Poems, by W. H. Auden [Random House], is the first book of this English poet's work to be published in this country.

Solitude and Mystery and Other Poems, by Richard P. Leahy [Putnam], explores the heights and depths of emotions.

SHORT STORIES.

Collected Dog Stories, by Rudyard Kipling [Doubleday-Doran], is a new edition of these famous stories, illustrated by Marguerite Kirmse.

Just Cats, collected by Richard Miller [Doubleday-Doran], contains nineteen stories about cats by well known authors, including Walter De La Mare, Aldous Huxley, Edgar Allan Poe, and others.

TEN YEARS AGO

Ten years ago this week May Sinclair's "Arnold Waterlow" held the place of honor among the reviews on the book page of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Do you remember? And the week's best sellers were:

FICTION.

"The Green Hat," by Michael Arlen [whose latest novel, "Hell, Said the Duchess," which he calls a bedtime story will be published Oct. 24.].

"The Little French Girl," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.

"The Needle's Eye," by Arthur Train.

"The Tattooed Countess," by Carl Van Vechten.

"Cross Word Puzzle Book."

"You Take Your Choice," by Clinton Gilbert.

"Glimpses of Japan," by Harry Franck.

'The Jayhawker' to Be Offered in Book Form

Play of 2 Lewises to Have Tryout Oct. 15.

On Monday, Oct. 15, in Washington, the tryout of "The Jayhawker," the civil war play by Sinclair Lewis and Lloyd Lewis, will be held, and it will be followed by the publication in book form, coincidentally with the New York première, of what many feel will be the outstanding drama of the year. Meanwhile Sinclair Lewis' "Dodsworth" [Harcourt Brace], dramatized by Sidney Howard, which has been one of the major hits of the year, has recently been put into book form with comments by the novelist and the dramatist on "The Art of Dramatization."

Another collaboration of Sidney Howard's, with Paul de Kruif, has also been published recently to give those in the sticks who didn't see it the inside on a powerful drama, "Yellow Jack" [Harcourt-Brace]. It is based on the dramatic "Walter Reed" chapter of Paul de Kruif's "Microbe Hunters." Incidentally Dr. De Kruif was the person who worked with Sinclair Lewis on the medical material for "Arrowsmith."

The publication of John Van Druten's "The Distaff Side" [Knopf] brings to us in the wilds one of New York's hits, and "Merrily We Roll Along" [Random House], the much discussed play by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, reaches us just in time to keep our curiosity from devouring us.

Two other produced successes of the season have been published of late: "Jig Saw" [Farrar & Rinehart] by Dawn Powell, produced by the Theater Guild, and "Stevedore" [Covici Friede] by Paul Peters and George Sklar, the Theater Union's tragic New Orleans drama.

A play to read as well as to act is "Mr. Grant" [McBride], Arthur Goodrich's dramatic presentation of a great general and a poor President, Ulysses S. Grant. And one "to read" rather than to act is "Victoria" [Doubleday-Doran] by Kathleen Norris, who for years has collected material on England's longest lived and loved queen.

Two plays which were acted for the briefest possible runs are published in "With a Reckless Preface" [Farrar & Rinehart]. They are John Howard Lawson's "The Pure in Heart" and "Gentlewoman," defended passionately in the author's reckless preface.

"One Act Plays by Modern Authors" [Harcourt-Brace], a treasure chest since 1921, has just been enlarged and revised to the minute. Helen Louise Cohen was a pioneer in the business of play anthology, and this volume of hers has become a classic. And Sarah N. Cleghorn's dramatization of Dorothy Canfield Fisher's "Understood Betsy" [Harcourt-Brace] is also finally presented to a waiting world.

Those Who Like Poems of Robert Herrick Asked to Help Church

If you are one of the many passionate admirers of Robert Herrick, the worldly seventeenth century clergyman-poet, this letter from James Thorpe, vicar of Dean Prior, will probably wring your heart and your pocketbook.

He writes: "The bells of Robert Herrick's church are silent. They have been silent for four years. The frames on which the bells are hung have perished and are no longer safe. To rehang the bells, restore the ringers' gallery, and add a sixth bell will cost us about four hundred pounds. We have collected just over one hundred and seventy-five pounds, and have a promise to supply the new treble bell.

"Will some of those who love Herrick as one of the sweetest of English singers help us make up this deficit and set his bells ringing again above his grave? Contributions should be sent to Canon the Hon. R. J. Yarde-Buller, the Vicarage, Dean Prior, Buckfastleigh, South Devon, England, or to yours faithfully, James Thorpe."

NEW LIGHTS JAM RUSH HOUR AUTOS ON MICHIGAN AVE.

Engineers Say Signals Need Adjustment.

BY HAL FOUST.

A new system of stop and go signals in Michigan avenue between Oak street and Roosevelt road jammed rush hour trafic yesterday on its first day of operation. Motorists tooted their horns in complaint against the engineers who had promised that the new lights would relieve congestion. Pedestrians, bewildered by the novel regulation of a pause in midstreet, grumbled to the policemen herding them on safety islands.

"We're just experimenting with the timing of the signals and should have automobiles moving smoothly within a couple of weeks," said William C. Brandes, city trafic engineer.

Adjustments to Be Made.

"It's like breaking in a new motor car," said Otto Jelinek, south park trafic engineer. "There are still a lot of adjustments to make."

"Pedestrians need time to familiarize themselves with rules," said Capt. James U. Sammis Jr., head of the Lincoln park police.

"There was more trafic today because folks came over the boulevard to see the new lights," said Lieut. Michael Doyle of the south park police. "Some drivers blundered in panic, afraid of their ignorance of a new system, and other drivers were victims of weaknesses in the system that must be corrected."

The heaviest congestion was north of Monroe street as far as Chicago avenue. In the morning rush hour, south park police tried to let the lights take care of the complicated turning movement at Monroe street and Michigan avenue rather than handle the trafic manually as has been their custom.

South Bound Trafic Stalled.

In the forenoon, south bound motorists in Michigan avenue were stalled as far north as Chicago avenue. Lincoln park police had to detour some of the trafic west in Chicago avenue because the boulevard was clogged.

In the nonrush hours, travel moved smoothly. The 2.3 miles from Roosevelt road to Oak street could be covered at the speeds designated on the lamp globe signs without being stopped for a red light. Top speeds were lessened because there was no reward for racing but over-all times were materially reduced.

In the evening rush hour, however, there was another jam as in the forenoon. Strangely enough, the worst congestion again was south bound in Michigan avenue between Chicago avenue and Monroe street. Homeward bound northsiders enjoyed a relief from the usual congestion. In the parade south, THE TRIBUNE roadster was held to an average of two miles an hour in driving from Oak street to Randolph street from 5:44 p. m. to 6:15 p. m.

Confusion Among Pedestrians.

Pedestrians were confused at the fourteen intersections where north bound trafic is halted while south bound continues, and vice versa. This awkward arrangement was necessary at these crossings so that the vehicles moving at designated speeds would have uninterrupted travel. Pedestrians are required to walk to the center of the street when trafic is stopped on the near side of the pavement and then to wait from five to forty seconds on the safety islands until vehicles are halted in the other half of the pavement.

INSISTS BRITAIN MUST INCREASE ITS AIR DEFENSE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A significant hint as to what the British government has in mind regarding an increase in armaments was given tonight by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, in a speech at Birmingham.

Deploring the failure of European nations to disarm, Chamberlain said this country must now embark on a program involving a considerable increase in air squadrons for home defense and remedying deficiencies in other forces.

"I hope the new expenditure which this will involve will not be so great in any one year as to cripple our resources," he said. "And I need hardly say we shall not relax efforts to prevent a general building up of the level of armaments in our country as well as any other country."

But Britons "cannot have their cake and eat it," the chancellor pointed out, warning that sacrifices will have to be made in other directions in order to insure the country's safety.

Prof. Compton Honored by Balliol College, Oxford

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Prof. A. H. Compton, the George Eastman visiting professor at Oxford, has been admitted as a supernumerary fellow of Balliol college, Oxford. This was announced tonight. Prof. Compton has held the chair of physics at the University of Chicago since 1923 and was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1927.

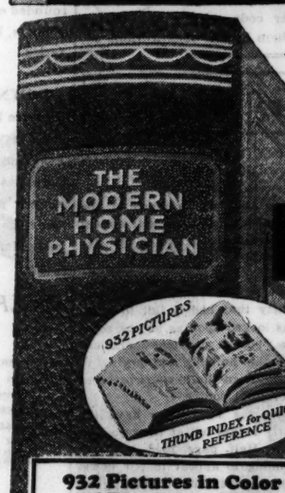
At Last—All About
HEALTH How to Preserve and Improve It
ILLNESS How to Recognize and Treat It



IN ONE ENCYCLOPEDIC VOLUME

A real encyclopedia of medical knowledge for the home—complete, authoritative, up-to-date—that tells in simple language everything you need to know to protect health and to care for sickness. The most reliable source of medical information ever offered for home and family use—all in one handy volume, arranged for quick reference. Easy-to-understand explanations of all common diseases—how to avoid them, how to recognize them, how to treat them. 2,000 helpful articles all in one alphabetical order for easy finding. It is not claimed that this great book will enable you to dispense entirely with medical advice. But it will tell you what to do in an emergency—when you should summon the Doctor at once—when you can yourself meet the situation with simple treatment.

This Book May Save Your Life! Or the Life of Someone Dear to You!

—by telling you what to do when illness or accident strikes suddenly, while waiting for the Doctor.
—by enabling you to understand his instructions and follow them out.
—by teaching you to recognize serious symptoms and sending you to the Doctor before it is too late for him to help you.
—by explaining every part of your body, its needs, its capabilities, its care.
—by showing you how to improve your resistance to disease through reasonable exercise, adequate rest, proper diet.

Many instances can be given in which "The Modern Home Physician" is a means of saving life. It tells you WHAT TO DO and HOW TO DO IT. It helps you decide WHEN YOU NEED A DOCTOR and when you DON'T. It explains what can be done for the sufferer until the Doctor comes. Many lives are lost through not knowing these simple facts. One quick reference to this book gives you the sure knowledge to do swiftly, confidently, the easy thing that may save a life!

Causes, Symptoms, Treatment of all Common Diseases

This great book gives complete information about every organ and system in the body and how it works. Guidance in the proper care of the body and warnings against the things that are harmful. Full details of diets, exercise, hygiene, childbirth, glands, weight, blood pressure, and hundreds of other subjects that concern everyone. Thumb-notch indexed so that you can find things instantly—even in the excitement of a sudden illness or accident.

Written by Doctors—Endorsed by Authorities

For fifteen years this work has been taking shape in laboratories, clinics, and consulting rooms. Every one of the more than 2,000 articles in this complete encyclopedia of health and sickness was written by a Doctor. A large staff of specialists collaborated with three general practitioners of wide experience in producing this volume, and the entire work was gone over to the last detail by Dr. Victor Robinson, Professor of History of Medicine in Temple University, and Editor-in-Chief of the Medical Review of Reviews, an authority of international renown.

MAKING THE NEXT WAR.

The demonstrations in Jugo-Slavia following the assassination of the king may quiet down without producing serious consequences, but they are observed with apprehension in many quarters. The most conservative minded statesmen in Europe were not without fears that the disturbers would break all bounds and bring about a general European crisis.

The discouraging consideration concerns the apparently irrepressible popular passions which take no account of the possible or probable consequences of fury. In the ordinary view the masses of people are regarded as the innocent victims of bad statesmanship which from time to time produces conditions engulfing them n some misery of war. It is true that latent instincts can be manipulated, but it is a narrow view which overlooks the fact that instincts are there and that they flame into action of their own accord. There are enough firebrands to make bad matters worse, but any opinion which in seeking the cause of war and means of prevention does not give weight to the natural proclivities is defeated by the insufficiency of its conclusions.

The people of Jugo-Slavia have a number of smoldering hatreds which divide them as a nation and turn them against other nations. The divergent racial aspirations split the country, and its own and its neighbors' ambitions conflict. Internally, majorities seek advantage and cause minorities to harbor a sense of injury. Externally, neighboring peoples are regarded as aggressive and threatening.

The unpleasant fact is that the peace of Europe is constantly threatened by the prejudices, antipathies, and hatreds of the people of Europe. Bad as some of the statesmanship is, it does more to control these popular passions than it does to incite them, although at times it is responsible for incitement. Mussolini and Hitler will occasionally inflame national feeling, generally for their own domestic purposes. It is the old trick of consolidating popular support by stimulating a fear of outside dangers. Popular passions, however, do not heed the lessons which peace lovers think should be unforgettable. If these lessons were learned and if the people themselves were really peaceable and cherished peace above all things, it would be very difficult for malign influences to produce wars.

Back of the munition makers and their great syndicates and corporations, and back of the business of making and selling arms are the popular instincts primarily causing the uncertainties upon which it is attempted to put guaranties of peace.

Europe is old enough and has suffered enough to have chastened populations, but if these populations did actually shudder at the thought of war no jingoes or madmen or demons could safely trifle with their security.

The peril now in Europe is that the people will get out of hand and go from one provocation to another until all control is lost in passion.

The pacifiers have more success at the top than they have at the bottom. The organization of peace fails because the people who are the supposed victims of wars seldom restrain themselves when sanity is required of them.

DON'T SHOOT SANTA CLAUS.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. Carter Glass and your other little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. All minds, Virginia, whether they be man's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. That goes for you, North Dakota, also. Even New York must be obliged to believe there is a Santa, and New York has been full of bad men who only believe what they see in the bank to their own deposit. Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. Yes, Virginia, and California, and Texas, and Maine, and all the other little girls of the great big family, there is a Santa Claus and he will be at work from now on until the new Christmas, which will be the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Your little sister Arizona may be one of your skeptical little friends just now because something seems to have gone wrong with the package intended for Rio Verde, but if Arizona will look up at the Christmas tree she will see that there are many other full stockings on it.

Your papa might hire a man to watch all the chimneys to see Santa Claus coming down, to try to head him off, but he won't be able to do it. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course you have. They're all over the lawn and in lots of places where there are no lawns. They like to dance where there are no lawns better than where there are.

Everybody's seeing fairies these days, Virginia, and California, and Minnesota. They come out of Washington, D. C., which is the home of Santa Claus, in swarms. Don't tear open the baby's rattle to see what makes the noise inside. That noise is Santa Claus going everywhere with something for everybody. And don't shoot Santa Claus! Don't believe anybody who tells you that he is in reality the 17 year locust, the grasshopper in disguise, the chinch bug, or the boll weevil in a red coat and white whiskers. Listen to the voice of love, generosity, and devotion. Don't shoot him, because if you do there'll be no Santa Claus and all the pretty magic he has will blow up with a bang. You must believe in Santa Claus, because he's all your fairy godfathers in Washington have to offer you, and if you don't believe in him you won't have anything and neither will they.

THE BLOT THAT WON'T COME OUT.

The effort of the postoffice department to cover the stain on the record of the administration made by the outrage upon the air mail service is a feeble one, which only calls attention again to that great public wrong. If the claim that $10,000,000 has been saved could stand up under analysis it would still represent a wretchedly inadequate offset to the damage done. When under analysis this sum shrinks to two millions, the defense of the scandal falls beneath contempt.

There has been no respectable justification presented by the administration for its treatment of the air industry. On the contrary, every one who has been using the air service before and since the cancelation or is informed of the conditions created by that scandalous proceeding knows that the splendid development of the service was not only arrested but has been set back, men in the service assert, five years. The pretense of money saving can deceive no one who uses the air service, for even the alleged saving of money to the government—a government which is throwing public money away on unsound projects and in political dole on a scale never equaled—would be negligible compared to the loss to the public in impaired service.

The Tammany spoilsman who is the chief figure in this scandal is naturally anxious, especially at this time, to hide his handiwork, but the practical results cry out against him and the conscience and common sense of the public cannot be bullied and befuddled by his bogus statistics. The record of American commercial aviation is one of the most brilliant in the history of American private enterprise. In a few years the leaders in this field had put American aviation not only in the front rank but far ahead of any other country's. Americans were proud of that striking accomplishment and of the men whose courage and ability have achieved it. When Farley swung his ax and let loose his poison gas every American who knew the facts understood the meaning of the scheme to be vicious and ruthless politics of the worst variety known even to Tammany spoilsmanship. The indignation they felt has not died and will not.

THE TIMES MOVES FORWARD.

The Los Angeles Times has completed and shortly will occupy a fine new skyscraper home. Newspapers, like most other institutions, cannot stand still. The moment their growth is ended their decay begins. That the Times, in the fifty-first year of its life, has found it necessary to expand its physical facilities is proof that it is prepared to continue rendering to the people of its community that service which has won it its present position.

The new building is a fitting monument to Harry Chandler, who since 1917 has been publisher of the Times and who for many years before that was intimately connected in other capacities with its development. In the midst of the management of his own wide affairs, Mr. Chandler has always given generously of his time to the general advancement of American journalism. Within the last year, although approaching the age of 70 and in none too good health, he worked untiringly to enroll his fellow publishers of the Pacific coast in the general demand of the newspapers of the country for the reservation, in the NRA newspaper code, of the freedom of the press guaranteed them by the constitution.

Editorial of the Day

[Marshalltown, Ia., News.]

Where are the time honored investigations of campaign funds that used to take up so much of the country's attention along about this time of the year?

Is it because the Democrats are in power and are literally swimming in New Deal money that we hear nothing about that?

Voters used to be made to feel a prejudice against the candidate or the party that had a full to overflowing war chest. It was looked upon as having some sinister connection with "special privilege" and undue influence. Hence all the probing and prying to bring up the connection between the obvious presence of the money and its original source.

No one can deny that the Democrats have the money this year. It fairly bulges out of their pockets and their headquarters. Half page paid advertisements are already beginning to appear in our newspapers, and the lieutenant governor is rambling all over these parts in an airplane. Shades of Thomas Jefferson! Only two years ago their original candidate for that office was hitch-hiking over the state to keep his speaking engagements!

Where did all this sudden affluence come from?

Is it true that all public employés have been assessed a percentage of their salaries to help out?

Is it true that 5 per cent of gross sales to the liquor commission has been required to be paid in to the state campaign fund?

If the money has not come from these sources, then has it come from the federal pap that is flowing into Iowa in such a golden stream right now?

Isn't it true that Jim Farley really came to Iowa recently just to find out how much money the boys—and one girl—were going to need? We incline an attentive ear for the answer to that question.

We believe that the party that has waxed so full of indignation in years past as to the expenditure of huge sums for electioneering purposes should come clean now and do a little plain 'fessing up on its own account. That indignation has been so well known that it would not seem necessary to have to uncover the facts through an expensive and unsavory investigation.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE WILD DUCK HUNTING SEASON has begun. That means bad luck for me. Not that I have to go and sit in a muddy ditch and count the hours until daylight waiting for the ducks to fly over, but because duck hunters always send me or some of my friends ducks. And the friends always invite me over to a duck dinner. Duck hunting must have been invented by the dentists because it really should mean a lot of business to them. Chewing the small shot with which the wild ducks are killed must do a lot of things to teeth and gold fillings and such. When nobody is looking I always take the piece of wild duck that comes on my plate, I give a whack with my fork and knock out a couple of dozen shot, anyhow. If I get the chance I yank the piece of duck off the plate and hold it down by the side of my chair and shake it hard. I love to hear the shot pouring out and striking the floor. I know then there were some shot in that duck that I won't have to chew on. I know I ought to like wild duck, but shot has such a cold, clammy taste to me. And it's very hard to chew shot and keep chatting brightly with the other people at the table.

I wish people who make chilled shot either wouldn't chill it so much or in some way would make it softer so it can be chewed more readily. Then I don't see why the hunters have to use so much shot to kill a duck. From the number of pieces of shot in the piece of wild duck on my plate I figure that it must take at least a couple of quarts of shot to bring each duck down. And by the time it gets to the table there isn't much duck left; just shot with a sort of wild onion flavor. If I must eat shot I would at least prefer it to have some more agreeable taste, such as wintergreen or orange or vanilla or strawberry. Or maybe the shot pellets could be sugar coated like liver pills. That ought to make them easier to swallow. I wish duck hunters would lay aside their shotguns and go back to the bow and arrow. Perhaps I wouldn't be able to get as much wild duck to eat as I did before, but, anyhow, I wouldn't feel so self-conscious when I walked along the street homeward. For after I've eaten a wild duck that's been filled full of shot I am terribly afraid that I must rattle horribly every time I make a move.

SONG FOR ROSELYN.

There have been little songs before,
And there are many yet to be:
O, lovely lays shall gild the days
Of singers to come after me;

And men will marvel as they meet
With melodies but newly wrought,
Nor care for what I sang or thought:

Yet some may sing this little song,
Fashioned to keep thee ever young,
And all of Time may spare my rhyme
For that this song was sung.

AND NOW, having been fanatically baseball conscious, we've got to work ourselves into being football conscious. But leave it to us. We Americans can go just as crazy over football as baseball if we just have a little time to readjust. And after football we will go nertz over basketball. Gosh! we've just got to be worked up to the tiptop of excitement over something or other all the time or life wouldn't be worth while nohow.

THIS BACK TO THE FARM MOVEMENT is a grand thing. But thinking over the chances that kidnapers have of getting hold of you if your château is remote from the haunts of men I have revised my ideas of the kind of farmhouse I want. I've always dreamed of an old fashioned farmhouse surrounded by fields and woods and hollyhocks and sunflowers, and pigs and chickens and a Jersey cow, and a path down under the elms to the old mill by the river. Now I would like to have my quaint, old fashioned farmhouse in the middle of a government military reservation and to be surrounded entirely with three inch field guns, marines, soldiers, bayonets, armored tanks, and seacoast batteries.

DOWN IN FLORIDA people having New Deal jobs are being gently requested to kick in ten bucks for every thousand dollars they receive from the government. And lots of them are squawking to high heaven about it. But how can Santa Claus shower pretty gifts all over this great wide country if he hasn't the coin to buy said gifts? What, jobholders, would you shoot Santa Claus?

WOLF HOUNDS.

The things that I lost
Are always with me—
In the sob of the wind,
In the moan of the sea.

They rasp at my door
When the night is dark;
They howl at my window
With a wolfish bark.

They climb on my knees
When I sit alone;
They gnaw at my heart
Like dogs at a bone.

No lash of red laughter
Can put them to flight—
They thirst in the day,
And hunger at night.

The things that I lost
Are always with me—
In the moan of the wind,
In the sob of the sea.

MIGRAINE, OR SICK HEADACHE.

MIGRAINE is one of the commonest and most distressing conditions that afflicts mankind. The indisposition usually lasts two or more days and leaves the patient weak, exhausted, and with a feeling of worthlessness. Attacks may come approximately once each month, although in severe cases they occur more frequently.

The seizure is characterized by an intense pain that localizes in the forehead, later concentrating back of or between the eyes. Occasionally the entire head is involved. During the height of the paroxysm flashes of light or bright spots may be seen. The pain is so intense as to render the individual practically helpless. Dizziness and ringing in the ears are common symptoms, followed by occasional mild delirium. Nausea and vomiting are usual accompaniments. The disturbance of the sympathetic nervous system is apparent as the patient may frequently complain of cold, and sweating of the hands and feet.

The disease is hereditary. The exact cause is unknown. It is, however, a true disease of the nervous system. There is some reason to believe that the intense headache is preceded by a piling up in the blood of certain toxic substances that bring on a nervous explosion.

In women the attacks frequently bear a relation to menstruation and many who have had migraine for years are entirely free following the menopause, or change of life. This would indicate that there may be some oversupply of ovarian or other endocrine gland secretion that accumulates periodically in the blood. Surgical interference, bringing on an artificial change of life, has been followed by improvement or cure in a few cases. The percentage of improvement, however, is not high and cannot be said to justify operation for this purpose alone. In men amelioration of the disease occasionally occurs later in life.

Many can foretell the onset even a day or two in advance. The individual seems to receive a definite warning or to recognize a set of relatively minor symptoms preceding the headache. Worry, excitement, overwork, sleeplessness, anger—in fact, any mental upset or strain may bring on the attack and increase its severity.

In spite of investigations as to offending foods, nothing positive has been determined in this field. A change of diet may entirely eliminate attacks for a month or two, only to be followed by a recurring sequence of equal or increasing severity. Cures are rare. Many cases have been improved by careful management, which includes regulation of diet, the use of a high fat diet [ketogenic], reduction in weight, the use of calcium in large doses, the use of protein injections, or the intravenous administration of sodium hyposulphite. Recently the use of chondriotin sulphuric acid has been tried with complete relief from subsequent attacks in 40 to 50 per cent of selected cases.

Efforts to abort or cut short an attack are more successful if the sufferer can be induced to sleep. This may be aided by a dose of a proper hypnotic, such as codeine sulphate in combination with amytal. Some patients will go to sleep promptly under this medication and on waking will be free from pain. Powerful drugs should not be taken except as prescribed by a physician.

During an attack the room should be darkened and absolute quiet enforced. Ice bags or cloths wrung out of hot water may be used over the forehead. The patient should be temporarily starved, although black coffee may be given and is sometimes followed by considerable relief.

Good body hygiene seems to offer the largest amount of hope in lessening the frequency and severity of the attacks. Many careful observers believe that overeating is a prominent causative factor. Others reason that migraine is a nervous fatigue phenomenon and to compensate for this, rich milk is advised between meals. Abundant outdoor exercise appears to help, as well as the correction of constipation.

CHOICE OF JOBS.

H. G. writes: It is necessary for me to decide between two types of work. One involves continuous sitting and the other continuous standing. Which is the more healthful for a person in fair health?

REPLY.

If there is no tendency toward weakness of the feet [arches], or heart muscle, or varicose veins, it makes little difference. One can accustom oneself to almost any ordinary working posture.

COLD FEET.

K. P. K. writes: What would cause a rather elderly man to have a coldness and numbness of the legs? Sun treatment gives some relief, but does not cure.

REPLY.

Probably a deficient circulation. No doubt the arteries leading to the extremities have become somewhat narrowed. This permits a smaller amount of blood than normal to flow through. Heat will help to dilate the blood vessels. Warm hose and underwear should be worn.

NOTES.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What effect does it have on notes owed by a man who puts all of his property in trust for his heirs? 2. If such notes are owed when this party dies, what procedure is necessary by the one who holds these notes, or is it necessary to file them against the trust at the present time? 3. What is the life of a judgment on collateral notes?

J. G. H.

1. Such a gift could be set aside as a fraud on existing creditors, if that is what you mean to ask.

2. If the party was a creditor at the time of the deed in trust he should employ an attorney to set aside that transaction. If he became a creditor after that transaction then he would be subject to it.

3. The Illinois limitation period is ten years from the maturity date.

REAL ESTATE DESCRIPTION.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. In describing a building in making out a mortgage is it legal to give the name of a former owner, even though it be known by that name? 2. Can an inside room in the building be mortgaged? L. J. H.

1. It is the common practice to describe real estate for mortgage purposes by its legal description. In other words, the name of the subdivision, the block number, and the lot number. The name of the building or the name of a previous owner would not ordinarily appear. It is not clear what question you intend to ask.

2. Obviously such a room would have little value independently of the operation of the rest of the building. Hence no lender would be willing to advance money on such security on ordinary terms. We see no legal objection to the transaction if you can find a lender who is satisfied.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—A grim perspective of the precautions which must now be taken to protect the public from gas attacks in a future war is the subject of a booklet issued by the British Red Cross society. The authors are Maj. Gen. D. J. Collins and Maj. H. Stuart Blackmore. The instructions they give in first aid as a defense against chemical warfare are based on the official textbooks.

It is pointed out that, although the primary and most important measure is to provide adequate protection for the eyes and respiratory organs against gas and "smokes," there may also be a necessity to guard against the danger of contaminated clothing, which, with chemical agents such as mustard and lewisite, gives off gas for a long period.

For this reason the box respirator, efficient as it is, cannot be regarded as meeting all needs. The early provision of gas shelters as a method of protection is described as of great importance, as they furnish places where people will be able to take off their respirators during a gas attack and have food and drink, and where casualties can be assembled prior to being transported to a "gas center."

"In future warfare," it is stated, "there is the possibility of civilians being shut up for as long as twelve hours in gasproof centers, and a building on the slope of a hill is very suitable. Any room with sound walls, roof, and floor can be made gasproof. When all other points have been stopped up, fires and other means of heating should be extinguished, as they help to draw air from outside.

"In cases where air-tightness cannot be insured, for example in ambulances, tanks, and gun turrets, air should be pumped in through a special filter, neutralized, and maintained at an adequate pressure. Underground places are best suited for the establishment of shelters, but they must have their openings capable of being blocked up or converted into air locks. It is urged that cellars or basements should be provided in all new buildings with a bombproof superstructure of cement or reënforced concrete.

"The well of the staircase should be constructed as a kind of chimney. Water and gas pipes should be placed outside this well, while electric wiring and air inlets for filtration apparatus in the basement should be inside it. In town planning central and distributing systems of gas, water, and electricity should be made as invulnerable as possible, and the systems should be divided into sections so as to limit dislocation. Municipalities should know that wooden paving is readily impregnated by chemical agents. A nonporous mineral pavement without intervals is the most readily decontaminated."

Attention is called to the best methods of protecting food supplies and drinking water, the storage on a big scale of anti-gas substances, the training of decontaminating squads, and the sounding of alarms. It is emphasized that no method for alarms which requires the use of the lungs should be employed because it would interfere with the use of the respirator.

The warnings suggested include wooden rattles, telephones, wireless, and compressed air sirens, with flags or notice boards to indicate infected areas. Detailed information is given as to various forms of poison gas and the different antidotes.

A FARMER SHARPENS HIS PENCIL.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Your editorial today entitled, "A Farmer Sharpens His Pencil," does not seem to be fair.

Personally, I think controled farm production, processing taxes, etc., a serious mistake. The natural laws of supply and demand usually take care of both surpluses and shortages.

However, in presenting the case of Mr. O. P. Williams, we can assume that your figures are correct, and that the government took $335.95 more in process taxes than it paid him for his corn and hog allotment.

It, however, seems obvious from the allotment figure that Mr. Williams must have produced and sold considerable quantities of corn and hogs; otherwise, he would not be charged with the processing tax.

With corn boosted in price from less than 25 cents a bushel to over 60 cents, and hogs pushed up from $3.50 to $8.00, it seems to me that Mr. Williams is getting a mighty good return on his payment of $335.95.

If anybody is entitled to sympathy, it would appear as if the ultimate consumer, who has to pay the retail prices for Mr. Williams' products without any increase in his income or wages, should have a large portion handed to him, although sympathy is a poor substitute for the necessities of life. W. R. MITCHELL.

GENEROUS TO A FAULT.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—In discussing the economic conditions in the United States today, many people are accustomed to use the increasing number of persons on the relief rolls as the key and final answer to the situation. The rolls are perhaps the barometer by which the prosperity of the nation can be judged; still, those who had small savings a few years ago at the beginning of the depression could not be expected to hold out forever.

In addition, and this is probably the real reason, many, seeing the generosity of the relief agencies, have decided that it is easier to be supported by the government than to try to obtain or hold jobs. Generosity has, many times in the past, been rightfully considered a fault, and if it ever was before it is certainly the fault now.

MAYBE SHE DIDN'T WANT COMPANY.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Last Sunday night I saw Miss Ukraine making her trip home after the coronation, alone and still in her bright finery, via the street car. There was not one Ukrainian interested enough to see that the young lady was properly and safely delivered home. For shame! MISS ROSE CONRAD.

INDEPENDENT OIL DEALER'S PROTEST.

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 12.—We are not interested in politics, but are merely trying to make an honest living in the sale of oil and gasoline products. A situation has arisen, however, which demands your interest and attention in the public welfare because it is so unjust to us. As a great newspaper and a spokesman for the public's rights, you will want to investigate this situation on your own and take whatever steps you may see fit.

This is the situation: Gross inconsistencies exist in the government policy toward the oil and gasoline situation, seriously affecting our very existence. On the one hand the government has encouraged the major oil companies in the establishment of buying pools, refinery control, production control, and other similar devices tending toward a new economic structure; on the other hand a most specific action in direct contradistinction to these policies has arisen in the state of New Jersey. The whole gasoline structure in this area remained stable for a period of eighteen months, permitting both major and independent companies to make a fair and reasonable profit. This took into consideration the differential existing between trademarked brands of the major oil companies and untrademarked brands of the independents, a differential of 1½ cents a gallon.

Without previous announcement or justification price reductions were made by the major companies which have forced the independents to reduce their prices to a loss basis. This is what the major companies desired, because they are attempting to destroy our very existence. It is current in the trade that the major oil companies contemplate further reductions in the differentials between their brands and the untrademarked brands of the independents, thus making it impossible for the independents to exist. The independents have served the public well, both as a stabilizing factor in the whole economic oil structure as well as in the preservation of the very essence of American business, the maintenance of the independent and the exclusion of monopoly.

We earnestly urge you, after making your own investigation, to champion the independents in this latest evidence of monopolistic manipulation.

WE ARE UTTERLY CRUSHED.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—This is to let you know that I find the keenest delight in your editorials; there is pronounced pleasure in finding holes in your arguments, in reading what is not there, in marveling at the deductions you make and in noting the delusive reasoning. 22 CLEANERS TO FIGHT INJUNCTION ON PRICE CUTTING

New Battle Over Minimum Scale in Making.

Chicago's turbulent cleaning and dyeing industry appeared yesterday to be on the verge of another upheaval as the result of a price fixing injunction issued Thursday by Circuit Judge Stanley H. Klarkowski.

Under the provisions of the injunction, twenty-two independent cleaners are restrained from charging less than a minimum of 69 cents per garment for cash and carry work and 85 cents for garments called for and delivered. These were the minimum prices agreed on to end the lockout in the industry on Sept. 9.

Attorney Irving Breakstone, counsel for the independents, announced he would appear in the Appellate court, probably Monday, and ask that the injunction be dissolved. Pending the dissolution hearing, he declared, he will ask that Judge Klarkowski's order be suspended.

No Evidence Presented, He Says.

The lawyer said he will base his attack on the injunction on the grounds that no evidence was presented or hearing conducted into the merits of the case. The order was granted, he declared, solely on a bill of particulars filed by the Cleaning and Dyeing Owners' association of Chicago, comprised of ninety-four members.

"We will also point out," he declared, "that the defendants named in this action comprise only a small portion of the cleaning and dyeing industry.

"There are 5,000 small, independent cleaners who are not involved in this litigation. What is to prevent them from dropping their prices and taking all the business while the defendants, enjoined by court order, must maintain a certain price level? We contend this action is unfair. Many large operators, also, were not named."

Questions Jurisdiction in One Case.

Attorney Breakstone also declared his belief that the price fixing in the cleaning and dyeing field is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws. The Circuit court, he added, does not have jurisdiction in so far as the Sterling Cleaners, one of the twenty-two independents, is concerned. This company does its work in Indiana, he said, and consequently comes under interstate commerce laws. An effort will be made, he added, to remove the Sterling case to the federal District court.

Chief among the defendants are the Abarbanell, Sterling, Michigan, Checker, and Peacock cleaners. Of these, E. A. Fink, president of the Peacock firm, was most vehement in denouncing what he described as unwaranted interference with his business.

Denies Below Cost Operation.

"They charged I was operating below cost," he declared, "and I deny this most emphatically. In the six years I have conducted my business I have never operated at a loss. I couldn't, and stay in business. My books are open at any time to federal, state, or city investigators."

The entire cleaning situation, Fink declared, resolves itself into a battle between independent low price shops who are satisfied with a narrow margin of profit and those who would keep prices at a maximum and "gouge the public."

"To charge 69 cents for a single garment would be out and out profiteering," he declared.

The injunction does not go into effect until the plaintiffs file a $1,000 bond with the court. This action probably will be taken today. Then the independents will either have to raise their prices or risk a contempt citation.

PLANE PLUNGES INTO LAKE; PILOT ESCAPES DEATH

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—John Schmutzler, garage owner in Pewaukee, was seriously injured today when a monoplane he was piloting went into a tail spin and dove nose downward into Pewaukee lake. Hunters who were in a boat nearby saved him from drowning.

Schmutzler had failed to fasten the safety belt when he started the flight. This fact saved his life. The impact of the plane striking the water threw Schmutzler backward and out of the seat. The hunters arrived on the scene in a few moments and pulled the semi-conscious pilot into their boat.

The plane made the dive about 300 yards from shore in 20 feet of water. Only its tail stuck out of the water. Late today nine motorboats were hooked on to the submerged craft and succeeded in dragging it into shallow water, where a line from an automobile towed the crippled plane to shore.

The plane is an Aeronca and was equipped with pontoons. Tony Lang of Pewaukee is the owner. Schmutzler has put in many hours of flying during the last four years, acquaintances said.

Fred Schuele, 2115 North 32d street, and Harvey Stark, 2420-A West Chambers street, Milwaukee, were the hunters first to reach the flyer. They said the plane had been circling over the lake at an altitude of 200 feet for a half hour before it plunged downward.

John Hay Whitney's Plane Cracks Up; Four Injured

Upperville, Va., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Three prominent society leaders today were nursing bruises received when John Hay Whitney's plane cracked up in a landing on his farm here at the end of a trip from New York for the National Steeplechase classic. Those injured were Mrs. Eleanor Jones, Whitney and Milton Holden. The pilot, Edgar Woodham, suffered minor injuries. The plane's motor went dead just before landing yesterday, and in bringing it to earth on the Whitney estate Pilot Woodham was unable to keep the tail of the plane from hitting a ditch.

JURY ACQUITS WIDOW NAMED IN SLAYING CASE

Accused of Plotting Klan Aid's Death.

Jefferson, Wis., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Carrie Gill, 59 year old widow, tonight was acquitted by a Circuit court jury of 12 men on charges of being an accessory before the fact in connection with the slaying of Earl B. Gentry, former Indiana Klan leader.

The jury in the first murder case in this country in 17 years deliberated for five and one-half hours before freeing the woman of the accusation of plotting the shooting of the former aid to D. C. Stephenson, imprisoned Indiana Klan dragon, last June 30.

The trial of the widow, known here as the "sunshine lady" because of charitable acts she had performed in a Lutheran church organization, consumed nine days.

In its case the state contended jealousy of the woman over the affection Gentry, her 47 year old boarder, was paying to her attractive niece, motivated her to conspire to have him killed.

Widow Found Sane.

Mrs. Gill faced the accusation with a plea of innocence to the complicity charge and an additional plea of not guilty by reason of temporary insanity. Five of eight alienists representing the defense, the state and court found her sane at the time the Klansman was slain.

In its plea for acquittal the defense charged Mrs. Gill was not protected by the ordinary forces of the law against the violence and degenerate brutality of Gentry who counsel described as a "fiend."

"If Mrs. Gill had killed Gentry and gone to the police," defense attorneys argued, "there would have been no trial, public sentiment was so against this man known as Jefferson county's No. 1 public enemy."

Say $60 Paid for Killing.

The state asserted the widow had hired Carl Church, 36, a handy man who had done odd jobs about her cottage here, to come from Chicago to Jefferson for $60 to slay Gentry.

On the stand Church, who is serving a life term for the shooting of the Klansman, said Mrs. Gill did not want Gentry killed, but only put out of her life. His plan, he testified, to scare Gentry into leaving Jefferson went amiss and he shot Gentry in defense of his own life.

The key witnesses in the state's case were the Probst family, Albert, brother of Mrs. Gill; his wife, Mary, and their daughter, Josephine, the school teacher whom Gentry had been courting.

Holds Property at Stake.

The defense contended Gentry had kept company with Josephine not because he was in love with her but because he recognized her as a tool by which he could alienate Mrs. Gill and her brother so that the widow would not bequeath any of her property to Probst.

Mrs. Gill, the widow of a well-to-do tavern keeper, who killed himself in 1918, had a considerable amount of money. She charged Gentry often had used force and weapons to scare her into giving him cash and notes.

Gentry first became acquainted with Mrs. Gill in 1924 while here in the interests of the Ku Klux Klan. He later became a bartender for her and then boarded at her home.

As a partner of Stephenson, Gentry had been a defendant in the sensational murder case of Madge Oberholtzer, an Indiana girl. Stephenson now is serving life for the killing.

7 PERSONS HURT IN COLLISION OF TWO AUTOS

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Four Milwaukeeans and three other persons were injured late today when two automobiles collided on highway 16 at Fall River, Wis., twelve miles west of Columbus.

The Milwaukeeans, who were only slightly injured, were Frank L. Weyenberg, president of the Weyenberg Shoe Manufacturing company, and his wife, and Gifford R. Vermillion, 2800 East Menlo boulevard, manager of the Milwaukee office of the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York, and his wife.

They were brought to the Weyenberg home in Fox Point, just outside of Milwaukee. Inquiry there tonight elicited information they escaped with minor bruises and were "resting."

Deputy Sheriff E. J. Birch of Thiensville was with the Milwaukee party, which was bound north for a hunting trip. He was bruised.

The occupants of the other automobile were seriously injured. Dorothy Crown, 15, Cambria, Wis., suffered a skull fracture and other injuries, and Francis Bartness, 24, also of Cambria, who was driving the other car, suffered internal injuries and a possible fracture of the pelvis.

TWO MEN KILLED AS MOTOR TRUCK RUNS INTO TREE

Cook County Trafic Toll Reaches 942.

Abraham Obsaiof, 54 years old, 411 South Utica street, Waukegan, a vegetable peddler, and Paul Paulinkatis of the same address were killed last evening when a loaded truck in which they were riding ran off route 21 half a mile north of Grand avenue in Lake Villa and crashed into a tree. They had both been in Wisconsin and were returning to Waukegan when the accident occurred.

Henry Bell, 60 years old, 4967½ Lake Park avenue, died yesterday in Mercy hospital of injuries incurred Thursday night when he was struck at 41st street and Ashland avenue by a car driven by Arthur Daly, 8237 South Loomis street, son of a retired police lieutenant, Eugene F. Daly. According to police, Daly waited until Bell was taken to the hospital, then drove off. At his home police learned from his father that he had assumed Bell was not seriously injured and had left town. The inquest was postponed to Oct. 23 pending Daly's return.

Killed as Car Hits Train.

Edwin Bergstrom, 40 years old, of 3041 Perry avenue, was killed and his brother, Erik Albert Bergstrom, 45 years old, was seriously injured when Erik drove his automobile into the side of an Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad freight train last night. The accident occurred at the Telegraph road crossing, two miles west of Lake Bluff. Erik was taken to the Alice Home hospital in Lake Forest.

Gus Loula, 53 years old, 5705 Forest Glen avenue, a sergeant of the county forest preserve police force, was fatally injured early today when his automobile collided with another machine in a heavy fog at Roosevelt and Wolf roads in Hillside. Claude C. Current, 35 years old, of Davenport, Ia., driver of the other car, and his wife, Paula, who was riding with him, were injured in the crash and were taken to Elmhurst hospital. Loula formerly was chief of the forest preserve police.

Death Toll Now 942.

These deaths and two others brought the 1934 Cook county trafic toll to 942. The other victims:

Stephanie Klimek, 12 years old, 1037 North Paulina street. Fatally injured when struck by a truck while crossing the street near her home. Ray Weatherford, 27 years old, of 817 North boulevard, Oak Park, driver of the truck, was held for the inquest by Racine avenue police.

Miss Frances Thompson, colored, 48 years old, 6243 Vernon avenue. Died in the County hospital of injuries incurred when she was struck by the car of John Dundas, 28 years old, 7015 East End avenue, at 66th street and Eberhart avenue, Oct. 4.

Peter Chirchizau, 18 months old, son of Julius, 3738 Euclid avenue, Indiana Harbor, was killed in front of his home yesterday when he ran in the path of a Borden Dairy company milk truck driven by Carl Meisen.

Woman Store Owner at Litchfield Is Dead

HELD TO JURY IN FATAL INJURY.

John Sturtevant 57 years old, was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter yesterday at a coroner's inquest. Testimony showed that Sturtevant struck John Syalonek in the Saratoga laundry at 214 West Huron street, that Syalonek's jaw was fractured and that an infection developed that caused death.

LORD CUSHENDUN, 'ULSTER'S GIANT PEER,' DIES AT 73

LONDON, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Lord Cushendun, former British delegate to the league of nations, who was called "Ulster's giant Irish peer," died today at his home in County Antrim, Ireland. He was 73. Despite his high rank he was known familiarly to all Ulster men as Ronald McNeill.

Lord Cushendun came from a family of large men, hailing from the section near northern Ireland's famous Giants' Causeway. He was more than 6 feet 6 inches tall and his father was 1½ inches taller. On the Irish home rule question Lord Cushendun was a stanch advocate of unionism.

As a member of the house of commons in 1922, Lord Cushendun denounced conditions on Ellis Island and the treatment of immigrants by the United States, which drew a reply from Washington. Three years before he had expressed resentment at American "interference" on the Irish question.

The barony was conferred upon him by King George in 1927, after he had become chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. Lord Cushendun signed the Kellogg-Briand peace pact in Paris in 1928.

WEATHER DELAYS PICCARD FLIGHT TO STRATOSPHERE

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 13.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—The proposed flight into the stratosphere of Prof. Jean Piccard and his wife, Jeanneatte Piccard, was abandoned early today after weather advisers reported that the velocity of the wind showed no sign of lessening. There was a wind velocity of 15 miles an hour, which was too strong for the inflation. The Piccards will wait for later weather reports today before deciding whether to attempt the flight tomorrow.

Since Friday afternoon a ground crew of 300 men had been at the field waiting for the signal to begin the inflation of the huge balloon with 125,000 cubic feet of hydrogen. All final preparations were completed for the takeoff and an automobile to maintain two way radio communication with the Piccard gondola was in readiness for a dash to the southeast.

Alderman C. F. Johnson of Rockford Dead at 58

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Ald. Charles F. Johnson, 58, local Progressive and Socialist party leader, died today at his home here following an illness of several weeks. He had served as alderman from 1913 to 1920 and from 1931 until his death today. He had been prominently mentioned as a Progressive candidate for mayor. Ill health caused him recently to decline nomination as a Socialist candidate for the state legislature.

W-G-N FEATURES

Football will be featured on W-G-N this afternoon, when Quin Ryan will broadcast the Michigan-Chicago game from Stagg field. The broadcast will start at 1:45 o'clock, fifteen minutes before game time.

FRED AUBERT.

At 9:07 p. m., on "Headlines of Other Days," W-G-N will present Fred Aubert, a member of the crew of the dirigible America, one of the first lighter than air craft to attempt a trans-Atlantic flight, a balloon captained by Walter Wellman and a crew of five men. The flight was made in October, 1910. Bob Elson will give the newspaper version and Mr. Aubert, an eye-witness, an account of the trip, which ended in disaster.

Another W-G-N attraction today will be the premiere of a new fifteen minute show at 6 p. m. called "The Music of Today," featuring up to the minute melodies.

Other features:

RITES MONDAY FOR C. W. BROWN, CHICAGO AUTHOR

Funeral services for Charles Walter Brown, Chicago author and former newspaper man who died Tuesday in Glendale, Cal., will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in the chapel at 226 West Randolph street, with the Rev. Leslie Whitcomb, pastor of the Lake View Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial will be in Elm Lawn cemetery, Elmhurst.

The body is being brought here from Glendale by Mr. Brown's sister, Mrs. Irene B. McKnight, teacher emeritus of the Chicago public schools. Besides Mrs. McKnight, Mr. Brown is survived by a daughter, Miss Beatrice Brown of Oklahoma City, and another sister, Mrs. Edith Smith of New York.

Mr. Brown was the author of several books on American heroes: "John Paul Jones," "Nathan Hale," "Ethan Allen," and others. He was a former director and librarian of the Chicago Press club and a member of the Society of Midland Authors and the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

2 DEAD, 6 HURT IN TRAIN WRECK; 2D IN 24 HOURS

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Investigations were under way today into two passenger train derailments in Iowa within 24 hours which caused six deaths and injuries to 30 other persons. In both accidents the trains left the rails while traveling at high speed.

The latest wreck occurred early this morning when a fast Rock Island train plunged off the track six miles east of here and three of its cars fell into the path of another passenger train rushing in the opposite direction. Two persons were killed and six injured, two of the latter critically, in this crash.

The other accident was near Guttenberg where four persons were killed and 22 injured in the derailment of a Milwaukee passenger train yesterday. The train, overdue in Guttenberg, was rounding a curve at the time.

Funeral Service in Quebec Today for Leo La Rocque

Funeral services for Leo A. La Rocque, former member of the Chicago Board of Trade, will be held in Montreal, Que., this morning, with burial there. Mr. La Rocque died in Montreal Thursday of heart disease. He was a member of the Olympia Fields Country club and of the Chicago Yacht club and a former member of the Illinois Athletic club, where he lived for many years. He was an uncle of Rod La Rocque, motion picture actor.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Five Chicago stations are to cooperate tonight in presenting an all star program in behalf of the Community Fund campaign for $3,000,000. The half-hour show will go on the air at 9:30 o'clock from the Federal building at the Fair over W-G-N, WMAQ, WBBM, KYW, and WCFL.

The talent lineup: Mme. Schumann-Heink, Ireene Wicker, the Singing Lady, and Allan Grant; Tony Wons, Myrt and Marge, and Skippy. The Singing Lady will present an original song.

Speakers will include Mayor Kelly, Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the Women's Trade Union league; S. A. Goldsmith, executive director of Jewish Charities. The official Century of Progress band will also be heard. W-G-N will make a separate pickup of the show, with Pierre Andre as announcer. Phil Stewart will announce the show for other stations. Dick Marvin is in charge of the production of the program.

President Roosevelt, speaking over the combined coast to coast networks, will inaugurate the Mobilization for Human Needs campaign on Monday, Oct. 22. The musical portion of the broadcast will come from Chicago, with the Chicago Symphony orchestra playing a special program of popular classics.

Fred Weber, vice president in charge of operations of the American Broadcasting system [The Storer network], flew in from New York yesterday for a conference with executives of WJJD and WIND, and also of WCFL. The new chain has announced that it will start midwestern programming beginning tomorrow night.

The three Boswell sisters, Connie, Martha, and Vet, have rented a home in Beverly Hills while they're singing with Bing Crosby. Any they've installed a bed of extra width which permits them all to snuggle under the same quilt. First night they spent in the house they had a scare—they heard a mysterious noise. Vet phoned Manager Harry Leedy and he hurried over with two cops. They searched the house and on a window sill found a half pint of Mexican jumping beans in a glass bowl.

Wayne King will return to W-G-N tonight after a three day hunting trip in northern Wisconsin. This is the first time Wayne has left his orchestra in all his time at the Aragon ballroom. For that matter its the first time he has left his band in the eleven years he has been in business with it.

Clyde Lucas and his California dons will return to the air over WIND-CBS this evening when they open the formal season at the Edgewater Beach hotel. His orchestra of 14 men plays 63 instruments in the course of an evening. James Kozak will direct the concert orchestra which will be heard during the dinner hour.

SEIZE 3 IN RIOT AT MILWAUKEE TANNERY PLANT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Police reserves were called to the J. Greenebaum Tanning company plant at 2625 South Greeley street late today to rescue E. W. Newberry, assistant superintendent of the plant, and his automobile from 300 strike pickets who surged around the machine and attempted to overturn it.

The automobile was loaded with food, police were informed, which Newberry was attempting to get into the plant where he, the superintendent, and several other employés have been living since the strike started three weeks ago.

Three Arrests Made.

Three arrests were made during the disturbance. The prisoners gave the names of Ralph Noggle, 32, of 2019 North 28th street; Bert Patten, 54, of 1819 South 75th street, and Michael Carrao, 27, of 3354 West Cambridge place. After they were booked on charges of suspicion of inciting a riot they were released on $50 bail each. Capt. John Wesolowski said he will ask the district attorney tomorrow to issue warants embodying these charges.

When the disturbance at the plant started there were only eight policemen on duty. They telephoned for help and scuffled with the crowd until reinforcements of 15 more policemen arrived. The automobile was not overturned, but was slightly damaged.

The disturbance came on the eve of a hearing in federal court on the Greenebaum company's petition for an order restraining picketing. Federal Judge Ferdinand Geiger has ordered three defendant American Federation of Labor organizations and several individuals to appear in his court tomorrow to show cause why the company's request for an injunction should not be granted.

Charge Kidnaping of Girl.

The company's complaint, filed in Judge Geiger's court, alleges the "kidnaping" of Helen Romero of 4845 North 35th street, an employé of the company; that windows were broken and employés coerced despite presence of police; that construction of an addition to the plant was halted by hurling bricks at the workmen, and that pickets numbering hundreds have congregated at the company's two plants.

The complaint says Miss Romero was seized Oct. 2 and was held for a time while pickets endeavored to persuade her to join the union.

The company stand is that no lawful strike is in progress because it has not refused to arbitrate, it states, and no demands or advance notice were presented before pickets began to assemble at the north plant Sept. 25.

FRANK SCHWABER IS DEAD; CHEMIST AND SOAPMAKER

Frank Schwaber, 76 years old, 626 South Western avenue, chemist and soapmaker, died yesterday in St. Anne's hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Austria and trained in Germany, Mr. Schwaber and his wife came to Chicago in 1908. On America's entry into the world war Mr. Schwaber, a naturalized citizen, volunteered his services in the manufacture of potash, which had previously been obtained chiefly from Germany. He developed a formula for an antiseptic soap highly valued in the dressing of wounds. This year he arranged the soapmaking exhibit in the Colonial Village at the World's Fair.

Besides his widow he is survived by a son, Julius, of Chicago, and a daughter, Mrs. Hanna M. Lang of Oak Park. Mr. and Mrs. Schwaber celebrated their fiftieth wedding annivers

Miss Hyman Is Engaged to Lincoln Harris

Announcement Is Made at Family Dinner.

BY JUDITH CASS.

At a family dinner last night Mr. and Mrs. Robert William Hyman announced the engagement of their daughter, Jean, to Lincoln Small Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden Bartlett Harris. The announcement is of especial interest, for both Miss Hyman and Mr. Harris are popular members of the smart younger set, but it isn't a surprise in the least, for "Linc" has been petite Miss Hyman's devoted beau since her subdebutante days.

Miss Hyman went to Dobbs Ferry for three years and then spent a year at the French school in New York. She made her debut last year at a tea given by her parents at the Fortnightly on Armistice day, followed by a dinner-dance at the Congress given by her grandmother, Mrs. Herbert G. B. Alexander.

Mr. Harris, who has a younger brother, Huntington, and a sister, Valeria, was graduated from the Hill school and then went to the University of Illinois, but he did not finish there, preferring to enter the bank started by his grandfather, the late Norman Wait Harris, to finishing his college course. Young Mr. Harris is among those who make the most of living on Lake Michigan, and his sailboat, the Ishtar, is filled with masculine and feminine sailors all during the sailing season. Last summer he sailed it to Harbor Point, Mich., where the Hymans have a summer home, for his vacation. No date for the wedding was set.

Second Pooch Ball to Be Held Tonight.

Stars of the stage and the night clubs such as Fannie Brice and Veloz and Yolanda are a decided drawing card, but it's the glamorous Irene Castle McLaughlin that several hundred fashionables are interested in seeing this evening at the second annual Pooch ball in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman. Given for the benefit of her dog shelter, Orphans of the Storm, Mrs. McLaughlin has promised to dance again as she did last fall at the first Pooch ball.

To judge by the reservation list most of Lake Forest and many in town will be crowding into the Bal Tabarin after dinner and theater parties. Both the George Richardsons and the Kimball Salisburys, who are entertaining large groups of their friends at dinner and the theater, will bring their guests to the ball about 11 o'clock.

The junior James Simpsons have a table and so have Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hutchins, the Kenneth Carpenters, the Rush Butlers, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Scribner FitzHugh, the Benjamin L. Behrs, and the Edward H. Bennetts.

Holloway Wedding in Berkshires Today.

A wedding of interest to Chicago society today in the Berkshires will be that of Miss Ruth Holloway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe and Tyringham, Mass., to Edward Tarr Herndon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Herndon of Pottsville, Pa.

The service will be read at 4 o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal church in Stockbridge, followed by a reception at Tamarack Villa, the Holloways' home in Tyringham, which is just five miles from the church. Mr. and Mrs. Herndon will be at home at 151 East 83d street, New York, after Nov. 1.

At an informal tea yesterday afternoon at their Evanston home Mr. and Mrs. Louis Roy Walker announced the engagement of their daughter, Harriet Donna, to Robert Patterson Cross Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Cross, also of Evanston. Miss Walker is a graduate of Miss Porter's school at Farmington and Wells college in Aurora, N. Y. Mr. Cross was graduated from Northwestern university. Miss Walker and Mr. Cross are to be married on Dec. 21, after which they will make their home in Chicago.

Eastern Engagement Is of Interest Here.

Of interest here is the announcement made in Syracuse, N. Y., of the engagement of Miss Mary Abigail

FREEMAN GOSDEN has written a piece for Esquire called "You're Wrong About Alaska," which will appear shortly. The Gosdens and another couple spent the time that Amos and Andy were off the air, cruising in Alaskan waters. Gosden says that everybody thinks Alaska is frozen and that Eskimos keep jumping in and out of igloos. It's not like that. When he sent in the story to Esquire he sent a note to Alfred Smart, the publisher, saying that he liked his magazine so much would he please giv him his autograph on the rejection slip. Instead of that he got Mr. Smart's autograph on a check.

THE other evening while Henry King's orchestra, with Henry King at the piano, was softly playing "Give Me the Heart to Sing" in the green and silver Urban room, we listened to the story of the rise and fall of the Manassa Mauler. The narrator looked like an artist or a musician, more than a former boxer and trainer, but he was Teddy Hayes, the man who made Jack Dempsey, and joint "owner" with Jack Kearns of Dempsey for many years. The identification of boxer and trainer has given way to a new one. Hayes is now a rancher, a husband, a father, and author. Sixty thousand words of his book on the rise and fall of the Manassa Mauler are already in the hands of the publishers, and they're yelling for the rest. Hayes says he's got his end of it done, but Lina—his wife, Lina Basquette, ex-Follies beauty—has to go over it and polish it up a little. The story, as graphically outlined by Hayes, sounded as realistic as a ola. Not pretty by any means. But vigorous. Hayes says he has been doing the narration for some movie shorts, to be known as "Flying Glove" features. He and his wife and their two year old youngster are up from the New Mexican ranch, while Miss Basquette is planning a return to the stage. Hayes is along with her to help run things, but the ranch is his dish now—not the bright lights.

Good morning!

Come on! Let's all be proud of the movies this morning!

Because—they have given us "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"!

Whether you saw the play or whether you didn't, the picture adapted from the play is bound to delight you. It has captured all the original's flavor.

Real people live for you on the silver sheet as they did behind the footlights. The romance of the frail poetess, Elizabeth Barrett, and the virile and impassioned poet, Robert Browning, is a vital and lovely thing as unfolded by its present depicters.

No end of intelligence blesses "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Of course, the vehicle is a natural. A natural, however, which sloppy direction, melodramatic or sentimental acting, could have done awful things to. But the Lord was with it! And there it stands—a shining example of artistic integrity.

Elizabeth is, of course, the most interesting of the Barretts. The suspense soars and swoops about her beleaguered affair with Browning. But the other Barretts intrigue you, too. Especially Elizabeth's pathological Victorian father and her ardent, rebellious and unhappy younger sister, Henrietta.

Barrett's love for his eldest daughter is a selfish, horrible obsession. That she may never be able to leave him, he fosters her weakness and fights her doctors.

Then—comes Browning! To love her madly, devotedly entirely. To WILL her health with such intensity that she wills it, too, and slowly but surely starts to mend. . . .

Furiously, deviously, Barrett endeavors to separate the lovers. And the arid winds of his hate and unhealthy love kill the happiness of every living creature in his household.

Even Elizabeth's spaniel, Flush, creeps and peeps woefully to and from his basket when the master of the house enters his mistress' chamber.

[Flush! Now there's an actor! Every bit as good as the stage Flush that shared honors in the notices with Miss Cornell and Mr. Aherne!]

Miss Shearer as Elizabeth goes straight to the heart. Beauty, courage, the capacity for laughter as well as silent suffering all grace the character she so skillfully portrays.

And Frederic March is a dashing Browning!

I liked Mr. Aherne better—but that is a purely personal reaction. No one could bring more to the rôle than Mr. March has done.

As for Charles Laughton—there is something so absolutely, sinisterly irredeemable about the rascal when he plays a scoundrel!

That small, sly, soft eye, so craftily guarded by its heavy lids! That fat, false smile! The unctuous, powerful hands! The huge body that can move with such pythonic swiftness! What a Barrett HE makes. . . !

Maureen O'Sullivan is a wistful hurricane as Henrietta. Other members of the family, and those who have to do with the clan, are excellently presented.

Direction, staging—art itself!

You'll be a long time looking for, and a longer time finding, a film that gives you more enjoyment than "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Enter the watchcase compact—a slender gold disk that looks like a quaint gold watch—with puff, powder and mirror instead of a face.

If your earliest idea of fun was listening to the tick of your father's watch and your first yearning realization of elegance was the gold timepiece that dangled from your grandmother's bosom sentiment is what will make you fall for the latest wrinkle in compacts, a slender gold disk elaborately enscrolled. It looks for all the world like the gold watch of another day, minus the protuberant stem, but it tells you, instead of the time, whether your nose is shiny. And if it is, correction via the puff and powder route lies right there in the case.

If the sentimental appeal doesn't get you its efficiency will. It's quaint on the outside, but plenty practical on the inside. There's a compartment for loose powder, to be swished out through gauze; a good sized little puff, and the inevitable mirror that helps keep your complexion on straight. It's lightweight, doesn't make a little pig of itself and crowd everything else out of your purse—and it's so cute you get a great satisfaction out of flashing it around.

Lest such tales of its virtues make you fear for what it will set you back we hasten to tell you that it isn't much. You'll be beautifully surprised when you see it in a State street store. You've paid more for your handkerchiefs.

Being the sort who gets frantic about the gift question along about Christmas eve, we can't really believe there are people who do their shopping in tidy early fashion; but if there are such these watch-case compacts, available right now and at such a low figure, are the happiest kind of a thought for the sisters and the girl cousins and the aunts.

Slick gift idea, these—but not to be overlooked as a satisfying personal possession. Take a peek at them, anyway.

ELEANOR NANGLE.

Critic Pleased with Singing of 'Rigoletto'

BY EDWARD MOORE.

There are several reasons to applaud the performance of this one of Verdi's most popular operas. One might begin by marveling at the fact that of the five principal characters at the top of the program, none is Italian. But there is more than this.

One found that Mr. Thomas is a Rigoletto of the kind that would have caused pleasure to Giuseppe Verdi in his lifetime, a presentation that in voice, demeanor, sense of the stage, and that indefinable quality called personation would have created a keen desire to have it on every stage, not only in Italy but every other country. One found keen delight in the unvarying beauty of Mr. Molitore's singing of the rôle of the duke. But most of all, one found delight in the performance of Miss Morini.

Here, as never before, Miss Morini entered into the character she was portraying. She has a flexible and infallibly accurate voice; here it lost a bit of its brilliantly hard finish and became suave, caressing; in other words it represented and projected the real character of the opera. It was not a showoff of the artist; it was a genuine impersonation, and this without losing an iota of the striking music that Verdi wrote for it.

Applause was frequent and enthusiastic.

Madeline Coffman, violinist, appeared in a debut recital at Kimball hall last night. There are reasons for hoping for her future appearances, most of them based on the tone, the facility, and the style that she uncovered on this occasion.

Dinner Dance

Until an early hour this morning there was music and gayety under the low roof of the Saddle and Cycle club, for the debutantes and their beaux were dancing at the debut party of Miss Betty Forgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Forgan of Highland Park. Mr. and Mrs. Forgan presented their daughter at a dinner dance to which 175 guests were invited.

For the party Miss Forgan was gowned in silver lamé, simply fashioned, with low décolletage, narrow shoulder straps, and a train. The only decoration of the dress were two leaf shaped rhinestone clips worn at the neckline front and back. Miss Forgan's bouquet was a lovely cluster of deep purple orchids.

Mrs. Forgan, who with Mr. Forgan received with their daughter, wore a gown of heavy purple uncut velvet. Her flowers, too, were orchids. Out of town guests at the party were Miss Nancy Cassidy of Greenfield, Mass., and Charles Baker of Montclair, N. J.

Plan Benefit Game.

Plans for the football game between Mount Carmel and De La Salle High schools, which will benefit Loretto of Woodlawn and Loretto of Englewood, will be made at a meeting Tuesday evening in the Woodlawn Loretto gymnasium.

Flannel Robes Fashioned in Grand Manner

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Finds for Saturday! A knockout showing of new flannel robes done in almost a grand manner, sufficiently smart enough to give a lot of the velvet lounging robes a good run for popularity.

If you like navy blue flannel you'll grab one of the new models trimmed with wide white silk braid. This braid makes the robe, it goes around the cuffs, the top of the pockets and around the front facings and collar, then for an extra there is the belt that ends in two grand long white silk tassels. The same thing comes in other colors.

Old gold flannel is another find in sleekly tailored affairs with rollover collar lines, pockets and cuffs trimmed with golden brown for contrast. This delightful old gold shade has been hard to find for a long time. This fall it is one of the most effective colors available.

Scarlet flannel is always good. This time they cool it down with white or dark silk braid. Huge out-size Scotch plaids fashion some other tailored flannels for chilly mornings, and likewise some horsy checks in brown, navy, and black will do everything possible to keep anybody cozy and cheerful.

Then you might go for the white satin and dark dotted lounging pajamas that are worn as good spotted contrast under flannel robes, all three pieces tailored, the two piece long sleeved pajama combine and the long warm robe of flannel that matches the dots of the satin in color.

If you can't keep away from the velvets, you'll probably sink your remaining cash in some luscious new models of American beauty shade. They are made with long sleeves that fit tightly from the elbow to the wrist, with wide kimono sleeves from the elbow to the shoulder and with a violet silk sash for a gorgeous contrast, as the fringe that makes the stunning sash end tassels is almost a yard long.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

It was once popularly supposed that there was some power in the human gaze which could conquer wild animals and cause them to be awed. However, animal trainers do not trust their lives to their ability to look an animal in the eye. Animals are more affected by the movements and attitudes of the trainer than by his eyes. In fact, many trainers say that their animals do not even look at their eyes. And, as Sir Francis Galton once remarked, who ever succeeded in eyeing down a mosquito or an angry bee?

Hollywood

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—M. M. B's.

And that means more movie boners, which keep flooding in at high tide from various places. The lead off flicker flaw in today's lineup is in "The Cat's Paw." Harold Lloyd spent many months making this picture, and he did it with much care and attention. He and his staf went over the story, they looked at the daily rushes in the projection room, they previewed the picture many times and then Melvin Berlin sees "The Cat's Paw" once and asks: "What happens to the box of gold coins which Harold Lloyd gives George Barbier in the beginning of the picture?"

It's a fair question, for the box of coins is an important point in forwarding the story; in fact, a box of gold coins is important even if it doesn't forward a story. But Lloyd didn't seem concerned about this money. Perhaps he knew that "The Cat's Paw" would make him a box of coin at the box offices, for it is doing business everywhere.

In "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," writes David Maeth, there is a scene showing a big clock ticking merrily away. If one looks closely one will observe that the name on the clock is "Telechron." This brand of clock is an electric one, and electric clocks cannot tick. Chalk this movie boner up to the sound department. They put in the sound effects after a picture has been made.

During the unreeling of "The Fountain," says Vincent Bolta, Ann Harding takes Brian Aherne up to her sanctuary, which supposedly has been closed for a long time. Yet the room is brightly lit with candles.

Even the wonder picture of the season, "One Night of Love," has a flicker flaw, according to Norman Gottlieb. Grace Moore is making a debut at the Metropolitan Opera house. A shot of the audience shows the space behind the orchestra seats—empty. Now, any operagoer, who has been at the Met, knows there are always standees, and at a debut hundreds are turned away. Where are they in the picture?

And wait until you see Jimmy Cagney and Allen Jenkins in "The Perfect Week-End"—it's a field day for the movie boner fans.

Coffee

BY MARY MEADE.

Reducing girls and whipped cream just shouldn't be entertained under the same roof, for, when it comes to a showdown, the whipped cream is usually the loser and the woman the gainer.

So, if you think the presence of such lusciousness might cause a panic in the bridge club stick to the customary consomme, lamb chops, and orange ice. But should you dare to face the cannon try this short cut dessert on the girls. It's one of those hastily prepared affairs that have the appearance of at least an hour's good hard work expended upon it. With the first bite they'll forget reduction diets.

Quick Chocolate Refrigerator Cake.

1½ cups confectioner's sugar
5 tablespoons cocoa
1 dozen large chocolate wafers

Combine the whipping cream, sugar, and cocoa, and mix them thoroughly. Don't whip the cream, however. Let this mixture stand in the refrigerator for six hours or more. Then whip the combination. The mixture will thicken quickly and will not need much whipping.

Make a roll of the chocolate wafers, lined up side by side with a thin layer of the fluffy mixture between each. Stand the roll on its side and frost it with the remainder of the cream. Let stand overnight in the refrigerator. To serve, cut slices off the roll slantwise. And just see if they don't clamor for the recipe!

Another minute saver is a filling for a pie which needs only a whipping up and a baking. Here 'tis:

Whipped Cream Pie.

3 egg whites
Pinch of salt
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon almond flavoring or any other flavor desired
Unbaked pastry shell

Whip the cream with the flavoring until stiff. Combine the sugar and flour and fold them into the cream. Add the salt to the egg whites and beat until stiff. Fold this into the whipped cream mixture. Pour into a pastry lined pie pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the filling is set.

Speaking of pies, sometimes when you're rushed why not try baking pie fillings in individual or large casseroles or right in the pie pan, but without the crust? This works especially well with the chiffon pies. Name them Fluff Puddings and see if the mister doesn't smack his lips.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Depressions may go, but the interest in the dance goes on forever. Interpretive dancing, ballet, tap, waltz, fox trot, rumba, and every kind of dance movement has its interested audience, if not its active participants. The wonder to me is that more of our young women do not take up dancing in some form or another. To be a good dancer is about the shorest cut known to popularity. But I am going to argue for more dance lessons from the beauty standpoint, and because I find in most communities of any size a tendency toward group classes which reduces dancing instruction to a minimum price, I don't say within the reach of every young woman's pocketbook, but certainly within the reach of more pocketbooks.

As an exercise for all around body culture it stands at the top of the list. It's fun as well as exercise, and any exercise into which you can introduce music and play is ten times better than the ordinary run of muscle culture. Dance does one thing for a person that I cannot honestly attribute to many other forms of exercise, namely, the assurance of poise. An easier grace, I mean, that makes social contact a more gracious thing.

Also, I talk the dance because it does provide opportunity to get away completely and entirely from oneself and her troubles and worries, a need of the moment. I've never known any one who joined up with a dancing class who wasn't its most enthusiastic supporter. The trouble hertofore has been that its cost was more or less prohibitive, but with the widening of the group or class idea the high cost of the healthful amusement has been alleviated.

I always feel a little apologetic about advocating dance lessons for the older woman because she argues: "What's the use when you can't get your husband to dance with you?" Can't one leave the husband out, or dance partner, whoever he might or might not be, and think of dancing purely as an exercise? Just stepping around the living room in tune to a good dance melody is an exercise of value. It puts new life in the older girl. If her arches are getting weak the dancing steps are most heartily recommended. If she is getting stiffish, so that she has to lift herself out of the chair with both hands, dancing steps will limber her.

Rev. Amos Thornburg Will Assume Wilmette Pastorate

Bishop Ernest L. Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal area of Chicago announced yesterday the appointment of the Rev. Amos Thornburg of Aurora as pastor of the Methodist church of Wilmette. He will succeed the Rev. Dr. Oscar Thomas Olson, who recently was called to the Epworth-Euclid Methodist church of Cleveland, O. The Rev. Mr. Thornburg's rise in the ministry has been regarded as phenomenal. He is 34 years old. The Wilmette church is said to rank among the first two or three churches in central western Methodism in influence and strength. The Rev. Mr. Thornburg will deliver his first sermon at Wilmette tomorrow morning.

BLAZING GUNS

By WILLIAM MacLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Landis marries Cole Sanborn, fearless young outlaw and suspected train robber, within an hour after meeting him. Their marriage is one in name only in order to fight against their common enemy, Chet Radbourne, powerful boss in the country and owner of Circle 3 T ranch. He has been trying to force Mary to marry him and has been stealing cattle from her Lazy B ranch. Mary is captured and taken to Circle 3 T ranch. Slim Calhoun, a good looking young outlaw in Chet's employ, has a run-in with Jerry Haskell, Chet's foreman, and leaves Circle 3 T and joins Cole. By a trick, Cole captures Chet's men without bloodshed and makes Chet the laughing stock of the country by returning them to him. Cole forces Chet to surrender Mary and puts her under the protection of the Peters family in Jonesboro. Chet captures Rusty Hunter, one of Cole's trusted men, and a young boy named Morse. After giving Art Simmons a note to take to Mary in case anything happens to him, Cole captures Chet and forces him to make his men surrender Rusty. Then Cole and his men and Radbourne, their prisoner, await the return of Jerry Haskell with Morse. They defend the house against Haskell until Haskell fires it and they are forced to make a rush for the horse corral. Faust, a hired killer who has deserted Chet, makes Simmons take Cole's note to Mary.

INSTALMENT XLII.

MARY ACTS.

Mary did not go into the house. She put down the watering can and walked to the gate. "Let us hurry. Please."

"Got to see a fellow," Simmons said, and gave his disreputable hat a slight tilt upward in lieu of a bow.

Curious eyes followed Mary and her hard faced companion as they moved along Main street toward the office of the sheriff. The girl had already outraged public opinion by marrying Cole Sanborn, recognized as a gambler and a "bad man." The frontier town had its social dividing line.

Faust was conscious of public disapproval, but went his pokerfaced way regardless of it. He was not a man to overstep the line, but just now lives were at stake. Mary did not even know she was violating the proprieties. The panic in her bosom had swept away minor considerations. Her eyes were haggard with anxiety. Fear tortured her soul. Cole was in peril. She must save him.

Two men were in the office with Magruder. Both of them were tall and rangy, strangers in town. They were deputy United States marshals.

Mary did not even take time to apologize for intruding.

"My husband," she cried. "He is in danger, sheriff."

This was not news to Magruder. It had been true for many months. He had risen at her entrance and stood frowning. What was this sweet and lovely but reckless girl doing on the street with one beyond the pale like Faust?

"Two of his men have been captured and taken to the Circle 3 T," she explained swiftly. "He has gone there to rescue them. With only three or four men. Against more than thirty. We want you to send up a posse at once. Every moment may count. Will you hurry, please?"

"We," repeated the sherif, looking at Faust. "You mean you and——"

The sentence tailed away unfinished. What he had in his mind was clear.

Gray Shirt smiled, a hard, dry smile. "I'm not in this, sheriff. It's up to you and her. I told Mrs. Sanborn to see you because I know what her husband is against. He can't cut it this time. Unless you want his men massacred you'll have to send them help—and damn soon."

"Who brought word that Sanborn had gone to the Circle 3 T?" Magruder asked.

"Where is Art? Bring him here."

From a fold in her dress Mary pulled the note Cole had written. She passed it to Magruder.

"He would never have written this if he had not known he was—in great danger. Mr. Simmons wasn't to give it to me unless he knew my husband was—dead. But he did. Mr. Magruder, you aren't going to stand there and not try to save Cole, are you?" The voice of the girl was choked with fear. All that was worth while in her life hung in the balance. They might be killing Cole now—this very moment.

"All right," the little sherif said. "We'll start right off." He introduced the strangers to Mary. "These gentlemen are United States marshals. Mr. Clement—Mr. Brand, meet Mrs. Sanborn. They are here about the robbery of the K. & J. We have found new evidence."

At another time this would have greatly interested Mary. Now there was nothing in her mind but the immediate jeopardy in which her husband stood.

"How soon can you start?" she begged.

"Now." Magruder turned to Faust. "I'll look after the men and guns. Round up for me a bunch of horses. About a dozen. Have them brought here. Try the Longhorn and the Alamo corrals. You'll have to jump."

The sherif passed back to Mary the note from her husband. He spoke to the officers. "This fits in with what we had in mind. Might as well start now. It gives us an excuse to take more men with us."

He led the way to the street. The deputy marshals followed. Mary had done her part and was for the moment forgotten.

But she could not stay out of the picture. She could not fold her hands and sit quietly while all her future was at stake. This day had brought the decisive hour of her life. That certainly filled her being.

That Magruder would not let her ride with his posse to the Circle 3 T she knew. Yet she longed desperately to be near her husband. What Radbourne wanted was her property. Perhaps she could make a bargain with him to let Cole and his men go if they had fallen victims to their eagerness to rescue their friends and were his prisoners.

Every day Mary went riding on a little sorrel cow pony which she kept in a stable half a block from the Peters house. She walked back down Main street and along the road to the stable. Some boys were playing marbles. One of them saddled the sorrel for her.

The posse of the sherif took the main road ten minutes later. In the posse were Preston, Gray Shirt, a doctor, and the deputy United States marshals.

Cole raised above the stockade a pole from the end of which a white rag fluttered.

"Looks to me some times like you don't know sic' 'em, Cole," grumbled Rusty. "We lose on yore proposition any way you take it. If Haskell agrees to fight you it will be because he has the deck rigged to win high, low, jack and the game. That hombre isn't going to shoot it out with you on the square. Sure as hell's hot, he will have it fixed to stop yore clock. We're doing fine the way things are. Let's rock along for a while."

Sanborn did not answer. He moved the pole back and forth to attract attention.

"Rusty has the right of it," Slim said, picking up the protest where the old man had dropped it. "Jerry won't agree to meet you unless he has about six of his sharpshooters posted to blast you off the map soon as you show up. There isn't a straight hair in that bird's head."

"I'll agree to what you say about Haskell," Cole replied. "Some of his men might be willing to dryguich me, but if he takes me up to fight a duel they will make him stick it out on the level. He couldn't rue back on a bargain without losing face. No use loading ourselves, boys. We are in a trap, and we can't fight our way out of it. But if I could put Haskell out of business his men would quit and let us go. They would figure it too expensive to dig us out of our hole."

"What, you mean us, Cole?" Slim asked. "You know blamed well you wouldn't be here. Maybe we're not sitting wide and handsome, but they haven't got our hides nailed to a fence yet. Betcha they are getting pretty sick of their job. Soon they will begin to figure this ain't their war, anyhow."

"They are wearing us down," Cole answered. "Presently one of us will be killed, then another. I don't say we can't hold out through the night, but when morning comes some of them will climb the hill back of the stable and pick us off from there. Here comes some one with a white flag. Will you meet him and have him take my offer to Haskell, Slim?"

"Don't like it a bit," Rusty disapproved, scowling. "They're not crowding us now, but if Haskell gets you they will sure rush the corral."

The Elegance of Rich Fabric

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

The new models are simple in line, but stress elegance in rich fabrics. This lovely model has a smart and becoming high neckline with matching fabric in the cuffs. The raglan sleeves simplify the making. The frock is made of black silk crêpe with a criss-cross pattern in gleaming, gold metal threads. For trimming, sheer white crêpe, metal threaded, is used.

The pattern, No. 3399, comes in sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

Perfectly Neat House Cramps Child's Style

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Do you deplore the fact that your house isn't always beautifully orderly and shining, swept and dusted and garnished?

Well, don't.

There are three kinds of people who achieve that ideal. First, those who put their houses before anything else. Next, those whose children have grown up and gone away. Third, those whose children have no hobbies or special interest or art or craft of which the paraphernalia litters up a house.

Reconcile yourself to a certain amount and kind of disorder if you have children. I don't mean constant confusion, but I do mean the effect of disorder that is given when a house is filled with people who do things—who live and grow by self-activity. Try not to refuse to let your child "ride a hobby" or pursue an interest because the materials for it will clutter up the house. Pets make work; carpentry, model building, painting, drawing, radio building, all take up space and destroy the perfect orderliness that good housewives crave.

I know that in the cramped way that many families have to live it is often difficult and sometimes impossible to manage these things. But do what you can about it; sacrifice a degree of appearances. For it is this kind of clutter which enriches life for your child, develops him, makes his home a real one, and keeps him from turning to trashy reading, too much of the movies and radio and the street for his amusement.

BY NANCY CABOT.

This simple "Mosaic No. 12" pattern is easy to piece and possesses interesting color possibilities, which is what it takes to make a quilt attractive to novices. Old pieces of prints and plain materials from your scrap bag may be used to fashion the triangles and square that compose the whole. Yellow, brown, and white form a good color scheme for a quilt to be used in a man's room.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress.

For many years the Johnsons made their home on Ritchie place in Chicago, and Dr. Johnson's father, the late James Gibson Johnson, is fondly remembered as a former pastor of the New England Congregational church. Miss Johnson is a niece of the late Mrs. Lorenzo Dow Johnson of Winnetka and a second cousin of the Ayres Boals, also of Winnetka.

Mr. Barclay, who is a graduate of Northwestern university, is in Syracuse as an instructor in psychology at syracuse university, where Dr. Johnson is a member of the faculty.

It may be that Miss Anne Byron Smith and Morrison Waud will be having a wedding reception next spring in the same setting as that of Betty Scriven and Frederick H. Bassett last June. Miss Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Smith, have just taken the Mark Skinner Willing apartment at 209 Lake Shore drive for the winter and the early spring and it was there that the young Bastheir marriage at St. Chrysostom's last June 2.

The Smiths have been at their Lake Forest home for the summer, but they are moving in town very shortly for the cold weather months. As yet Miss Smith and Mr. Waud have not decided definitly on a wedding date or the type of ceremony they will have. Mr. and Mrs. Willing are renting their apartment because they want to remain in Virginia for the winter.

Dean Gildersleeve Visits City Today.

Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard college, is coming to Chicago today for the celebration of Barnard day at A Century of Progress. Making her residence at the Fortnightly club, she will be met there at noon by members of the Chicago Barnard club and taken to the Trustees' lounge at the Fair, where the club is giving a luncheon for her.

Later this afternoon the club and the woman's college board of A Century of Progress will entertain for her at a tea at the Fortnightly. On this occasion Miss Gildersleeve, who is just back from a summer in Europe, will talk on "Facing Our Troubled World." In the receiving line with her will be Mrs. Robert De Golyer, president of the college board; Mrs. O. C. Hayward, president of the Barnard club; Mrs. John Vander Vries, and Mrs. Bruce MacLeish.

This evening there is to be a dinner at the Fortnightly for Miss Gildersleeve and then a trip to the Fair. Mrs. John Ewing is general chairman of the day's arrangements.

Benefit Carnival at Olympia Fields.

A gay party on the south side this evening will be the grand fall carnival the Olympia Fields Country club is having for the benefit of the Martha Washington Home for Crippled Children. It's to be an informal affair, with a buffet supper from 6 to 11, dancing from 9 to 12, and all sorts of carnival features the entire evening. Mrs. W. B. Hall is the general chairman of the party and Mrs. La Verne Norris is in charge of the ticket sales.

The New Orient Society of America will hold its annual meeting on Oct. 19 at luncheon in the Arts club.

Mrs. Roy J. Keith—her professional name is Marie Morrissey—is coöperating with those duo pianists, Georgia Kober and Theodora Sturkow Ryder, to give a concert at 3:30 on Oct. 28 at the Studebaker theater. The concert is to benefit the Protestant Woman's Protectorate and Father Ralph Rohr's camp for boys at Powers Lake.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

ACCEPTING SHORT-SUITED SLAM TRIES.

When you bid a no trump as dealer or second hand and your partner's response is three no trumps, this is a slam try. You will remember that the requirements for this response are:

First—Three primary tricks which must not count more than one queen-jack combination as a half trick and if counting it at all should have extra compensation in the hand, possibly two aces.

It is dangerous for partner to shade his requirements in any respect, as when there is no long suit to work with, there is seldom any margin or playing resource to overcome a weak spot. Further, it is not necessary to shade because that kind of hand can be better shown by a belated slam-try. Respond with two no trumps at first; then bid four no trumps over the opener's three. In fact, I think that this is advisable when any queen-jack combination is taken in to make up your three primary tricks, certainly with a responsive partner who trusts you and is not timid about high contracts. With a partner who has to be bludgeoned into a slam, the immediate force might be necessary. At all events never shade below this standard.

Opener Must Coöperate Actively.

The opening bidder generally needs more than the ability merely to confirm his opening bid in accepting this slam-try. With no long suit available, he must pass unless his hand contains four primary tricks, including at least two aces, and is normal in type and without any weak spot. At times Q, J, 10 can be taken in as part of the primary valuation when it is possible to visualize partner's three tricks so definitly that the slam is immediately apparent. For instance, if you have bid a no trump on

Sp. K Q 10 Di. A Q x

and your partner's response is three no trumps, you know that he has either [a] both black aces and two of the missing kings; or [b] ace of spades, king-queen of hearts, ace of clubs; or [c] ace of spades, king-queen of hearts, both minor kings; or [d] ace-king of clubs and both red kings.

That is to say, a small slam is a virtual certainty, probably without a finesse. There may be an ace off the hand, otherwise [if partner has two aces] there is probably a finesse for seven. You cannot expect the responder to have any kind of rebid, nor do you need it; there is no suit into which you desire to direct the contract if partner has four in it; you wish to be declarer and no alternative to no trumps is desired. Bid six no trumps yourself immediately. Seven cannot be bid on this hand; for it to be biddable, partner must have the values to bid four no trumps on his first response.

Opening Bidder Must Make the Decisive Bid Without Four Primary Tricks Sometimes.

NORTH	EAST
♠ K Q x	♠ 8 6 2
♥ A 4	♥ 7 6 8 2
♦ K 7 6 3	♦ 10 9 2
♣ K 8 5 3	♣ Q 7 6
WEST	SOUTH
♠ 10 5 4	♠ A J 9 7
♥ K J 10 x	♥ Q 9 3
♦ J 8 4	♦ A Q 5
♣ 9 4 2	♣ A J 10

Her tenace holdings make any bid but a no trump criminal, according to my theory, though she said a month earlier she would have automatically bid a spade. North bid three no trumps, having, as you see, the exact requirements in every particular. Now Miss Robnett, though having only three and a half primary tricks, could use her aces and jacks for the purpose of visualizing her partner's primary tricks. The ace of hearts, the king-queen of one of the black suits, and two of the missing kings were positively announced by the partner's jump raise. Consequently, there was only a king off the hand; six must be bid; there may be a finesse for seven. So she bid six, and her partner naturally passed; the jack of hearts was opened; the club was finessed successfully in the natural direction, and she made seven. Had she bid a spade, her partner would have bid two no trumps, which she could raise to six. If East opened a heart, seven could still be made because every suit breaks, but declarer would be in a constant panic of being set, whereas when South is declarer the only fear is concerned with whether or not the overtrick will be made; the small slam is always safe.

Young People Dramatize Evil of Depression

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"When I think back, say five years ago, I regret terribly the opportunities of which I did not take advantage. I had a job then, and a good one for my age. I had plenty of boy friends. I had offers of marriage from fine young men. I had a nice home and I was happy and contented. How was I to know then that things would not always come my way? How was I to know that these last few years would make such a change? How was I to know that times would be so bad?"

Disgusted goes on at length in the above tone of regret. Today she is twenty-five, no beau, a job, but not as good a one as formerly. It's all hit her fairly hard. She has lost confidence.

Disgusted is guilty of the one crime of the age—namely: thinking the gods of depression have picked her for their sole victim. The world is strewn with them, sister.

What's really wrong is that you've been listening too hard and too long to your own little difficulties until you have magnified them all out of proportion to the real troubles that are being experienced in the world.

You are being dramatic, girl, but your play lacks the vitality to be a success. Rewrite the plot and cast yourself for a better heroine rôle and taste for yourself the success of a part well played. You can do it if you want to!

DRAMA

The date of the opening of the engagement of "As Thousands Cheer" at the Grand Opera house, which has been postponed several times, is now finally fixed for Monday, Nov. 5. This musical show, famous for a full year's run in New York, will bring its original cast, headed by Clifton Webb, Helen Broderick, Dorothy Stone, and Ethel Waters.

The "Ziegfeld Follies" will end its stay at the Grand Saturday, Nov. 3. The company will then start on a tour that will extend to the Pacific coast. Fifty-odd cities, in thirty-one states, will be visited. C. C.

OLD GRADS TO HONOR GRANGE, SEE AIR BATTLE

Homecoming Blaze Lights Campus.

BY STEWART OWEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 12.—Down on the white striped green field where Red Grange blazed his way to fame just an even decade ago the 1934 football team of the University of Illinois, Red's alma mater, will battle Ohio State tomorrow afternoon in a setting very much like that on the day when the famous redhead ran wild against Michigan.

Just as that was the first important game of the season for the two elevens that entered the battle keyed by championship aspirations, so is tomorrow's the first important test for a couple of teams that believe a Big Ten title is not entirely outside the realm of probability. The weather, too, lends itself to the analogy; all week a blistering sun has beaten down on the scene of battle and the outlook for tomorrow is for a perfect Indian summer day.

Hail to the Orange——

Champaign and Urbana have adorned themselves in the traditional homecoming garb of Orange and Blue, with the figure "77" in blazing orange and signs of "Welcome, Red," forming the keynote of the decorations. Rusty leaves are fluttering from the trees and it requires little imagination for the homecomer to delude himself that he is in the setting for a reënactment of the scenes that made Red Grange the most famous of modern football players.

But there won't be any Red Granges on the football field tomorrow or if there is to be his identity has been kept a dark secret by both Coach Robert Zuppke of Illinois and Coach Francis Schmidt of Ohio State up to this time.

Forward passing has been made the basis of the Illinois attack. Zuppke has built his entire offensive about the ability of his great little quarter back, Co-captain Jack Beynon of Rockford, to heave a football with unerring accuracy into the arms of the ends and backs. He has supplemented it by developing the passing talents of Les Lindbergh of Lockport and Frank Froschauer of Lincoln, Illinois' two regular half backs, Wilbur Henry, a sophomore quarter back from Benton, and Bob Grieve, a substitute half back from Glen Ellyn.

A Back Field of Passers.

Coach Schmidt, however, is no less well equipped with passers. His entire starting backfield is composed of passers and he has relied very much in the past upon an open attack, which has led Illinois to expect just that type of play tomorrow.

The Buckeyes, however, have an advantage over the Illini in that the forward passing attack is an auxiliary weapon. All four of the starting backs are hard, powerful runners. The Illini have little power in their running attack, Lindbergh being the only one who has sufficient weight and power to be much of a threat.

Beynon has been suffering from a lame muscle in his shoulder and while he will be able to play may lack some of the control that made him one of the best passers in the Big Ten last season. If he is not at his best, the slight advantage Illinois has in its passing attack probably will be erased entirely.

Kabealo Outstanding Punter.

Without that slight advantage in the air, it is unlikely that the Illini can match the Ohio State offensive. Certainly its half backs can not match the power of Heekin and Smith in running with the ball. In kicking, it might be a standoff, if Lindberg is at his best, but the balance appears to swing toward Ohio State in that department, too. Last season Lindberg at times was as good as any punter in the conference, but he had his off-days. John Kabealo, the Ohio State full back, is probably the greatest kicker in the Big Ten.

Defensively, Ohio State also seems to have the edge. Its line out weighs Illinois by 17 pounds to the man and it is made up almost entirely of veterans who have been through one year of Big Ten competition.

Last year Ohio State won by the point after touchdown in a battle that was packed with thrills down to the last minute of play. With the memory of that game in mind and the attractions of the Red Grange homecoming 30,000 spectators are descending on the Twin Cities. Grange flew down from Chicago this afternoon and was welcomed by members of the athletic staf of the university and alumni. This evening his name echoed across the campus, a crowd of 5,000 cheered him at a massmeeting on the drill field opposite the stadium.

Nevada Hands 9-7 Surprise to St. Mary's

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.—(AP)—A little band of Nevada university football players tamed the vaunted Gaels of St. Mary's, 9 to 7, here today before an amazed crowd of 20,000 Nevada scored a touchdown against St. Mary's second string team early in the game and forced the surprised Slip Madigan to send in his regulars.

Nevada yielded one touchdown to the supposedly very tough Gaels and then held them until the last few minutes of the game, when Tom Cashill, Nevada center, booted a perfect drop kick.

The crowd had expected to see Nevada slaughtered, or at least badly cut up, for Nevada had been beaten, 40 to 0, by Santa Clara and 33 to 0 by California, and the Gaels had trimmed California, 6 to 0.

Slip Makes Bad Guess.

The Nevadans immediately proved this strategy a mistake. As the opening quarter drew to a close they smashed over their touchdown after a thrust that carried them 30 yards The score followed a recovered fumble. Three passes netted 29 yards and a first down on St. Mary's 1 yard line. On the fourth down Full Back Tharp went over.

Coach Madigan rushed in his first string men as the second period opened. Three times Nevada held for downs, but on a fourth attempt St. Mary's crashed over for a touchdown. The play opened on Nevada's 40 yard line. A five yard penalty advanced the Gaels to the 35, from where Schreiber tossed the ball to Erdelatz, who caught it over the goal line.

St. Mary's Drive Fails.

The third period was scoreless with St. Mary's making a tremendous drive that started on its 28 yard line and ended on Nevada's two foot line. With five yards to go and four downs to make it, the Gaels bumped up against a stone wall defense and had to yield the ball.

As the game neared its close the Nevadans opened on their 35 yard line. They moved to St. Mary's 48 on a penalty, from where Haman passed 28 yards to Flournoy. A plunge gained nothing and two passes failed when Cashill took his place for the drop kick.

N. U. PITS PASS ATTACK AGAINST STANFORD TODAY

Coast Gives Wildcats No Chance for Victory.

Palo Alto, Cal., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Northwestern, standard bearer of the Big Ten, and Stanford, champion of the Pacific coast conference, will meet here tomorrow before a crowd of 30,000, including a small following of Northwestern alumni, assembled from various points on the coast.

Stanford's big red team, the pride of the Pacific coast now that Southern California has toppled from the heights, is a heavy favorite. This sentiment prevails despite the fact that Stanford will be without the services of Bobby Grayson, its chief ball carrier. A hip injury, sustained in last week's game with Oregon State, has definitly eliminated the veteran full back from tomorrow's lineup.

Hamilton Replaces Grayson.

His absence has caused no concern in this partisan community which feels that Grayson or no Grayson, Stanford is a cinch. Grayson will be replaced by Bones Hamilton, regular right half, who is reputed to be just as able a ball toter. The right half position will be plugged by Gordon Head, 185 pound sophomore.

In the rôle of underdog, to which they have been relegated since their arrival here Thursday, the Wildcats have been quietly preparing for their first appearance on the coast. The squad, conceding nothing to its opponents, feels confident it will uphold the reputation of the Big Ten against the best the Pacific coast can offer.

Use Same System.

The game will bring together two teams using the same type of attack, the Warner system. Coach Tiny Thornhill, who succeeded Pop Warner at Stanford two years ago, has departed but little from the teachings of his master. Thornhill played under Warner at Pittsburgh and was associated with him at Stanford as line coach for many years. Dick Hanley came upon the Warner system at Washington State, where he was coached by Lone Star Deitz, a member of the famous Carlisle Indian eleven, for which Warner evolved his double wing and unbalanced line attack.

There is no questioning the power of Stanford's eleven which possess a majority of the players that swept through last year's season undefeated until it met Columbia in the Rose Bowl. The Cardinals will outweigh the Wildcats 15 pounds per man from end to end. In Reynolds and Calloway they have two sturdy tackles, weighing 215 and 210, respectively. Adams and Rouble, the guards, and Muller, center, average 210 each, while Moscrip and Topping, ends, both weigh 190 pounds. Moscrip is hailed as the greatest end on the coast. He is a brilliant defensive player and a fine pass receiver.

Stanford Shuns Passes.

Stanford will rely on its strong running attack to overpower the Wildcats. In their three games to date, the Cardinals have employed the pass very sparingly and with indifferent success. The combined ball carrying abilities of Hamilton, Head, Maentz, and Alustiza will be Stanford's principal weapons. Alustiza, stumpy little quarter back, will do the punting, at which he has earned a reputation for putting his opponents in a hole by his accurate out of bounds placements.

Coach Hanley's earlier pronouncements of a general shakeup in the Wildcat lineup have simmered down to inserting huge Park Wray at right tackle and the aggressive Frank Riley at right guard. Duvall, who was shunted to the second team in the workouts en route to San Francisco, made such a favorable showing in the scrimmage with the University of San Francisco eleven yesterday that he is once again in the starting lineup.

SENDING MICHIGAN'S HOPES UP IN SMOKE

University of Chicago students spent a busy day and evening working themselves up in anticipation of a bigger celebration today in the event their Maroons beat Michigan at Stagg field. A torchlight parade and a bonfire concluded their pep session last night in the Circle, at the middle of the campus. This big gathering is hoping that Michigan's chances are going up in the smoke of the bonfire. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 12. — There's likely to be some fancy corn husking here tomorrow before an assemblage of 32,000 but the principals in the exhibition may not be Nebraska's own cornhuskers. The fear, and it is a fear not put on to cover up a plot, is that the job will be handled almost exclusively by the varsity boys from the neighboring state of Iowa. The Nebraska eleven, so its admirers believe, is a bit too green to cope with the class of warriors the Hawkeyes are expected to pour into the chalk lined arena.

Many Players Graduated.

Nebraska's setback before the Minnesota power plant last Saturday did much to stimulate the idea that the boys from the open spaces are about to write a somewhat off-colored season into their school's brilliant football history. Not enough experienced talent is on hand. And so far as tomorrow's picture is concerned, the local rooting colony isn't overlooking Iowa's already famous black and white combination—Dick Crayne, the knifing full back, and Oze Simmons, the Negro half back who last week showed the Northwestern eleven how to get over the ground in a hurry.

Nebraska points with regret to the

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 12.—The King's X., which Notre Dame graduates, engaged in the propagation of Notre Dame football, extend to each other, will be discarded tomorrow afternoon. For tomorrow afternoon at Memorial stadium, before 40,000 students, alumni, and fans, Notre Dame's Noble Kizer will lead his Purdue eleven against his alma mater, coached by Elmer Layden.

The King's sign, which in olden days gave sanctuary and relief, has no place in the battle plans formulated for tomorrow's conflict. Contending hosts, directed by members of Notre Dame's 1924 national championship eleven, are ready and eager for this fraternal strife.

Winner Takes All.

Kizer, who ten years ago cleared the way for Layden, full back of the Four Horsemen, seeks to win from his teammate. And Layden, in his first year as director of Irish football destiny, already defeated by Notre Dame's Jack Chevigny and his herd of Texas Longhorns, has marshaled his forces to repel invasion.

The winner takes all in football. The loser gets slight praise and less consideration. Perhaps, this typical American attitude toward athletics is unfortunate. Certainly, it may be decried in this particular combat.

And prospect of spectacular play directed by these friendly enemies, is the lure for thousands who will line the amphitheater which Knute Rockne built.

The Irish Are Ready.

Their presence is tribute to this rivalry, for they will outnumber the crowd which last year saw Purdue whip Hunk Anderson's unfortunate eleven, 19 to 0, and they are coming despite the fact that both Notre Dame and Purdue were defeated in inaugural games.

This background of association between the coaches has no minimizing effect on the feelings of the rival players. Indeed, it actually has served to heighten the desire for victory.

Notre Dame's sons are ready for this invasion. Tonight, around a mammoth blazing fire which swallowed a week's accumulation of pilfered wood Notre Dame pledged anew its loyalty to the team. Here was enthusiasm and spirit, a frenzy of support for victory tomorrow and a basic belief in future conquests.

Hold Final Drill.

All week the coaches have urged drive and speed. The flashing Andy Pilney, successor to Johnny Mohardt, Jim Crowley, and Marchy Schwartz; big Don Elser, 215 pounds of driving muscle; hard blocking George Melinkovich, and cocky Bud Bonar, the field general, have followed shouted instructions. Again and again they have raced through their plays, repeated fundamental blocking assignments.

Three Veteran Linemen.

In front of them will be a stout hearted, determined line. Wayne Millner and Capt. Dominic Vairo at ends, and Jack Robinson, at center, will leave inexperience only at the tackles and guards. Much depends on John Michuta and Joe Sullivan, tackles. Theirs is the responsibility when Carter and Purvis, Purdue's touchdown twins, are roaming. The guards, Bill Smith, from distant New Jersey, and

MAROONS' BIG DAY AT HAND; THEY'RE READY

Midway Expects a Chicago Victory.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The University of Michigan and the University of Chicago, off and on football rivals since 1892, will play one of their periodic farewell games on Stagg field this afternoon before a crowd which may tax the 30,500 capacity. It will be a farewell encounter because the Wolverines and Maroons are not scheduled to play each other in 1935 and 1936, seasons in which the two calendars are now complete.

It is the present plan of the Maroons to give the Wolverines something to remember them by during the years the two great institutions are giving each other the football chill. The Maroons are so sure they will be severe with the Wolverines that they started celebrating the victory yesterday noon and continued far into the night. The carryings-on at the Midway were said to be the most hilarious to which Maroon partisans have given vent since shortly after the world war.

Is Not a New Idea.

The Maroons really have been planning to lick Michigan ever since the team ran wild against Dartmouth at the close of last season. Their spring drill was conducted with the lick Michigan urge and the fall scheming has had almost an exclusive anti-Maize and Blue inspiration. Most of this scheming was done even before Michigan, generally rated the nation's No. 1 team last season, stubbed its toe against Michigan State last Saturday. Since that defeat there has been no quieting the Maroon ardor.

Chicago has not defeated Michigan since the 13 to 0 victory of 1919 and only six times in the 21 conference games played beginning in 1892. Strangely enough the two long time rivals never have played a tie. The closest scores were: Michigan, 6; Chicago, 4, in 1894. Chicago, 7; Michigan, 6, in 1896. Chicago, 2; Michigan, 0, in 1905. Chicago has shut out Michigan twice, 2 to 0, in 1905 and in their next conference meeting, in 1919, 13 to 0. Michigan has shut out Chicago eight times, not counting the S. A. T. C., 13 to 0 affair in 1918. Last year the Wolverines beat the Maroons 28 to 0, the worst licking save one, the Michigans ever accorded the Midway lads. The same score was registered in 1903.

Rely on Berwanger.

Most of the Chicago preparation for the game today has been along offense lines. Coach Shaughnessy says he expects Michigan to score, but that he hopes his protégés will score oftener. Great reliance will be placed in Jay Berwanger, of course. The Dubuque iron man, who was a sensation last year even with mediocre support and the confusion of performing on "the team of a million plays," is in fine shape. It is said he is running even more spectacularly than he did last year, that he is passing marvelously well and that his kicking is good despite the fact that every one he meets tries to teach him something new about kicking.

The Maroons have a Californian whom they plan to use as a semi-dark horse, although he was unblanketed for a spell in the Carroll game two weeks ago. He is Ned Bartlett of Glendale, who will probably be withheld from the starting lineup, but who constantly will be warmed up for an auspicious scoring spot where his exceptional speed and elusiveness can be employed. There will be a sophomore in the opening back field, even if Bartlett doesn't start. Warren Skoning has been designated as the starting right half.

Newcomers in Line.

Coach Kipke last night indicated that Patanelli and Ward would alternate between end and half back. Starring Ward in the back field is something new. Ward has played at end for two seasons, sometimes carrying the ball effectively on end around plays. Ferris Jennings, the starting quarter back, weighs only 137 pounds. Matt Patanelli and Cedric Sweet are the Michigan sophomores who will start.

John Regeczi got off a few 70 yard punts during the workout at Stagg field yesterday afternoon. Bill Renner, star Michigan passer, did not arrive with the rest of the team. The cast on his injured leg was removed Thursday night, however, and he is expected in town today. It was said that he might play a few minutes.

Owner Herendeen Finally Gets a Winner.

BY FRENCH LANE.

This has been a most discouraging racing season for Harry Herendeen of Chicago, who races some two dozen thoroughbreds. He came to town from his nearby farm early last May with a band of horses which he believed would be the sensation of the racing year. Instead of starting a winning streak, they began losing. Week after week and month after month they have been getting trimmed by horses which Mr. Herendeen and his friends believed didn't belong on the same track with them.

Owner Herendeen is a persistent fellow and he refused to quit in the face of all the failures. He trotted Levaal, a son of Lee O. Cotner-Rensvall, out in the Barney Ross claiming purse, which featured yesterday's program at Sportsman's Park.

Crowd Passes Him Up.

The crowd—it numbered 7,000—aware of the slow way the Herendeen horses have been running, wanted no part of Levaal. It bet on the Pelican, Supreme Sweet, and Bran Muffin.

Levaal went to the front at the beginning and stayed there. Supreme Sweet and Bran Muffin tried to catch him and so did Captain Red in the late stages. They didn't do it.

Levaal ran so fast that he tied the track record for five furlongs. His time was 1:00 4-5. In the betting the neglected Herendeen horse paid off at $41.52 for a $2 ticket.

Favorites Roll In.

The players of favorites had their largest afternoon of the Sportsman's park season. Three heavily backed choices rolled home in the first four races. They were Hip Boots in the first, Shirley B. in the second, and Willa T. in the fourth. Para Four upset the figures slightly when he put on a mighty drive in the stretch to beat the stoutly backed Preferred and pay off his backers at $28.66 in the third race.

Longden, the half mile track jocky star, was in the saddle of Parafour, and it was his clever ride which made the victory possible. Longden came right back with the same sort of an exhibition on the favorite, Willa T., in the Columbus Day purse at 5 furlongs. Longden seems to have just hit his stride, and is the leader among the riders at the half-mile track.

Stewards Ban Anderson for Rough Riding

Jocky Tex Anderson is the first rider at Sportsman's Park to arouse the wrath of the steward. For rough riding while aboard Polvo's Pride in the second race he was plastered with a seven day suspension.

Eight races, featured by the $1,000 Great Lakes handicap at 7 furlongs, make up today's program. Post time for the first race will be 1:45 o'clock. The Great Lakes handicap attracted such speedsters as Mr. James, Trombone, Jens Son, Broad Meadows, Gaillardia, and Trahison.

Ervast, four or five years ago one of the most talked about horses in the country, goes to the post with a crowd of $1,000 selling platers in the last race this afternoon. Catwalk is another former handicap star scheduled for action today. He runs to be claimed for $1,000 in the mile and seventy yards event.

BELOIT MEETS CORNELL; OPENS NEW STADIUM

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—More than 5,000 are expected to attend the dedication of the new Walter Strong Memorial stadium tomorrow, when Beloit college meets Cornell of Mount Vernon, Ia., in its homecoming football game.

With the return of Bob Bloom, half back, and Jack Samuel, end, from the injured list, Beloit will have its full strength for the first time this season. The starting lineup will have Jack Samuel and Kellogg, ends; Griggs and Clubb, tackles; Sebastian and Hilliard, guards; Hessler, center; Marshall Samuel, quarter back; Bloom and Capt. Gibson, half backs, and Runge, full back.

Roy Horstman, Cardinal Back, to Wed Next Month

Mishawaka, Ind., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Roy Horstman, a member of the Chicago Cardinals, and former star full back at Purdue university, has announced his engagement to Dorothy Dodt, Mishawaka. The marriage will take place here early next month. Horstman is a resident of Mishawaka and was graduated from Mishawaka High school.

HIP BOOTS, away in motion, was taken to the lead at once, maintained his position under occasional pressure, and outfinished SMALL PLAY under a powerful ride. Latter, subjected to battling tactics throughout, offered a stubborn contention but was not good enough. PRINCE REGRET raced evenly without mishap.

SHIRLEY B., taken in hand after the start, gained fast after a half, wore down the leaders, and won going away. DEWHURST gained gradually, responded gamely to punishment, and closed resolutely under strong pressure. POLVOS PRIDE, hustled to the lead at once, set a good pace for five-eighths, then weakened.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 12.—Southern California Trojans, 43 strong, or 43 weak as Coach Howard Jones sarcastically characterized them, rolled in this noon on a special train from Los Angeles, near Hollywood. They are fighting mad at the association of their names with the film city's, which may bode no good for Pittsburgh's Panthers tomorrow at Pitt stadium, where 60,000 spectators are expected to view the first game of the season played by Southern California east of South Bend.

It's a strange situation. Southern California, for years regarded as standing for everything stalwart and formidable on the gridiron, now is subjected to taunting gibes as darlings of Hollywood's colony. Even their student newspaper voiced this expression. Coach Jones, realizing psychology, rides them constantly on the same theme. Whether significant or not, the first article of baggage removed from the six car special train was a lady's hat box, which drew a laugh from the assembled welcoming committee and sheepish looks from the giant Californians.

Panthers Favored to Win.

Whereas the Trojans of old went forth in battle over their beloved Queen Helen, these Trojans seek to recover prestige dimmed by their games so far this fall and to still irritating conversation about modern Helens.

Southern California's record rather than Pitt's somewhat impressive triumphs over Washington and Jefferson and West Virginia had made the Panthers favorites in the advance betting at 10 to 7. Coach Howard Jones from the coast picks Pitt to win. Coach Jock Sutherland of Pitt picks Southern California to win. This is according to best coaching tradition.

What so terrible have these Trojans done then? After taking easy openers against Occidental and Whittier, the Trojans scored a lucky victory over Stagg's little College of the Pacific, 6 to 0, then lost, 19 to 0, to Washington State, which was vanquished last year, 33 to 0. That was catastrophic from the Los Angeles viewpoint and started the Hollywood persiflage.

No Sissies Found.

Certainly there was nothing sissy in the appearance of the young men as they stepped off their special. Several of them were good looking, but no especial care, apparently, had been devoted to beautifying. Instead they were big, masculine appearing fellows. Their starting lineup averages 199 pounds to the man, 16 pounds heavier than Pitt. When Cotton Warburton, diminutive elusive back, is not in the lineup, the back averages 189 pounds, 10 pounds heavier than the Panther backs.

Both Pitt and Southern California lost heavily by graduations from last year's squads. Each has three former regulars among those remaining with the others from former reserves and a sprinkling of sophomores. Among the Pitt regulars is Bob Hoel, senior left tackle, well remembered in the Chicago suburban league when he played for Evanston high. Among the Trojans is Half Back Max Belko, who prepped at Gary, Ind.

Spectacular Game Expected.

Whatever the result, tomorrow's battle is likely to reveal spectacular football. Unlike several conference elevens which argue that if you keep the other fellow from scoring you cannot lose and may win, Pitt clings to the once accepted theory that a strong offense is the best defense. It is perfectly willing the opposition should score if it scores more often. It defeated W. and J., 26 to 6, and West Virginia, 27 to 6. Hence, one may expect plenty of aerial heaves from Nicksick and Malarkey. Not relying on air alone, Coach Sutherland has three plunging full backs for ground attack with Issy Weinstock in the starting rôle.

Southern California's greatest menace is Cotton Warburton, whose exploits are too familiar to require reiteration. The Trojans also pass frequently. With their strongest teams, ends are great pass receivers and often ball carriers. Trojan elevens usually outclass opponents in the line. How Pitt's forward wall holds its heavier opponents may determine the result.

On arrival the Southern California party, numbering 70, including camp retinue and a few fans, went at once to its quarters at Shadyside academy, a boys' prep school located in the residence district. There a long signal practice was held.

MATSON WINS IN BANKERS' EVENT AT EXMOOR CLUB

First National bank officers held their final golf outing of the year at Exmoor yesterday. Prizes were awarded in four classes. The best of the field proved to be R. H. Matson, who had a 42—36—78. Other winners:

Class B—M. H. Thies, 87—14—73; second, C. V. Essroger, 88—15—73.

The low net foursome was composed of H. V. Amberg, J. C. Mechem, C. V. Essroger, and L. H. Northrop, who had 304.

R. H. Matson won the prize offered by C. B. Hazelwood for the most par holes. He made ten in par.

Iowa to Meet Nebraska at Lincoln Today

fact that last June's graduating exercises proved a thorough house cleaning for the football department. There's one survivor of last season's regular starters. That's Franklin Meier, the veteran center. Johnny Williams, now one of the two quarter backs, was only a part time regular. As a further aggravation for Coach Dana X. Bible there are only three other members of the present squad who had a part in last fall's affair with the Hawkeyes. They are Bernie Scherer, Walter Pfium, and Russ Thompson but they were used only as replacements. Two of the three probably will be among tomorrow's starters.

The right side of the Nebraska line was used as the road to victory last Saturday by the Gophers so Coach Bible has completely renovated that portion of his team for tomorrow's effort. Whether it will be an improvement is something he doesn't know but he has the usual coach's hopes. Scherer has been swung from the left to the right flank. Thompson, a 220 pounder, has been installed at right tackle in place of Pfium and Ladas Hubka at right guard in place of White. Scherer's vacated left end will be taken by Lester McDonald, a sophomore with a knack for catching passes.

Backfield May Be Shifted.

Developments in the 20 to 0 failure at Minnesota also have caused the Nebraska coach to sprout new ideas about his backfield material. Eight ball carriers are pulling at the bit for orders to get into the starting lineup, but their boss insists he'll withhold final word until shortly before game time.

Bauer who was at quarter against the Gophers is temporarily in the discard because he called for passes in his own territory, one of these leading to an enemy touchdown. He did the passing himself. He may have to suffer on the bench while Williams is looking after the signal calling.

At left half it will be either Benson, replacement last fall, or Douglas, a sophomore. At right half Parsons may start because he is team captain for the afternoon, but Cardwell, another sophomore, will get in there sooner or later. Cardwell, a product of Seward, Neb., is looked upon as the team's outstanding prospect, but his development thus far has been retarded by minor injuries.

Competition at Full Back.

At full back there's another struggle between a senior and a sophomore. Skewes is a veteran, but never played regularly. His new coming rival is Francis.

The Hawkeyes, after a final drill at Omaha, arrived here this evening and announced somewhat modestly that the squad would be at its full strength tomorrow.

The Hawkeyes are a cinch to be out gunning for big game because they haven't had much luck with the Cornhuskers since relations were resumed in 1930. In the four games played there never has been a difference of more than one touchdown at the finish. In two cases the difference was by only one point, always a matter of grief for the loser. Iowa's one victory in these four engagements was by 12 to 7, in 1930. In 1931 Nebraska triumphed by 7 to 0, in 1932 by 14 to 13, and last fall by 7 to 6.

BADGERS, SOUTH DAKOTA STATE TO MEET TODAY

Madison, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—With a lineup different from that which started against Marquette a week ago, the Badgers will face South Dakota State's eleven at Camp Randall tomorrow afternoon in the last game before opening the Big Ten campaign at Purdue next week.

Allen Mahnke, who started at end against the Hilltoppers, will be at center; Lubinsky will replace Bill Parrott at quarter back; Lynn Jordan will be at left half back in place of Tommy Fontaine, and Kenny Kundert will start at right half back in place of Karl Schuelke.

INFIELDERS on the Detroit Tigers of 1908 and 1909 wore felt shin guards as protection against the spikes of base runners. . . . Ty Cobb, who ran bases like Joe Medwick of the Cardinals, antagonized opposing players by coming in spikes first. . . . They then would take it out on the Tiger infielders when it came their turn to run the sacks, according to Donie Bush, who was Detroit's shortstop in those days. . . . Paul Schissler of the Chicago Cardinals is only 40 years old, but this is his 21st year of coaching. . . . He started out at Hastings, Neb., High school when he was 19. . . . Four of Dizzy Dean's seven defeats this season were administered by the Cubs. . . . Joe Savoldi was the first athlete approached by the movie people who wanted a man to play the part of Tarzan. . . . His salary demand made the producers gasp, so Johnny Weissmuller, former Chicago swimmer, was chosen for the rôle. . . . The Red Sox want to buy Roy Henshaw, former University of Chicago pitcher, but the Cubs are not interested in disposing of him. . . . He was with Wrigley's Los Angeles club this season, but will be brought back to Chicago next spring. . . .

All the adjectives which have been used to describe the gridiron feats of Oze Simmons, Iowa's colored back field flash, were covered by the athlete himself in a conversation with Coach Ossie Solem a year ago. . . . After the Simmons boys, Oze and Don, arrived in Iowa City on a freight train from Fort Worth, Tex., Solem remarked to the former: "You're not very big; what makes you think you can play football?" . . . To which Oze replied: "Well, boss, they say I'se kinda tricky." . . . Jay Berwanger is the champion pinochle player of the Psi U house at the University of Chicago. . . . O'Shea Signed for Bout with Billy Celebron

Promoter Maurice Rivkin yesterday signed Mickey O'Shea to replace Henry Rothier in an eight round bout Monday at Marigold Gardens against Billy Celebron. . . . Rothier is under a physician's care and will be unable to box Monday, according to Harry Shall and Eddie Stanton, co-managers. . . . Fred Cheynoweth, Manitowoc, Wis., will make his debut as a semi-final performer against Mickey Joy in a six round bout on the card. . . . Cheynoweth, managed by Ike Bernstein, has won eight matches in nine Chicago starts.

Dave Barry, Springfield, Ill., featherweight, who knocked out Eddie Anderson, Detroit, at Milwaukee Thursday, will arrive tomorrow for his eight round fight with Jimmy Christy at White City Monday. . . . Tommy Paul, former featherweight champion, and Leo Rodak, a leading contender, will conclude sparring this afternoon for their 10 round windup bout at White City. . . . The match has stirred up considerable interest and many give Paul a good chance to hand Rodak his first professional defeat.

Bus Breese, Manhattan, Kas., and Scotty Scotten, Indianapolis, Ind., have been matched for a feature bout at Cicero stadium Friday. . . . Eddie Vik, who stopped Young Joe Firpo at the Coliseum Tuesday, will appear in another. George Van Der Hayden, South Bend, Ind., has resumed drills at C. Y. O. center after being ill for several days. Mike Gizzy will start workouts Monday.

The 47th Ward club will sponsor an amateur show Tuesday at Queen of Angels hall, Western and Sunnyside avenues. . . . Boxers from the C. Y. O. who will appear include Ray Wozniak, Joe Bittner, John Hawthorne, Floyd Walker, and Jimmy Dolan. . . . Frank [Spike] McAdams will referee. . . . Teddy Yarosz, Pittsburgh, may make his first defense of the middleweight crown against Young Corbett at San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 22. Four bouts have been arranged by Earl Mastro for his amateur card at Community Recreation center Monday. . . . They involve Harry Smith and Jim Klampton, Chuck Linn and Jimmy Dunnington, John Plovonich and Dennis Jones, and Verne Patterson and Angelo De Benedetto.

Kansas State Loses, 27-20, to Marquette

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 12.—Marquette opened its home football season tonight with a 27 to 20 victory over Kansas State before 10,000.

The Hilltoppers scored two touchdowns in the first few minutes of the game, and one each in the second and third periods to lead, 27 to 7, as the fourth quarter opened. Then the Aggies rallied and pushed over two touchdowns.

Buivid, Marquette sophomore half back, dashed 52 yards for his team's final score, and Armstrong ran 56 yards for State's first touchdown in the third period.

DETROIT, 12; W. AND J., 0

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Two brilliant runs by Dick Lutz, speedy half back from Chicago, tonight gave the University of Detroit a 12 to 0 victory over an invading eleven from Washington and Jefferson college.

Lutz's first touchdown, scored on a seventeen yard dash in the second period, came after King, W. and J. back, fumbled on the seventeen yard line. Duker recovered for Detroit and on the first play Lutz smashed off right tackle, reversed his field, and crossed the goal line standing up.

Late in the final period Lutz laid the groundwork for his second touchdown, making a brilliant twenty yard return of a punt to put the ball on the Presidents' twelve yard line. Lutz then slanted off the left side of his line to race into the end zone. Storrie's placement attempts for the extra points on both touchdowns were wide.

FORDHAM WINS, 6-0

Newton, Mass., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Repulsing two fourth period scoring threats, once by a matter of inches, Fordham protected its early lead to gain a 6 to 0 triumph over Boston college before a capacity crowd of 22,000 today.

Joe Maniaci of Lodi, N. J., gave Fordham its touchdown in the first six minutes of play when he shot off tackle and raced 64 yards down the sidelines.

From the middle of the second period to the final whistle, Boston threatened constantly with its effective passing attack, but each time it was within striking distance of the goal, Fordham braced. Just before the half ended, Boston yielded the ball on Fordham's six yard line, but got even farther than that when it marched 70 yards to within four feet of Fordham's goal line midway through the last period. Curran's fourth down buck missed a first down by four inches and Fordham kicked out of danger.

KIPKE PREDICTS MICHIGAN WILL UPSET SOMEBODY

Two hundred members of the Michigan club of Chicago last night greeted Coach Harry Kipke and Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost at a dinner in the Sherman hotel. Among the former Michigan football stars at the speakers' table were Bill Hewitt and Tom Hammond.

"We are going to play better football than we showed last Saturday," predicted Mr. Yost, "but I don't see how any one can expect us to have as strong a team as we had last season. You can't lose men like Bernard, Wistert, Petoskey, and Savage, and expect sophomores or substitutes to step in and do as well."

Kipke said he had a team that would surprise somebody before the season was over and he hinted that somebody would be Minnesota.

Mrs. Riegel, Miss McDougall Play for Western Crown

Portland, Ore., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. G. E. Riegel of Spokane won her way to the final round of the western women's open golf tournament today by defeating Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago, one up. In the final she will face Marian McDougall of Portland, who defeated Mrs. Martin Hunter of Portland, 4 and 3, in today's other semi-final match.

GIVES CUE EXHIBITION.

Dave McAndless will give an exhibition of fancy billiard shots tonight on the Robert Schweitzer night program at the Samuelson Arcade. Later the Samuelson Kids will bowl the Samuelson Women's team.

St. Mel Beats St. Michael's Eleven, 20-6

St. Mel's football team remained undefeated of the west section in the Chicago Catholic High School league yesterday by beating St. Michael, 20 to 6, at St. Philip field. It was St. Mel's second victory and St. Michael's first defeat of the league season.

Palm, Duff and Boland scored St. Mel's touchdowns. Palm and Duff scored in the second period, the former on a ten yard run and Duff on a 30 yard pass from Oakie. Boland plunged three yards in the third period for the last St. Mel score.

Pass Brings Score.

Bowen and Crane Tech were victors in two Chicago Public High School league games. Bowen, led by Capt. Ed McLain, who scored three touchdowns, defeated Harper, 35 to 0, at White City for its second victory in the central section. Crane Tech scored its first triumph in the west division, handling Kelvyn Park a 30 to 0 setback at Logan Square park.

A touchdown by Price, who ran 15 yards after catching a long pass from Stoffer, in the final quarter enabled Riverside to defeat West Chicago, 12 to 6, in a West Suburban conference game on the latter's field.

Important Games Today.

Several games which will decide sectional leads and the traditional battle between Englewood and Hyde Park at White City feature the Chicago Public High School league schedule this afternoon. In the West Suburban conference, Maine of Des Plaines, defending champion, makes its debut against Downers Grove at Downers Grove. Evanston, co-champion of the Suburban league last year, makes its first appearance in league competition against Deerfield at Evanston's field.

De Paul Wins from Dayton Eleven, 12-6

De Paul university's football team registered its third straight victory of the season last night by defeating Dayton university at Loyola stadium, 12 to 6.

The Blue Demons scored in the second and third quarters, while the Dayton Flyers counted their touchdown in the closing minutes of play of the final period.

Durkin Goes Over.

Both teams played on even terms during most of the first half, but a fumble gave De Paul the ball on the Dayton 33 yard line. Phillips then pounded left tackle until he reached the 8 yard line. Dayton held, but on fourth down Loess passed to Durkin in the end zone for a touchdown.

McDonough Races 70 Yards.

Dayton was held in check until the last five minutes of play, when McDonough grabbed a De Paul pass on his own 5 yard line and ran 70 yards before he was brought down from behind by Oldani. Hoefling passed to Smythe, who was thrown on the 2 yard line. On the next play Halligan hit center for a touchdown. The lineup:

MICHIGAN STATE PLAYS CARNEGIE ELEVEN TODAY

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 12.—(AP)—Michigan State college, rated a favorite after its 16 to 0 defeat of the University of Michigan last Saturday, meets Carnegie Tech here tomorrow.

Coach Charley Bachman faces the task of proving that his Spartans really deserved their upset triumph over the Wolverines, while Coach Howard Harpster brings Tech to East Lansing with a record of two victories thus far this season.

CARDINALS PLAN SURPRISE ATTACK FOR BEAR GAME

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

Chicago Cardinal fans will be hard pressed to recognize their favorites in the opening game of the professional football season at Wrigley field tomorrow.

Hardly a semblance of the squad and tactics with which the Cardinals stumbled through the National league season last year will be present when the team lines up against the Bears in the twenty-eighth meeting of their intracity series. In addition to almost an entirely new personnel the Cardinals will employ a new offense.

This new attack will not be an innovation to the Cardinals alone, but to football as well, according to Coach Paul Schissler, who spent the entire week drilling his squad in the formations.

Offense Is Dark Secret.

No hint of the methods the Cardinals will use has been allowed to penetrate beyond the squad, but Schissler promises to unveil a system that will rival that of any team in the league for spectacular plays and scoring possibilities.

Tomorrow's game will mark the Cardinals' first attempt to open up on the offensive, which has been in the process of perfection for three weeks. It is ready now, and an effort will be made to bring the attacking prowess of the team up to a level with its established defensive strength.

Schissler plans to start nine new men, using only Lou Gordon, tackle, and Creighton, end, from among the half dozen veterans held over from last year. The back field will consist of Greene, quarter back; Russell and Cook, half backs, and Mikulak, who starred against the Bears in the all-star game, full back.

Guard Against Spies.

Both teams practiced at Wrigley field yesterday. The Cardinals completed their drill in the afternoon after twice being interrupted to clear the field of suspected Bear spies. The Bears' drill in the morning was held up while two men in buildings opposite the park were relieved of field glasses and notebooks. These were said to have been Cardinal scouts, but the Cardinals denied they had scouts.

At the end of the Bear drill Coach George Halas announced he had sold Wayland Becker, end from Marquette, to Brooklyn. Becker's kicking was one of the bright spots in the Bears' play against the all-stars. His release was necessary under the league player rule, Halas added.

HAWKS TO OPEN DRILLS MONDAY ON ILLINOIS RINK

The Blackhawks, world champion hocky team, will open their training season Monday on the University of Illinois rink at Urbana, according to plans completed yesterday following the arrival of the Hawks' new manager, Clem Loughlin, in Chicago. Earlier arrangements to mobilize the squad were canceled when some players expressed desires to see the Illinois-Ohio State football game today.

U. S. CALLS MORE LIBERTY BONDS; PLANS EXCHANGE

Roosevelt Keeps Way Open for New Inflation.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The treasury tonight called a 1 billion 870 million dollar block of Fourth Liberty loan bonds while President Roosevelt, laughing at conflicting reports of new inflationary steps, kept the path to them clearly open.

GEO. L. HARRISON. [Assoc. Press Photo.]

The bonds, bearing a 4½ per cent coupon, will cease drawing interest next April 15. Their holders will have the option of receiving cash for them or exchanging them for new government securities yielding a smaller return. The terms of the exchange offer are to be announced later, before interest ceases on April 15. Although in the case of 3½ bonds called last year exchange offers were made know nat once, it was assumed that in this case the treasury was waiting to gauge prevailing conditions in the money market.

Watch Monetary Situation.

That the President is paying close attention to the monetary situation there could be no doubt. He chose for companions on a week-end cruise both Secretary Morgenthau and George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve bank.

However, in answer to the direct question whether a further cut in the gold content of the dollar was contemplated, the President told newspaper men with a chuckle that he was neither a "prestidigitator nor an astrologist." He said many of those present had received a "bum steer" as a result of a conference between himself and Senator Bulkley [Dem., O.] yesterday. The Ohioan had said as he left the White House that a further cut in the dollar was "not an impossibility."

Mr. Roosevelt's assertion came a few hours after a general denial of Bulkley's "possibility" by Senator Lewis of Illinois, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee.

Business Pleas Unanswered.

For weeks organizations of business men have sought some definite assurance as to the future of the administration's monetary policy. This, Mr. Roosevelt has consistently declined to give. The interpretation most widely placed upon his remarks of today concurred with his statement of Wednesday that monetary stabilization could not be undertaken until prices have reached a higher level than that of the present. An assertion that no further monetary experimentation was in prospect, it was pointed out, would be almost the equivalent of immediate stabilization.

Meanwhile it was learned that the treasury intends to go ahead with its purchases of foreign silver, regardless but not heedless of China's protest that they threatened to destroy her trade and her monetary stability. The President said that he and Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau had agreed on a reply to China which would be made public shortly.

Over Billion Still Remain.

When the bonds called tonight have been redeemed or refunded about 1 billion 300 millions will remain outstanding of the original fourth Liberty issue of more than 6 billions. It was the third call for a portion of the issue within a year. Thus far a saving of more than $30,000,000 in interest charges on the national debt has been effected by substituting securities drawing a smaller rate of interest—mostly 3¼ per cent, but with a smaller block of short term securities at 2½ per cent.

The bonds called today are those fourth Liberties whose serial numbers end with the digits 5, 6, and 7, and in the case of coupon bonds those with serial numbers ending in these digits but preceded by the letters E, F, and G respectively. That is, a coupon bond with the letter E and serial number ending in 4, for instance, would not be included. But one with the letter E and digit 5 would be among those called.

GERMANY TELLS PLAN TO PAY INTEREST ON BONDS HELD IN U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—American owners of $6,000,000 of Dawes loan bonds may collect the interest due Oct. 15 from the Reichsbank.

Half of the $2,100,000 interest will be paid in foreign currency, which was placed at the disposal of the trustees earlier in the year, and the balance in marks on the same basis as register marks. This means the marks cannot be taken out of Germany and can only be used by tourists with the Reichsbank's special permission or sold at a discount of 30 to 40 per cent.

France, England, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, and Italy have received their interest in full, according to terms of special agreements reached between Germany and these countries.

Car Loadings Below Week and Year Ago

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Freight trafic in the week ended Oct. 6 showed declines from the preceding week and the comparable period of 1933, according to the report of the American Railway association issued today. Loadings for the week were 631,318 cars, a decrease of 13,329 cars from the preceding week and 31,055 under the corresponding period last year.

The report showed that miscellaneous freight loaded during the week was 239,926 cars, a decrease of 4,248 cars below the week before and 4,248 under 1933.

Grain Shipments Decline.

Grain and grain products totalled 31,734 cars, a decrease of 867 below the preceding week and 180 below 1933. In the western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week totalled 21,218 cars, a decrease of 754 below the same week in 1933.

Live stock loading amounted to 29,735 cars, a decrease of 753 below the preceding week but an increase of 7,269 above 1933. In the western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended Oct. 6, totaled 25,040, an increase of 6,536 above the same week in 1933.

DELEGATES HERE FOR MEETING OF MEAT PACKERS

The vanguard of more than 1,000 packing house officials who will open the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Institute of American Meat Packers Monday at the Drake hotel was arriving in Chicago yesterday from all sections of the country.

Approximately 200 officials have already been holding informal meetings at the hotel in preparation for the general sessions. These meetings have been sponsored by William Whitfield Woods, president of the institute, and John W. Rath, chairman of the board.

Topics informally discussed included operating problems, merchandising, machinery, plant renovation, and scientific developments. At the same time the exhibit of packing machinery was being set up in the hotel.

REGISTRATION OF FORD CARS GAIN SHARPLY HERE

Registrations of Ford passenger commercial cars and trucks in the Chicago branch area, exclusive of territory in Iowa, for the first three quarters of 1934 showed an increase of 83.9 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933, W. K. Edmunds, Chicago branch manager for the Ford Motor company, stated yesterday.

Total Ford registrations, passenger and commercial cars and trucks, in Cook county for the month ending Sept. 30, 1934, were 106.2 per cent higher than for September a year ago, Mr. Edmunds reported.

Senate Plans More Laws on Banks, Trusts

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—The senate banking and currency committee issued today what may be its final chapter dealing with its two years and more of investigation of the banking and stock exchange situation. The final chapter, which is brief, points out that while legislation has been enacted to "eradicate those factors which may adversely affect our economic conditions," more legislation may be necessary to fully accomplish this purpose.

SENATOR DUNCAN U. FLETCHER. [Fotograms.]

"In making this report," Senator Fletcher, speaking for the committee, said, "it is not the purpose of the committee to recommend a definite program of legislation which it deems indispensable to adequately safeguard industry and the public. However, a detailed and comprehensive outline may form the subject of a subsequent formal report.

Hints at Bank Laws.

"In the field of banking there remains for our immediate consideration vital matters relating to the conduct and management of banking institutions, such as truthful and adequate financial statements, nature and diversification of loans and security, proper banking reserves, trust function of banks, effective governmental examination of banks, employment of bank examiners, window dressing activities of banking officers, and other similar problems.

"Investment trusts conducted in accordance with the underlying principles responsible for their creation, diversification of investments with the view to investment return rather than capital appreciation, may have a place in our investment system. The facility of perverted uses of these companies requires that these trusts be circumscribed with protective safeguards.

Urges Changes in Trusts.

"The record indicates that it may be necessary to simplify the capital structure of investment trusts to prevent the organizers from usurping control and a disproportionate part of the equity and yield of these trusts; to limit and prescribe the concentration of securities in a particular industry; to prevent the diversion of these trusts from their normal channels of diversified investment to the abnormal avenues of control of industry; to prohibit pyramiding of investment trusts; to completely divorce investment trusts from investment banking; to eliminate the conflict of interest between investment managers and the public; to compel full and complete disclosure of the organization, capital structure, and management of the conduct of investment trusts."

VAST ALUMINUM COMPANY CALLED MONOPOLY BY U. S.

Charge Made in Suit Over War Prices.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—(AP)—The justice department unqualifiedly stated today the vast Aluminum Company of America "is a monopoly."

The allegation was made in the government's amended counterclaim in a suit to collect more than $5,000,000 in alleged wartime overcharges from the aluminum company, in which the family of Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, has important interests.

The document, not yet formally admitted by the court of claims, asserted the aluminum company is the sole producer and only source of supply of virgin aluminum in the United States.

Cites Scope of Control.

"Said company is a monopoly," the document continued, "and owns and controls numerous subsidiary companies, affiliated and associated by and through stock ownership, either in whole or in part, interlocking directorates, leases and other instrumentalities incident to trade and commerce."

Several months ago, Attorney General Cummings let it be known the department of justice was investigating the aluminum company to determine if it constituted a monopoly. A similar investigation is being conducted by NRA's research and planning division in conformance with provisions of the aluminum industry's code of fair competition.

Federal Testimony Closed.

The government closed its case in the court of claims today with the testimony of Palmer E. Pierce, a former member of the general munitions board, who described methods used to establish "reasonable prices" for wartime aluminum purchases.

The case grew out of the aluminum company's suit to collect about $600,000 from the government for aluminum furnished during and since the world war. Payment was held up by Controler General V. R. McCarl pending settlement of the government's counterclaim of overcharges.

Chicago Home Loan Bank Reports Gain in Assets

A. R. Gardner, president of the Federal Home Loan bank of Chicago, in a statement issued yesterday said that the assets of the bank have increased to $12,575,120, a gain of 3.9 per cent in the last quarter. Total advances during the period were $3,697,525. The principal increase was in loans outstanding to building and loan associations.

Markets, Banks Reopen Today

Trading will be resumed this morning on the Chicago Board of Trade and the New York Stock exchange after the Columbus day shutdown. Most other markets and banks will also resume business today but the commodity exchange the coffee and sugar market and the cocoa exchange in New York will remain closed until Monday morning.

Wheat Lower at Liverpool and Winnipeg

A heavy undertone developed in the Winnipeg and Liverpool wheat markets yesterday. All American exchanges were closed and the inflation talk, which had such a marked influence on Chicago prices on Thursday, was ignored by Liverpool. The English market closed equal to 1⅜ to 1⅝ cents a bushel lower in American funds, and at the lowest level of the day.

Weakness abroad was the main influence at Winnipeg, where wheat was off 1¾ to 1⅞ cents at the last. Continued favorable weather in the northern areas of the prairie provinces has resulted in rapid progress being made in completing delayed threshing and hedging sales were not offset by the heavy buying against export sales, as was the case earlier in the week. A good business, however, was reported to have been put through on the Pacific coast.

Other Grains Lower.

Other grains at Winnipeg followed wheat, with oats closing with losses of 1 to 1⅜ cents, while rye declined 1 to 1⅜ cents; barley, 1¼ cents, and flaxseed, 5 to 7 cents.

A doleful agricultural picture was presented by the detailed government reports on the Illinois and Iowa crops. The yield of corn in the former state, estimated at 161 million bushels, is the smallest since 1873. Production of feed grains and hay in Illinois is said to be the smallest on record, and a larger percentage of the sealed corn has been either consumed on farms or sold on account of the attractive price. The oats crop is reported as the smallest in 58 years, but farmers have refused to use this grain freely and 98 per cent of the crop is still in the hands of producers.

Iowa Corn Half of Normal.

The Iowa corn crop of 198 million bushels is 44 per cent of the yield in 1933 and 48 per cent of a 10 year average crop. Only three times since 1884 has the harvest been below 200 million bushels, when the acreage first exceeded 7,000,000 acres.

County average yields per acre range from 2 to 3 bushels in many sections in south central and southwestern Iowa to 45 bushels in the highest average yields in northeastern Iowa. In most southern Iowa counties corn will have to be shipped in from other sections.

NORTHTOWN BANK PAYING 8% MORE TO DEPOSITORS

A dividend of $44,004, representing 8 per cent of claims, for the depositors of the North Town State bank, Devon and Western avenues, was authorized yesterday by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. This marks the fourth payment to depositors and brings total disbursements to 40 per cent of total claims. Checks will be given out today.

Auditor Barrett also announced that $78,418 has been paid to preferred creditors and $220,068 in bills payable have been retired. The latest dividend is being paid out of a loan obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

W. F. Hall Printing.

Answer: W. F. Hall Printing company is one of the leading factors in the catalog and magazine printing industry. It numbers among its customers Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Dell Publishing company, MacFadden magazines, and others.

Gross in 1933 and 1932 followed a general downward trend due to decreased circulation of magazines and smaller sizes. These factors were in part offset by new contracts. In the latter part of 1933 the trend was reversed, but the change came too late to become apparent in 1933 earnings.

In May, 1934, the company announced that it had obtained contracts to print the magazine Today and the Elks' magazine.

For the year ended Jan. 31, 1934, net income was $132,000, or 24 cents a share, against net of $331,000, or 75 cents a share, for the preceding year. In 1931 net income was $1,058,000, against $954,000 for 1930.

Current position on Jan. 31, 1934, was satisfactory. Funded debt, due May 1, 1947, totaled $6,827,500. There are outstanding 7,000 shares of 6 per cent $100 par preferred and 374,333 shares of $10 par common. Preferred dividends have been paid regularly, but nothing is being paid on the common.

Hudson and Manhattan Railroad.

Investors' Guide: What is your opinion of Hudson and Manhattan Railroad adjustment 5s, due 1957?—H. H. J.

Answer: These bonds are secured by mortgage, but are subject to heavy prior liens. Although earnings applicable to this issue were well in excess of charges from 1925 through 1929, they have since followed a steadily downward trend. For the first eight months of 1934, for instance, the issuer earned only 93 per cent of charges, whereas 99 per cent of charges was earned in the corresponding 1933 period.

Hudson and Manhattan Railroad company operates a rapid transit service between the Jersey City-Newark areas of New Jersey and the heart of the financial, shopping, and theatrical districts of New York City. Some of the factors responsible for unfavorable earnings are restricted trafic due to unemployment, bus competition and lower returns on real estate investments.

Interest on the adjustment 5s is payable only out of earnings. If it is not paid on the due date, the unpaid portion accumulates. Lack of fixed interest provision, depressed earnings and junior lien position make the adjustment bonds more a speculation than an investment.

Hogs Decline 10 to 25 Cents; Poorer Grades Flood Market

Hog prices sagged 10 to 25 cents after a slow and unsatisfactory opening yesterday. Top grades of well fattened butchers were scarce and these showed the least weakness, while pressure was brought to bear on the growing number of unfinished lights in the receipts.

Many thousands of hogs coming on the markets now are averaging less than 180 pounds which another thirty to sixty days on full corn feed would finish out in good shape.

Only a handful of selected 140 to 170 pound lights and a scattering of prime medium weight butchers held steady with Thursday on the opening rounds of yesterday's session, the bulk of the supply of all kinds going into the later trade at the decline.

Prime Butchers at $8.35.

Prime cornfed 225 to 300 pound butchers cost packers a top of $8.35, of which $2.25 was processing tax to the federal government and $6.10 the price paid farmers on the market. Of the $7.60 to $8.25 bulk, farmers obtained $5.35 to $6. The general average cost of packers' droves, tax included, amounted to $7.95, the first time their average costs have been below the $8 line in eight weeks.

Further strength was found in the lamb trade yesterday, with prices at the highest level of the week. The top selected natives to city butchers at $6.85 equaled the highest mark in the trade since Sept. 24. Upwards to $6.75 was paid by all interests for both natives and westerns, while the buck lambs sold largely at $5.75 and under and the cull natives at $5 and less.

Feeding Lambs $5 to $6.10.

Desirable black faced feeding lambs are quoted upwards to $6.10, but the bulk of the supply consists of stock of medium quality that is selling at $5 to $5.50. Commoner kinds range down to $4 and some inferior lights are bought as low as $3.

The meager supply of cattle in the pens yesterday brought strong prices, the trade being a cleanup affair as usual on Friday. Nothing strictly choice arrived, the best offered selling at $9.35, while the bulk of the steers cashed within a range of $5 to $8.50. Inferior light grassy steers sold down to $3 and occasionally for less. Fair to good beef cows ranged from $2.85 to $4 and some smooth cornfeds sold higher. Calves sold downwards from $7.50.

SEARS-ROEBUCK SALES HIGHEST FOR THIS YEAR

Month's Total Is 18.6% Over September, '33.

The business of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in September represented the best monthly volume since December, last year, when the holiday trade was at its peak, according to the sales report of the company issued yesterday. The report covers the period from Sept. 11 to Oct. 8, the ninth period of the firm's fiscal year. Actual sales were $31,201,216, an increase of $4,889,478, or 18.6 per cent, over the comparable weeks of 1933.

In the last four years the company's sales volume has run above $30,000,000 in only two previous months. That was in December, last year, and December, 1931. The report follows by a few days the monthly sales statement of Montgomery Ward & Co., which also reported a big increase for the month.

Farmers Increase Buying.

The expansion reported by the mail order and chain store firms is credited in a large measure to the increased mail order business resulting from the heavy cash payments made by the government under its various relief schemes in the agricultural regions. This is corroborated by the reserve board's index on department store sales, which shows more than a seasonal decline during September.

The September business done by Sears-Roebuck was $7,591,281 ahead of the preceding four weeks. Last month's business lifted volume for the first nine monthly periods of 1934 to $215,734,767, which represents an expansion of $38,668,243, or 21.8 per cent, over the $177,066,524 volume in the corresponding period of 1933.

Department Store Sales Sag.

The federal reserve board's preliminary figures for September on department store sales showed an index of 76 for the month, compared with 79 in August and 72 in July. The index makes allowances for the number of business days. The 1923-'25 average is used as par in compiling the index. Compared with September, 1933, sales last month were 4 per cent higher.

The aggregate for the first nine months was 13 per cent above 1933. The largest increases reported last month over 1933 were made in the Dallas, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Atlanta districts. Declines were shown in the Boston, Philadelphia, New York, and San Francisco reserve districts.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Spot butter and egg prices were generally unchanged. Owing to the holiday receipts were not reported. Live hens dropped ½ to 1 cent and leghorn hens ½ cent while springs were unchanged to ½ cent higher. Receipts, 3 cars and 43 trucks. Potatoes, about steady. Receipts, 61 cars with 230 cars on team track.

DOLLAR DROPS ABROAD ON INFLATION TALK; SHORT SELLING HEAVY

New York, Oct. 12.—[Special.]—Short traders, taking advantage of the new talk about inflation in the United States, today drove the dollar down in London. The seasonal trade demand for dollars was overwhelmed by the sales, with the result that the dollar steadily depreciated from an opening of $4.92½ to the pound to a close of $4.94½. On the rebound the dollar recovered only three-eighths of a cent.

In Paris where the belief persists that further devaluation now is inevitable here, the dollar dropped 8¾ centimes to close at 14.9775 [6.676 cents to the franc], as compared with yesterday's close of 15.065 [6.637 cents].

The price of bar gold in London halted in its upward trend and declined 2 pence to 143 shillings 1 penny [$35.23] a fine ounce. But the demand was so keen for the small offering of gold valued at £181,000 [$891,425] that buyers paid a premium of 21 pence over the dollar and 11 pence over the franc for the consignment. The price of silver eased 1-16 penny to 24 7-16 pence an ounce and the offerings exceeded the demand.

The gold movement at the port of New York for the week ended Oct. 10, as reported by the federal reserve bank, showed imports of $1,855,000 and exports of $1,005,000. Monetary stocks held under earmark for foreign account increased $10,000.

BURNHAM

OFFERS OPPORTUNITIES FOUND ONLY AT BURNHAM'S.

When you visit Burnham's you'll understand why more girls enroll in this school than in any other, and you'll be amazed at the unexpected and exclusive advantages which our 63 year record of turning out the best operators neables us to pass on to you —such as positions on ocean liners, positions with the best shops which DEMAND Burnham graduates, the opportunity of earning while learning, free tools, unlimited practice on living models, easy terms, and many other advantages.

Once explained, you'll see how Burnham teaching methods will enable you to master Beauty Culture quicker, easier, and better—why these methods develop the type of operator shop owners want.

If you ACT now you can arrange to pay for most of your tuition after you graduate. Call, phone, or write for FREE BEAUTY BOOK.
